ORANGEVILLE POSTOFFICE.—From the annual report of Postmaster General Haggert we learn that the gross postal revenue of this town last year was $4968.18; number of money orders issued, 1408; total amount of money orders issued, $15,927.61; commission received from public, $120.12; amount of money orders paid, $15,042.88; compensation paid to postmaster on money order business, $43.61; compensation paid to postmaster on savings bank business, $28.82; salary of postmaster $1230; forward allowance $72.

A SHOWER OF BRICK.—About ten minutes past seven o'clock on Tuesday morning Contractor James Armstrong had a pretty narrow escape from instant death. He was engaged to repair the walls of the Ketchum block and several of his men were taking bricks off the top of the wall. Mr. Armstrong was walking on the sidewalk three stories below when several bricks fell and struck him on the shoulder, fracturing his collar-bone and otherwise injuring him. Dr. Lewis, who was hastily summoned, dressed his wounds, but it will be some time before he will be around again.

IT SHOULD BE STOPPED.—The practice of relieving drunken men of watches, money, etc., is carried to an alarming extent in Orangeville and the sooner it is stopped the better for the respectability of the town. Hardly a week goes by without some unfortunate drunk being robbed of whatever he happens to have about his clothes. This week Contractor McKay of Toronto visited Orangeville and he will likely remember his visit for some time to come. He took an "eye-opener" in one of our hotels and then went to sleep. While he was enjoying a snooze a sneak-thief relieved him of $30 or $40.

OUR BAND.—Mr. John Presley has resigned his position as bandmaster of the Citizens' band, and at present it looks as if the town will be without a band. For the past couple of years the boys have not pulled very well together and now nearly all the members have given up the musical ghost. Our sister town, Brampton, is without a band, the mechanics' having suspended a couple of weeks ago. It is to be regretted if Orangeville is left without a band, but we hope some satisfactory arrangements will be made in the near future. Shelburne has a first class band and the citizens of that place appreciate it.

WEDDING BELLS.—A very pleasing event occured last evening at 8 o'clock at the residence of Mr. Joseph Meredith, east Broadway, the occasion being the marriage of his eldest daughter, Maria, to Mr. William Shirley, late of Indiana. The Rev. A. Henderson performed the ceremony, in the presence of a few intimate friends. The bride, who was elegantly attired in a gown of nile green silk, was assisted by her sister, Miss Ida L. Meredith. The groom was supported by Mr. F. King. A handsome array of valuable presents testified strongly of the esteem in which the young bride is held by her many acquaintances. We wish Mr. and Mrs. Shirley every prosperity and happiness.

O. L. C. ENTERTAINMENT.—Last Thursday evening a meeting was held in the council chamber for the purpose of organizing the Dufferin lacrosse club for the present year. The attendance was fair and considerable enthusiasm was displayed. An effort will be made to enter the club in the district instead of the Northwestern as at present. The following are the newly-elected officers: Mayor W. H. Walsh, hon-vice-pres.; Registrar W. McKim, hon-vice-pres.; Jesse Kennedy, pres.; John Aiken, 1st vice-pres.; J. H. Hughes, 2nd vice-pres.; J. C. Henry, secy.; Walter Kearns, treas.; Edgar Bowles, capt.; John Aiken, field capt.; H. Gillespie, W. Henry, S. Hurch, T. Henry and B. McIlwire, Executive committee; H. Gillespie, J. Ketchum and W. Kearns, delegates to C. L. A. convention.

SANDY SHUNTED.—Chief Shields was the complainant in a case that was ventilated in the police court on Monday afternoon, P. M. Patullo and Squire McKinnon were on the bench and discharged their not very onerous duties in their usual rapid manner. Sandy McAllister, who has been before the look on more than one occasion, was charged with indecent exposure. The offence took place on Broadway one day last week. When McAllister was asked what he had to say to the charge he said he could not remember anything about it. The chief's evidence was very unfavorable to Sandy, and the the magistrates thought the best thing was to get the accused out of town. With that intention in view a fine of $5 and costs was imposed and if Sandy is in town after Saturday the decree will be enforced. He promised to leave town.

LIQUOR-SELLING CASE DISMISSED.—The charge preferred against Edward Leeson, proprietor of the Globe hotel, by James Robertson for selling liquor without a license occupied the attention of Magistrates Patullo and Tolton at Saturday's police court. The case was called a few days previous, but the complainant did not put in an appearance so a warrant was issued for his arrest. It was handed to Constable Hubbard and on Saturday he found Robertson and brought him to court. Crown Attorney Myers conducted the case for the prosecution and A. A. Hughson represented Leeson. Robertson was the first witness and swore that he drank liquor in the house on the day mentioned in the summons. Three of Leeson's witnesses swore that they had been around the house all day and had not seen any liquor, and Mr. Leeson himself swore that no liquor had been sold. He said he ejected Robertson from the house and when the latter returned five or six hours later he was very drunk; also that he had laid the information for spite. The magistrates reserved their decision until Tuesday, when they decided in favor of Leeson.

One of these competitions is now in progress and closes on April 25th. In addition to the large amount given in cash on their general prize list, they offer as an extra inducement the following special cash prizes: During the weeks ending April 11th and 18th they offer daily cash prizes of $10, and a weekly cash prize of $50 for the first named week, and $100 for the latter. These exceedingly generous prizes are in addition to the general prize list, and the person who gets one of the special rewards may also get a large prize in the general list. The Collingwood Bulletin tells a story that a Presbyterian minister's wife in a village near there got a new girl from the country. The first Sunday the mistress said that she could go in their seat, and when the girl went to church she walked composedly right up to the pulpit, and to the utter amazement of the congregation sat down on the pulpit sofa.

One day lately the 4 year old child of Mr. Thomas Wood, carter, of Orillia, swallowed three cents. Mr Wood, observing the distress of the child, succeeded in getting one of the coppers out of its throat. The other two had passed beyond recovering. They tore the throat severely and the child is still suffering distressingly from the mishap. It is hoped its life may be preserved, however.

A man in February last upset himself and a pailful of fish out of his cutter into the ditch near Robert Sproule's. He got in again but forgot the fish, where it sank deep into the snow, and was frozen over. As every succeeding thaw brought one of the fish to the surface it was promptly traded by a wide-awake individual at a hotel for beer. The last one was disposed of on Tuesday evening. —Cardwell Sentinel.

The Scotch, as well as Canadians, delight to be humbugged as the following will show: A man is charged in Dundee, Scotland, with a Bible guessing fraud. He advertised, offering prizes to persons who counted the words in the first two chapters of Joshua. Competitors were to send in one shilling, and in this way he received £1,200 sterling ($6,000). He paid out in prize money less than the equivalent of $4. The sheriff who arrested him said he did not think there were so many fools in Scotland.

The attention of the officers of the Finance Department has been called to a practice which is being indulged in by some smart individuals in Western Ontario. Dominion bills have been mutilated by scissoring out certain portions of one dollar bills and then, by carefully pasting the pieces together, an entirely new bill has been made. Thus, five single dollar bills have been converted into six bills and the Government cheated to the extent of $1 in six. The Assistant Receiver General at Toronto has been requested to communicate with the different banks on the subject, and it is probable that prompt steps will be taken to stop the practice.

The census enumerators are to be paid so much per head of the population registered instead of a stated salary. The fourteen chief census officers will receive $5 per day and travelling expenses as long as the work lasts in their districts, supposedly from a month to five weeks. The city commissioners will each received a gratuity of $50, and $4 for every 100 families registered. The enumerators, the men who go from house to house, will receive three cents for each head from the baby up to the head of family registered, and 3 cents for every death recorded that occurred in 1891 up to the time of taking the census. County enumerators will receive in addition 15 cents for every farm recorded, and 20 cents for every industrial establishment. They will be paid an aggregate sum after the work is over. The law provides on the other hand that the enumerators pay shall not exceed $3 a day. This means that if any enumerator should record more than 9,000 names in a month, 9,000 making $3 a day for a month, he would not receive any further pecuniary benefit beyond the day's pay. By paying per head though, the work will be pushed more rapidly.

MEN WHO ARE NOT IN LOVE.

"I would give anything in the world to know whether he is in earnest or not," is the thought that passes through the minds of most young girls when they have received a good many calls from some handsome beau ideal who seems to just suit their fancy.

"But how can I ever find out?" they cry, despairingly. "Oh, for some magic glass that would mirror his heart and show me what is written on its tablet!"

Let me tell you, my dear, how to discern whether a young man is really attracted toward you or not. Think over these ideas for yourselves.

When a young man has to be urged to call on you—when you have to make opportunities to see him, or find excuses to write to him, depend upon it, you are having your trouble for your pains, for believe me, he's not particularly attracted toward you.—

HE'S NOT IN LOVE.

If he calls irregularly, and not often, he is not troubling himself about whether or not any one else may step in and win you from him. Love always makes a man fearful that he may by any slip of destiny lose his treasure, and he never feels safe until he has won the object of his adoration. It is truly said that love makes a man bashful and unassuming in his manner.

When a man is eager to have you invite your neighbor's pretty daughters to help entertain him when he calls, he is not in love with you, for the eyes of a lover are shut to all smiles and glances but those of her whom he has called to see.

If you are twenty five years old, and he is thrown in contact with young girls, and you see his eyes restlessly wandering toward the girl of sixteen summers, you may know then at once that however and witty you may be, he is not for you.

For even should you be unfortunate enough to marry him, you would not be blessed with that heavenly bliss which wedded people should enjoy—the love of each other.

A GENTLEMAN SHOULD DO THE WOOING, for, though he may come to see a girl once or twice, who plainly shows "She'd like to have him," he never comes the third time, for correctly it has been said that—

When a woman throws herself at a man's head,
She'll soon find herself at his feet."

For if a girl has to make advances, the man is not in love.

When a man is remiss in his attentions, he is not in love.

When he neglects to perform any little act of kindness that falls in his way, he is not in love.

When he puts off his engagements, he is not in love. Of course, in urgent cases, he may not be able to help it, but if it is at all possible, word should always be sent, or he can not be called in love with you. As Rosalind says in "As You Like It,"

"The man who comes one minute late is not in love."

A young man who is continually asking to be introduced to your young lady friends is not satisfied with you, for he is not in love; nor is he in love who always brings a marriageable gentleman companion with him when calling upon you, for when real love enters his heart he is jealous, to a certain extent, of all attentions bestowed upon others. He wishes to make sure of obtaining you, and will not knowingly throw others in your way if he really cares for you.

Another, and an excellent plan of revealing the all important secret which some do not even dare own to themselves, is through his correspondence when he is away from you. As a general rule, when lovers are separated, he should come often. Either they seem to find consolation in writing letters long and often.

He may send you one every a long time, and then write every or four days. This, course, is because he is busy. Every week, then—we know they are dictated, and that he don't come at all; or, little he has gently broken your heart slight—yes, very slight—friendship which he had sworn and which you believed was love.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE election of Mr. Featherstone, Reformer, in Peel is to be protested and it is altogether likely he will be asked to step down and out.

RUMORS of election protests galore are floating around Osgoode Hall, but so far none have been put in. By waiting to the last day petitioners hope to freeze out any cross-petitions which otherwise might be put in as an offset, and they are consequently hanging back. —Telegram.

IT would be an excellent idea for the R. & B. committee to have the mud and dirt removed from Broadway. Three years ago similar work was done and for months this great thoroughfare presented a neat and clean appearance. The cost of such work would be comparatively small to the great good which would result. Will they do it?

THE beautiful spring weather struck this part of the country several days ago, but, so far as we know, the local board of health has not held a single meeting this year. Now is the time people should begin to clean up their premises. The members of the board of health are also members of the town council, and we think it is about time they were making a move in this very important matter.

AMARANTH COUNCIL.

The Amaranth council met at the town hall, Laurel, on Saturday, April 4th, pursuant to adjournment. All the members present; the Reeve in the chair. Minutes of previous meeting read and adopted. Each member made oath as directed by law as member of Court of Revision on drainage by-law, No. 238.

SHELBURNE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Reeve Jelly has been appointed to accompany the refund bonus delegation to Ottawa.

The square timber which has been lying at the C. P. R. station yard here was shipped away this week.

Miss McKinnon, 1st assistant in Shelburne public school, remains in that position till summer holidays.

On Thursday last Mr. Wm I. Silk, of Shelburne, was fined $1 and costs, for not procuring a tag for his dog.

Mr. Alex. McKendry, of the 4th line, Melancthon, father of Mrs. Geo. Ostrander, of Shelburne, departed this life on Thursday last, April 2nd, aged 68 years. The funeral took place on Saturday.

Our neighborhood says a Whitfield correspondent, was not a little surprised last week when it was told that Mr. Geo. Winslow, stepson of Mr Dean, and Miss Annie Reburn, eldest daughter of Mr. R. J. Reburn, had run away and got married without the parents knowing anything about it.

Mr. John Small, who only a short time ago moved to Shelburne from Arthur, lost a horse on Saturday last, through exhaustion, caused by the horse being stuck in a mud hole filled with water for an hour or two, in a bush west of here in which they were working.

A magistrate in Orillia, finding that a witness would persist in prevaricating and telling lies, ordered the culprit to be "handcuffed and tomtommed around the village as a liar." What a picnic there would be in some of our towns and cities if many of the witnesses who testify at election trials, and on whiskey selling and division court cases, were treated in such a summary manner. There would be a pretty extensive tomtomming we fancy.

Messrs. W. G. Henderson, John Henderson and Samuel McCutcheon, of Whitfield; Wm. Barker, of Auguston; Samuel Graham, of Mansfield; and Charlie Wilson, of Shelburne, started on Tuesday for Manitoba. The Messrs. Henderson took six horses, Mr. McCutcheon nine horses, and Mr. Barker a span of horses. Messrs. Henderson and McCutcheon intend coming back in a month or two. Mr. W. R. White, of Whittington, left by the same train with 10 horses. Mr. James Noble, of Singhampton, also shipped his effects at this station.

"SHE COMETH NOT," HE SAID.

An Old Gentleman with Whom Cupid is not Dealing Kindly.

John Moon is an old bachelor of Oshawa, but he is the centre of attraction at the Rossin House to-day. The members of the legislature sink into insignificance compared with him and it is a matter of question if the advent of the Prince of Wales would create a greater sensation. He has hired the whole first flat of the Rossin bedrooms, parlors, waiting rooms, corridors, and all for the girl who will never come.

He advertised for a wife in the Chicago and Buffalo papers and got a reply from an alleged young woman stating that she would be at the Union Station some day this week, and he was to meet her.

The most pathetic figure in the Union station is this old man with his big hands in white kid gloves and a calla lily which some wag pinned on his lapel—standing grinning at every woman who gets off the train, expecting that one of them will throw her arms around his neck.

With the quick instinct of women, although he has only been here five days, every girl from King street to the Union Station, knows him and the peeping and giggling behind half drawn curtains would fill a lake.

He meets every train wearing a six dollar overcoat, a dollar hat and white gloves, and he goes home every night hoping for the best to morrow.—Toronto Telegram.

Supposing.

Supposing you suffer from some disease. Suppose it is dyspepsia or biliousness or constipation or bad blood. Suppose you learn that Burdock Blood Bitters has cured thousands of cases of these and similar complaints. Don't you suppose you ought to try it? It cannot harm you and in nine cases out of ten it cures.

At a wedding in Arcadia, Fla., the other day the bride was married to her ninth husband, and four of her former husbands were present at the ceremony to sympathize with the ninth victim.

The A. O. U. W. hall in the Jackson block, which was damaged by fire two weeks ago, is at present undergoing repairs.

A representative of that excellent little morning journal, the Toronto World, was in town this week canvassing for his paper.

Through the kindness of Mr. John Lovell, the veteran publisher of Montreal, we have received a historic report of census of Montreal.

Our rural correspondents are becoming dilatory about sending us in the news. We would like to hear from them as often as possible.

The Dufferin license commissioners will meet at the court house, Orangeville, at 10 a. m. on Friday, the 24th, to grant licenses for the current year.

The bad little boy and his catapult are playing hob with the globes of the street lamps, several of which have been broken. Chief Shields is on the lookout.

The estate of Thos. Bird, formerly proprietor of the Dominion hotel, Grand Valley, will pay a dividend of 1 cent on the dollar. His liabilities amounted to $1859.

The Horning's Mills Fishing and Game company was incorporated by the local legislature on Saturday. The company has a capital of $6000 in twenty shares of $300 each.

The four census enumerators for this town are getting through their work as rapidly as possible, but it will be some time before they can complete their labors. They say it is hard work.

Mr. Samuel Wallace of this town dropped in last week and renewed his subscription to Dufferin's reliable paper. Mr. Wallace has been taking THE SUN since its first issue, thirty one years ago.

Merchants, if you want purchasers for your spring and summer goods send them an invitation, and the best way of doing that is by advertising in THE SUN, the oldest and most respected journal in the county.

A contemporary claims that Samson was the first man to advertise. He took two solid columns to demonstrate his strength and several thousand people "tumbled" to the scheme at once. He brought down the house.

Joe Agnew appeared before Cadi Pattullo last week, charged with being drunk and disorderly. Joe promised to leave town and if he makes his appearance here again for a time he will be sent up to "Castle" Sutherland for six months.

Mr. W. J. Johnston was married to Miss Maggie Gahan on Tuesday evening, the 7th inst. The ceremony was performed at the residence of Mr. John Gahan, First avenue, brother of the bride, by Rev. J. L. Gilmour. Mr. Johnston left next morning for Wingham, where it is said they will reside.

ONE WANTED HERE.—Captain Robb, the new appointed truant officer, is becoming a terror to the players of the scholars' favorite game of "hookey." —Stratford Herald. A truant officer would have plenty of work to do in Orangeville.

PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY.—W. C. Adair, having rented the photographic business of Gale & Co., south side of Broadway, will show something new and novel in photography in a few days. Don't fail to call and see samples of his work before sitting elsewhere.

NEW UNDERTAKER.—Messrs. Wm. Clark & Son, late of Caledon, have purchased the undertaking business of Mr. T. T. King, one door west of the post-office. The new firm will conduct the business in first class style, and any orders entrusted to them will receive prompt attention. Their announcement appears in another column of this issue.

GONE.—John W. Young, who for several months past conducted a fruit store in town, has shaken the mud of Orangeville from his feet. A few days ago he boarded a south-bound train and scarcely any tidings have been heard of him since. A number of creditors mourn his departure and Bailiff McQuarrie is in possession of his store. His liabilities are said to be $1,200.

[illegible] steel. When this is accomplished, the new bridge at the Forks completed and the road ballasted, it will be practically a new railroad.—Brampton Banner.

AT REST.—The many friends of Mrs. Margaret Watson, relict of the late James Watson, will hear with regret of her death, which occurred on Sunday afternoon at her residence, Bythia street, after a long and painful illness, which was borne with Christian patience. The deceased was well-known and highly esteemed in both religious and social circles. She was 66 years old. The funeral took place to the Forest Lawn cemetery on Tuesday and was largely attended.

ABOUT A SAW.—A couple of years ago Jimmy Robertson, the little straight-backed Scotchman, took a cross-cut saw from the Globe hotel and disposed of it to Mr. Joseph Cornelius. The saw was worth about $6, but Jimmy knocked it down for $1.50. On Monday Mr. M. Lesson procured a search-warrant and placed it in Constable Hubbard's hands for execution and the cop soon had the saw in his possession. It is said that Mr. Cornelius, who believed Robertson owned the saw, will have Jimmy arrested on a charge of fraud.

ORANGEVILLE POSTOFFICE.—From the annual report of Postmaster General Haggart we learn that the gross postal revenue of this town last year was $4968.18; number of money orders issued, 1408; total amount of money orders issued, $15,927.61; commission received from public, $120.14; amount of money orders paid, $15,042.88; compensation paid to postmaster on money order business, $43.61; compensation paid to postmaster on savings bank business, $28 82; salary of postmaster $1230; forward allowance $72.

A SHOWER OF BRICK.—About ten minutes past seven o'clock on Tuesday morning Contractor James Armstrong had a pretty narrow escape from instant death. He was engaged to repair the walls of the Ketchum block and several of his men were taking bricks off the top of the wall. Mr. Armstrong was walking on the sidewalk three stories below when several bricks fell and struck him on the shoulder, fracturing his collar-bone and otherwise injuring him. Dr. Lewis, who was hastily summoned, dressed his wounds, but it will be some time before he will be around again.

IT SHOULD BE STOPPED.—The practice of relieving drunken men of watches, money, etc., is carried to an alarming extent in Orangeville and the sooner it is stopped the better for the respectability of the town. Hardly a week goes by without some unfortunate drunk being robbed of whatever he happens to have about his clothes. This week Contractor McKay of Toronto visited Orangeville and he will likely remember his visit for some time to come. He took an "eye-opener" in one of our hotels and then went to sleep. While he was enjoying a snooze a sneak-thief relieved him of $30 or $40.

OUR BAND.—Mr. John Presley has resigned his position as bandmaster of the Citizens' band, and at present it looks as if the town will be without a band. For the past couple of years the boys have not pulled very well together and now nearly all the members have given up the musical ghost. Our sister town, Brampton, is without a band, the mechanics' having suspended a couple of weeks ago. It is to be regretted if Orangeville is left without a band, but we hope some satisfactory arrangements will be made in the near future. Shelburne has a first class band and the citizens of that place appreciate it.

WEDDING BELLS.—A very pleasing event occured last evening at 8 o'clock at the residence of Mr. Joseph Meredith, east Broadway, the occasion being the marriage of his eldest daughter, Maria, to Mr. William Shirley, late of Indiana. The Rev. A. Henderson performed the ceremony, in the presence of a few intimate friends. The bride, who was elegantly attired in a gown of nile green silk, was assisted by her sister, Miss Ida L. Meredith. The groom was supported by Mr. F. King. A handsome array of valuable presents testified strongly of the esteem in which the young bride is held by her many acquaintances. We wish Mr. and Mrs. Shirley every prosperity and happiness.

[illegible] offence took place on Broadway one day last week. When McAlister was asked what he had to say to the charge he said he could not remember anything about it. The chief's evidence was very unfavorable to Sandy, and the the magistrates thought the best thing was to get the accused out of town. With that intention in view a fine of $5 and costs was imposed and if Sandy is in town after Saturday the decree will be enforced. He promised to leave town.

LIQUOR-SELLING CASE DISMISSED.—The charge preferred against Edward Lesson, proprietor of the Globe hotel, by James Robertson for selling liquor without a license occupied the attention of Magistrates Pattullo and Tolton at Saturday's police court. The case was called a few days previous, but the complainant did not put in an appearance so a warrant was issued for his arrest. It was handed to Constable Hubbard and on Saturday he found Robertson and brought him to court. Crown Attorney Myers conducted the case for the prosecution and A. A. Hughson represented Lesson. Robertson was the first witness and swore that he drank liquor in the house on the day mentioned in the summons. Three of Lesson's witnesses swore that they had been around the house all day and had not seen any liquor, and Mr. Lesson himself swore that no liquor had been sold. He said he ejected Robertson from the house and when the latter returned five or six hours later he was very drunk; also that he had laid the information for spite. The magistrates reserved their decision until Tuesday, when they decided in favor of Lesson.

OUR HOMES.—The publishers of Our Homes, a large, elegantly printed 32 page magazine, announce that in order to increase their circulation they are willing to devote their entire first year's profits to this end, and in order to do so, offer competitions in which they give cash rewards to those taking part. One of these competitions is now in progress and closes on April 25th. In addition to the large amount given in cash on their general prize list, they offer as an extra inducement the following special cash prizes: During the weeks ending April 11th and 18th they offer daily cash prizes of $10, and a weekly cash prize of $50 for the first named week, and $100 for the latter. For the week ending April 25th they offer daily cash prizes of $25, and a prize of $100 for the week. These exceedingly generous prizes are in addition to the general prize list, and the person who gets one of the special rewards may also get a large prize in the general list. No other magazine publishers have ever made such a liberal offer, and as the competition only remains open three more weeks you should avail yourself of the liberal offer at once. Send 10 cents in stamps for a sample copy of Our Homes and complete particulars of the competition. Address Our Homes Publishing Co., Brockville, Ont.

A few days ago Mr. Jamieson Ferguson spoke in forcible language of the filthy condition of the Woodstock opera hall. Of course it is not to be expected that there will be the convenience of the court house, but as his lordship remarked the authorities might sweep and scrub out some of the accumulations of years.

A citizen called at the Customs house last week to pay duty on a keg of syrup that had been smuggled in here eight years ago. The gentleman for whom was it was smuggled has lately been converted at the Salvation Army meetings, and his religion appears to be producing some practical results.—Wallaceburg Record.

The Collingwood Bulletin tells a story that a Presbyterian minister's wife in a village near there got a new girl from the country. The first Sunday the minister said that she could go in their seat, and when the girl went to church she walked composedly right up to the pulpit, and to the utter amusement of the congregation sat down on the pulpit sofa.

One day lately the 4 year old child of Mr. Thomas Wood, carter, of Orillia, swallowed three cents. Mr Wood, observing the distress of the child, succeeded in getting one of the coppers out of its throat. The other two had passed beyond recovering. They tore the throat severely and the child is still suffering distressingly from the mishap. It is hoped its life may be preserved, however.

A man in February last upset himself and a pailful of fish out of his cutter into the ditch near Robert Sproule's. He got in again but forgot the fish, where it sunk deep into the snow, and was frozen over. As every succeeding thaw brought one of the fish to the surface it was promptly traded by a wide-awake individual at a hotel for beer. The last one was disposed of on Tuesday evening. —Cardwell Sentinel.

The Scotch, as well as Canadians, delight to be humbugged as the following will show: A man is charged in Dundee, Scotland, with a Bible-guessing fraud. He advertised, offering prizes to persons who counted the words in the first two chapters of Joshua. Competitors were to send in one shilling, and in this way he received £1,200 sterling ($6,000). He paid out in prize money less than the equivalent of $4. The sheriff who arrested him said he did not think there were so many fools in Scotland.

The attention of the officers of the Finance Department has been called to a practice which is being indulged in by some smart individuals in Western Ontario. Dominion bills have been mutilated by scissoring out certain portions of one dollar bills and then, by carefully pasting the pieces together, an entirely new bill has been made. Thus, five single dollar bills have been converted into six bills and the Government cheated to the extent of $1 in six. The Assistant Receiver General at Toronto has been requested to communicate with the different banks on the subject, and it is probable that prompt steps will be taken to stop the practice.

The census enumerators are to be paid so much per head of the population registered instead of a stated salary. The fourteen chief census officers will receive $5 per day and travelling expenses as long as the work lasts in their district, supposedly from a month to five weeks. The city commissioners will each received a gratuity of $50, and $4 for every 100 families registered. The enumerators, the men who go from house to house, will receive three cents for each head from the baby up to the head of family registered, and 2 cents for every death recorded that occurred in 1891 up to the time of taking the census. County enumerators will receive in addition 15 cents for every farm record ed, and 20 cents for every industrial establishment. They will be paid an aggregate sum after the work is over. The law provides on the other hand that the enumerators pay shall not exceed $3 a day. This means that if any enumerator should record more than 9,000 names in a month, 9,000 making $3 a day for a month, he would not receive any further pecuniary benefit beyond the day's pay. By paying per head though, the work will be pushed more rapidly.

MEN WHO ARE NOT IN LOVE.

"I would give anything in the world to know whether he is in earnest or not," is the thought that passes through the minds of most young girls when they have received a good many calls from some handsome young idiot who seems to just suit their fancy.

"But how can I ever find out?" they cry, despairingly. "Oh, for some magic glass that would mirror his heart and show me what is written on its tablet!"

Let me tell you, my dear, how to discern whether a young man is really attracted toward you or not. Think over these ideas for yourselves.

When a young man has to be urged to call on you—when you have to make opportunities to see him, or find excuses to write to him, depend upon it, you are having your trouble for your pains, for believe me, he's not particularly attracted toward you—

HE'S NOT IN LOVE.

If he calls irregularly, and not often, he is not troubling himself about whether or not any one else may step in and win you from him. Love always makes a man fearful that he may by any slip of destiny lose his treasure, and he never feels safe until he has won the object of his adoration. It is truly said that love makes a man bashful and unassuming in his manner.

When a man is eager to have you invite your neighbor's pretty daughters to help entertain him when he calls, he is not in love with you, for the eyes of a lover are shut to all smiles and glances but those of her whom he has called to see.

If you are twenty five years old, and he is thrown in contact with young girls, and you see his eyes restlessly wandering toward the girl of sixteen summers, you may know then at once that however and witty you may be, he is not for you.

For even should you be unfortunate enough to marry him, you would not be blessed with that heavenly bliss which wedded people should enjoy—the love of each other.

A GENTLEMAN SHOULD DO THE WOOING,

for, though he may come to see a girl once or twice, who plainly shows "She'd like to have him," he never comes the third time, for correctly it has been said that—

"When a woman throws herself at a man's head,
She'll soon find herself at his feet."

For if a girl has to make advances, the man is not in love.

When a man is remiss in his attentions, he is not in love.

When he neglects to perform any little act of kindness that falls in his way, he is not in love.

When he puts off his engagements, he is not in love. Of course, in urgent cases, he may not be able to help it, but if it is at all possible, word should always be sent, or he can not be called in love with you. As Rosalind says in "As You Like It."

"The man who comes one minute late is not in love."

A young man who is continually asking to be introduced to your young lady friends is not satisfied with you, for he is not in love; for if he is love she always brings a marriageable gentleman companion with him when calling upon you, for when real love enters his heart he is jealous, to a certain extent, of all attentions bestowed upon others. He wishes to make sure of obtaining you, and will not knowingly throw others in your way if he really cares for you.

Another, and an excellent plan of revealing the all important secret which some do not even dare own to themselves, is through his correspondence when he is away from you. As a general rule, when lovers are separated, he should write often; [illegible] seem to find consolation in writing letters long and often.

He may send you one every a long time, and then write every or four days. This, however, [illegible] because he is busy. HENRY CARSON, WILLIAM GLOVER, } Auditors.

To the Reeve and Council of the township of Mono, in council assembled:

GENTLEMEN,—We, the undersigned Auditors of the Township of Mono, beg to report that we have examined the Treasurer's books and take pleasure in reporting that they are well kept, neat and accurate, and would again record our entire confidence in the Treasurer of this municipality. The financial position of the Township is very satisfactory, as the accounts will show, and our forecast of a year ago has been verified. The liabilities of the Township are wiped out and a cash asset of one hundred and eighty-seven dollars to our credit taken in place; and but for the large amount of money required to repair roads and replace bridges washed away by the flood of June 5th the rate for 1890 would have been much lower than for any year in the past twenty one. All of which is respectfully submitted.

HENRY CARSON, WILLIAM GLOVER, } Auditors.

HENRY CARSON, WILLIAM GLOVER, } Auditors.

To the Reeve and Council of the township of Mono, in council assembled:

GENTLEMEN,—We, the undersigned Auditors of the Township of Mono, beg to report that we have examined the Treasurer's books and take pleasure in reporting that they are well kept, neat and accurate, and would again record our entire confidence in the Treasurer of this municipality. The financial position of the Township is very satisfactory, as the accounts will show, and our forecast of a year ago has been verified. The liabilities of the Township are wiped out and a cash asset of one hundred and eighty-seven dollars to our credit takes its place; and but for the large amount of money required to repair roads and replace bridges washed away by the flood of June 5th the rate for 1890 would have been much lower than for any year in the past twenty one. All of which is respectfully submitted.

HENRY CARSON,
WILLIAM GLOVER, } Auditors.

To the Reeve and Council of the township of Mono, in council assembled:

GENTLEMEN,—We, the undersigned Auditors of the Township of Mono, beg to report that we have examined the Treasurer's books and take pleasure in reporting that they are well kept, neat and accurate, and would again record our entire confidence in the Treasurer of this municipality. The financial position of the Township is very satisfactory, as the accounts will show, and our forecast of a year ago has been verified. The liabilities of the Township are wiped out and a cash asset of one hundred and eighty-seven dollars to our credit takes its place; and but for the large ammount of money required to repair roads and replace bridges washed away by the flood of June 5th the rate for 1890 would have been much lower than for any year in the past twenty one. All of which is respectfully submitted.

A PEARL THAT IS LOST IN THE SEA.

Why mourn for the hours that have vanished,
Why grieve for the things that are lost?
Why weep for the flowers of summer
That lie 'neath the cold winter's frost?
Can we make time stand still or turn backward,
Or revive the dead rose on the lea?
We might just as well try as go searching
For a pearl that is lost in the sea!

Why chase a dream that is faded?
Why look down the vista of years,
But to find a long buried sorrow
To open the wound with new tears?
It is over—forget it. As useless
(No matter how anxious we be)
To try to go back, all recover
A pearl that is lost in the sea!

A PEARL THAT IS LOST IN THE SEA.

Can we make time stand still or turn backward,
Or revive the dead rose on the tree?

(No matter how anxious we be)
To try to go back, to recover
A pearl that is lost in the sea!

Why burden to-day with regretting
What might have been, had we but known?
Why long for the much beloved music
After the sweet singer has flown?
Will all the regrets and longings
Avail against Fate's stern decree?
Ah, no—for the Past and its chances
Are as pearls that are lost in the sea!

Why waste precious moments in thinking
Of scenes that were beautiful then?
Why linger o'er graves that hold treasure
That ne'er will be with us again?
Why wish for our youth and its gladness
When from sorrow and care we are free?
'Tis gone from our grasp—gone forever,
As a pearl that is lost in the sea!

NEW ESSAY ON MAN.

Man that is born of woman is small potatoes and few in a hill. He rises up to-day and flourishes like a rag-weed, and to-morrow, or the next day, the undertaker hath him. He goeth forth in the morning warbling like a lark, and is knocked out in one round and two seconds.

In the midst of life he is in debt, and the tax collector pursues him wherever he goeth. The banister of life is full of splinters and he slideth down with considerable rapidity. He walketh forth in the bright sunlight to absorb ozone and meeteth the bank teller with a sight draft for $857.

He cometh home at eventide and meeteth the wheelbarrow in his path. It riseth up and smiteth him to the earthbound falleth upon him and runneth one of its kegs into his ear.

In the gentle springtime he putteth on his summer clothes, and a blizzard striketh him far from home and filleth him with cuss words and rheumatism. In the winter he putteth on winter trousers and a wasp that abideth exasperated. He startleth down into the cellar with an oleander cometh after him and smiteth upon him.

He buyeth a watch dog, and when he cometh home from the lodge the watch dog treeth him, and sitteth near him until day morn. He goeth to the horse show and betteth his money on the brown mare, and the bay gelding with a blaze face winneth.

He marrieth a red headed heiress with a wart on her nose, and the next day the parent ancestor goeth under with a fee, arrest and great liabilities, and cometh home to live with his beloved son in law.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES.

Corn starch makes the best paste for scrap books. Dissolve a small quantity in cold water, then cook it thoroughly. When cold it should be thin enough to apply with a brush. It will neither sour nor mold.

Keep your trees trimmed into proper shape from the beginning; it is better to trim than to trim.

When you prune a plant that is growing or seek growth; prune it when it is dormant and you add vigor to the plant when it starts again.

A good compost for pot plants or anything else can be made as follows. Skim off a scow of soda, mix with fine brush and sedge, let get dry, and turn the whole mass. Mix this well with some leaf mold, well decomposed manure (cow dung being best), one third sand. This compost will grow anything in the order of nature to perfection. If prepared in the store out of the reach of frost and stir occasionally. By spring it is in admirable order.

Why Not Treat?

WHY not treat such troubles as boils, pimples, blotches, sores, humors, eruptions, rashes, skin irritations, etc., with Burdock Blood Bitters. It is filled with virtue as a blood purifier and goes right to the right spot. It makes the skin bright and clear, while also invigorating the entire system.

NOT ALL MOONSHINE.

A Chart Which It May Be Worth Your While to Keep for Reference.

To all lovers of bright nights, who know the charm of field and highway when the mild luminary covers them with a net of silver; to all lovers of bright nights, who know the charm of lake and stream and open sea, when the mild luminary covers them with flakes and arrows and broad swaths of silver; to all lovers of the "grand air"—good at night as it is good by day; and, more especially to all lovers—

This journal commends the following

MOONLIGHT CHART, 1891.

EXPLANATION—The light shading indicates the amount of moonlight each night. January 4, February 3, March 3, April 1 and 30, May 30, etc., are the first days on which the moon rises after midnight; January 19, February 18, etc., are the first evenings when the new moon is visible; January 17, February 15, etc., are the first evenings when the moon sets after midnight; January 26, February 25, etc., are the last evenings when the moon rises during twilight.

A Strange Cure.

A certain brilliant woman who had come into a fortune on the death of her husband found the bacillus of literary ambition performing her system. Lacking originality she employed her acquirements as a linguist to the task of building up a translator's reputation.

Much to her disgust, all her efforts in this line were unavailing. Manuscript after manuscript was rejected by newspapers, book publishers and syndicates. She kept on, however, until her mind became unbalanced and she was taken to an insane asylum. Among her papers the physician in charge of the case found an English rendition of one of Guy de Maupassant's stories. He sent the manuscript to a syndicate. It was accepted. The doctor thereupon presented a printed copy of her translation to his patient. The effect was magical. Her old ambition returned, her mind resumed its normal condition and she has been discharged from the asylum—cured. Once in a while publishers do a good deed.

The Affectionate Wife.

A lady who had but lately been married, seeing her husband return after three days' absence, stole up secretly behind him and gave him a kiss.

The husband was angry, and told her that she had offended against all his notions of propriety.

"I am very sorry," she exclaimed, "I really didn't know it was you, my love!"

English Women and Society.

Mme. [illegible] asked of Mme. Mohl [illegible] but birth permission [illegible] said. "My dear," said Mme. [illegible] your friend is a man bring him [illegible] thinking twice about it, but if she [illegible] think well before you bring her, for of all the creatures God ever created none does spoil society like an English lady."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—These world-renowned remedies are confidently recommended to miners, navvies, and all who have to work underground, or where noxious atmospheres exist. The minute particles of coal or metal which permeate the air in such places tend to block up the lungs and air-tubes, giving rise to bronchitis, asthma and palpitation of the heart. In Holloway's remedies will be found a safe and easily used medicament, for the penetrating properties of the Ointment relieve the local congestions and the mildly laxative effects of the Pills cause the liver to act freely, and the breath to become unembarrassed. By early resort to these remedies many a serious illness may be averted, and soundness of health maintained.

It is said that the German emperor is to be presented with the freedom of the city of London in May, and that efforts will be made to obtain the presence on this occasion of the queen.

Why should we weep over a loss?
Why look down the vista of years,
But to gather a long buried sorrow
To open the wound with new tears?
It never forgot it, do unless
(No matter how anxious we be)
To try to go back, as yourself,
A pearl that is lost in the sea!

Why burden to-day with regretting
What might have been, had we but known?
Why long for the much beloved music
After the sweet singer has flown?
Will all the regrets and longings
Avail against Fate's stern decree?
Ah, no—for the Past and its chances
Are as pearls that are lost in the sea!

Why waste precious moments in thinking
Of scenes that were beautiful then?
Why linger over graves that hold treasures
That we'll will be with us again?
Why wish for our youth and its gladness
When from sorrow and care we are free?
It's gone from our grasp—gone forever,
As a pearl that is lost in the sea!

NEW ESSAY ON MAN.

Man that is born of woman is small potatoes and few in a hill. He rises up today and flourishes like a rag-weed, and to-morrow, or the next day, the undertaker hath him. He goeth forth in the morning warbling like a lark, and is knocked out in one round and two seconds.

In the midst of life he is in debt, and the tax collector pursues him wherever he goeth. The banister of life is full of splinters and he slideth down with considerable rapidity. He walketh forth in the bright sunlight to absorb ozone and meeteth the bank teller with a sight draft for $357.

He cometh home at eventide and meeteth the wheelbarrow in his path. It riseth up and smiteth him to the earthland falleth upon him and runneth one of its legs into his ear.

In the gentle springtime he putteth on his summer clothes, and a blizzard striketh him far from home and filleth him with cuss words and rheumatism. In the winter he putteth on winter trousers and a wasp that abideth exceedingly. He startetb down into the cellar with an oleander cometh after him and sitteth upon him.

He buyeth a watch dog, and when he cometh home from the lodge the watch dog treeth him, and sitteth near him until day morn. He goeth to the horse fair and betteth his money on the brown mare, and the bay gelding with a blaze face winneth.

He marrieth a red headed heiress with a wart on her nose, and the next day the parent ancestor goeth under with a fine, arrest and great liabilities, and cometh home to live with his beloved son in law.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES.

Corn starch makes the best paste for scrap books. Dissolve a small quantity in cold water, then cook it thoroughly. When cold it should be thin enough to apply with a brush. It will neither stain nor mold.

Keep your trees trimmed into proper shape from the beginning; it is better to train than to trim.

When you prune a plant that is growing to check growth, prune it when it is dormant and you add vigor to the plant when it starts again.

A good compost for pot plants or anything else can be made as follows. Skim off a scuttle of soda, mix with fine brush and weeds, let get dry, and turn the whole mass. Mix this well with some leaf mould, well decomposed manure (cow dung being best), one third sand. This compost will grow anything in the ordinary way to perfection. If prepared and stored out of the reach of frost and used occasionally. By spring it will be in admirable order.

Why Not Treat?

WHY not treat such troubles as boils, pimples, blotches, sores, humors, eruptions, rashes, skin irritations, etc., with Burdock Blood Bitters. It is filled with virtue as a blood purifier and goes right to the right spot. It makes the skin bright and clear, while also invigorating the entire system.

Paper can be rendered fire-proof by dipping it into a strong solution of alum water and drying thoroughly.

Kerosene will clean brass, no matter how dark and stained. Moisten a cloth well, rub hard, then use a dry flannel dipped in whiting.

Why go about hawking and spitting when Nasal Balm will remove every vestige of your catarrh and thus relieve you of this disagreeable habit? In cases of cold in the head, Nasal Balm gives instant relief, and there is no case of catarrh it will not cure if used according to directions. A single bottle will convince you of its merit.

NOT ALL MOONSHINE.

A Chart Which It May Be Worth Your While to Keep for Reference.

To all lovers of bright nights, who know the charm of field and highway when the mild luminary covers them with a net of silver; to all lovers of bright nights, who know the charm of lake and stream and open sea, when the mild luminary covers them with flakes and arrows and broad swaths of silver; to all lovers of the "grand air"—good at night as it is good by day; and, more especially to all lovers—

MOONLIGHT CHART, 1891.

EXPLANATION—The light shading indicates the amount of moonlight each night. January 4, February 3, March 3, April 1 and 30, May 30, etc., are the first days on which the moon rises after midnight; January 19, February 18, etc., are the first evenings when the new moon is visible; January 17, February 15, etc., are the first evenings when the moon sets after midnight; January 30, February 28, etc., are the last evenings when the moon rises during twilight.

A Strange Cure.

A certain brilliant woman who had come into a fortune on the death of her husband found the bacillus of literary ambition prevailing her system. Lacking originality she employed her acquirements as a linguist to the task of building up a translator's reputation.

Much to her disgust, all her efforts in this line were unavailing. Manuscript after manuscript was rejected by newspapers, book publishers and syndicates. She kept on, however, until her mind became unbalanced and she was taken to an insane asylum. Among her papers the physician in charge of the case found an English rendition of one of Guy de Maupassant's stories. He sent the manuscript to a syndicate. It was accepted. The doctor thereupon presented a printed copy of her translation to his patient. The effect was magical. Her old ambition returned, her mind resumed its normal condition and she has been discharged from the asylum—cured. Once in a while publishers do a good deed.

The Affectionate Wife.

A lady who had but lately been married, seeing her husband return after three days' absence, stole softly secretly behind him and gave him a kiss.

The husband was angry, and told her that she had offended against all his notions of propriety.

"I am very sorry," she exclaimed, "I really didn't know it was you, my love!"

Fashion Women and Society.

[illegible] asked of Mme. Mohl [illegible] but birth permission [illegible] "My dear," said Mme. [illegible] friend is a man bring him [illegible] thinking twice about it, but if she [illegible] think well before you bring her, for of all the creatures God ever created none does spoil society like an English lady."—Gentleman's Magazine.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—These world renowned remedies are confidently recommended to miners, navvies, and all who have to work underground, or where noxious atmospheres exist. The minute particles of coal or metal which permeate the air in such places tend to block up the lungs and air-tubes, giving rise to bronchitis, asthma and palpitation of the heart. In Holloway's remedies will be found a safe and easily used medicament, for the penetrating properties of the Ointment relieve the local congestions and the mildly laxative effects of the Pills cause the liver to act freely, and the bruised to become unembarrassed. By early resort to these remedies many a serious illness may be averted, and soundness of health maintained.

It is said that the German emperor is to be presented with the freedom of the city of London in May, and that efforts will be made to obtain the presence on this occasion of the queen.

Editorial Evidence.

GENTLEMEN—Your Hagyard's Yellow Oil is worth its weight in gold for both internal and external use. During the late La Grippe epidemic we found it a most excellent preventive, and for spasmodic limits, etc., there is nothing to equal it.

THE PENUMOGASTRIC NERVE.

Upon an orange, twice a week,
When anguish clouds my brow,
My good physician friend I seek
To know "what ails me now."
He taps me on the back and chest
And sounds my lungs for bile,
And lays an ear against my breast
And listens there a while.
Then he is ready to admit
That all he can observe
Is something wrong inside, to wit:
My pneumogastric nerve!
Now, then these Latin names within Dyspeptic hearts like mine
Go wrong, a fellow should begin
To draw what's called the line.
It seems, however, that this name,
Which in my bulk abounds,
Is not, despite its awful name,
So fatal as it sounds.
Yet, of all torments known to me,
I'll say without reserve
There is no torment like to that,
That pneumogastric nerve!
This restless, envious nerve appears
To be a patient too—
It waited nearly forty years
Its chance to lay me low;
Then like some blithering blast of hell,
It struck this gulletous hard,
And in that evil hour I fell
Prodigious far and hard.
Also I want things I dearly love—
Pies, puddings and preserves—
Are sure to rouse the vengeance of
All pneumogastric nerves!
Oh, that I could remodel man!
I'd end these cruel pains
By hinging on a different plan
From that which now obtains.
The stomach, greatly amplified,
Anon should occupy
The all of that domain inside
Where heart and lungs now lie.
But, first of all, I should oppose
That diabolic curve
And author of my thousand woes,
The pneumogastric nerve!

CHAPTER IV.

PRETTY, BUT A DEMON.

YOUNG Vigo, of Bosvigo, was as good-looking a Cornish squire as one would wish to see. His eyes were of that deep, peculiar blue, that only Cornish eyes possess, and his complexion had the glow and life of the western sun and the western sea; truly a handsome young fellow, well made and blithesome, with a springy step, a bright smile and a pleasant voice.

But Cornwall is the land of pleasant voices. And here, too, is the deep blue sky of the poet's vision; here the radiant sea of the painter's fancy, and here the thousand strange and mystic memories of an ancient race—a race to whom the Norman and the Saxon seem but of yesterday. In this legendary nook of England, there is an atmosphere around a traveller which breathes of a civilization antique and strange; he sees the remnant of a people dating from Troy; traditions come upon him older than Rome; a peasant will set before him the cream and cakes of Carthage.

Those wild ruins on the hills, where Druids worshipped, have still about them the footsteps and the breath of ancient Trojans. The fear of the mighty giants of that dim time rests on these lone places, and the blood of forgotten battles oozes through the heath. Here are mounds and barrows of the bones of the slain; and yonder, in the valley, are the workings of old Phœnicians when they delved for tin.

Is it a wonder that in Cornwall the hills and dales are peopled with ghosts, while living men delving beneath them follow the faint footsteps of races now a mystery and a shadow? And these shadows—these battings in the mines with rock and ore, amid mysteries and darkness—make the Cornish a strange people, a people quick in intelligence and sympathy, full of poetic fancy, soft of speech and kindly, yet fearless as the hardiest men of the North. The sea is their cradle, the mine their school; the storms and perils of the ocean they brave daily, (for the miner is also a fisherman,) and solitude, darkness and death in many shapes, they suffer even from childhood.

And the beauty of the Cornish land—who can tell it in words? Can pen and ink paint the azure of the bright sea, its changing hues, or the might and grandeur of the league-long rollers that sweep the sands? Or can feeble hand trace out on paper the forms of those great hills, purpling beneath the sky; those giant and rugged cliffs; those valleys, where fairies linger; those dales, in which the laughing pixy hides among flowers and fragrant herbs, sparkling of the sea? And what words can show the rippling murmur of the brooks, the green of the waving ferns, the dance, the music, and the song, the life and sunny glow of this soft, delicious land?

And now let us go back to Charles Vigo, of Bosvigo, who cleans his gun in his hall, and whistles to himself and his dog. Over his cheerful face there is an unwonted cast of thought, and he looks at his retriever wistfully, as though he would fain ask his counsel. Putting his gun on the billiard table, he gave the dog on the head, and gazes into his honest eyes with a perplexed look.

"My good Bolster," he says, "would you like a mistress?"

Bolster tugged his tail tremendously.

"Shall I ask her if she will come hither to be your mistress?" he continued; "a tyrannical mistress, good Bolster; she will give you and me no peace; but then somehow I cannot do without her. What do you say, Bolster? Shall I try my fortune, or shall I leave it alone?"

"Since Fortune is a woman, I should say leave it alone, my dear fellah," said a languid voice.

The voice belonged to a very swell young gentleman, who stood at the door with a lighted cigar between his lazy lips. Charles Vigo colored crimson, and then laughed.

"Where have you been?" he asked. "You came upon me and Bolster very suddenly."

"Broke up a confidential meeting, eh?" said Damerel. "I've been to Trewavyas to see the ladies."

Young Vigo colored again to the hope.

"Can't you open your mouth, and say Trewavas?" said he. "And how are the old ladies?"

"I don't know," replied Damerel. "Wasn't anyaw of their existence dawing the delicious honaw I spent at Trewavhvas. (Is that wight?) But I can tell you how the young ladies are."

"How, then?" asked Charles Vigo.

"At daggers drawn," replied Damerel. "I weally believe that little sawcewass from the East will kill somebody soon."

"Are you alluding to Miss Varcoe?" asked Charles Vigo, in a cold tone.

"Yes," replied the other, looking at him keenly, "I allude to her. She is vewy pwetty, but a demon. If you were talking about her to Bolstaw, I give you my advice in one word,—don't."

"Upon my word, Damerel," exclaimed young Vigo, hotly, "I consider this an——"

"Impertinence?" said Damerel. "Oh yes, no doubt, my dear fellah, it is impertinent. You can shoot me for it, if you like; there's your gun handy. A friend who gives disinterested advice ought to be shot. If I advised you to cut your throat, or do something to destroy yourself for life, of course you would embrace me with gwatitude. Well, do it if you like. I've nothing more to say."

Charles Vigo was excessively pale; the hand which he had stretched towards his gun fell powerless by his side as he turned towards his friend and guest.

"Come, Damerel, let me know what you are talking about," he said in a low voice. "I don't understand a word of all this."

"You understand it perfectly, old fellow," replied the other, dropping his affectation in his earnestness; "but I would not have ventured to speak if I had not a kind of dogwish affection for you, arising out of the numerous licks inga you gave me Winchester."

Charles Vigo and Damerel had clasped hands before this speech was finished, and the two young men stood looking at each other a little sadly, all the memories of boyhood and its thousand happy scenes speaking in their eyes. English fashion, very little was said, but much understood; and had they obeyed their feelings, it is highly probable they might have given each other a good hug. As it was, they subsided very quietly, contenting themselves with a hearty thump in the back; which, as a piece of practical eloquence, seemed to relieve them greatly.

"Look here, old fellow," said young Vigo, "I was a little vexed at your going up to Trewavas by yourself."

"I know that," said Damerel; "but you see I did it on purpose. I couldn't trust you to go; so I got up early and sneaked off by myself. A man may do a sneaky thing for a friend, Vigo; but he can't do it for himself. You would never have done what I have done for you this morning. I cannot say it is a grand thing, or a gentlemanly thing to do, to bribe a groom; but for your sake old fellow, I was determined to know the truth."

"And what is the truth?" asked Charles, impatiently.

"The truth is, that Miss Varcoe is a dangerous woman," replied his friend.

"And I am a fool, I suppose, Damerel," said Charles Vigo.

His face was so white and set, and his voice so full of pain, that his friend completely broke down in his efforts to keep a careless tone and manner.

"My dear Vigo," said he, "if you were a fool, I would say nothing more to you; but as I have known you all my life long, let me speak out; let me tell you what I have heard."

"Speak, for heaven's sake, Damerel, and speak plainly," said Vigo.

"Well, then, Miss Varcoe is dangerous and desperate," said Damerel; "she has tried to kill Eleanor Maristowe."

"Take care what you say, Damerel," said Vigo. "This is too absurd."

"Is it too true, Vigo," he replied, earnestly. "There is a certain mare in the Trewavas stables, very quiet if properly handled after, but a demon if ever fed. Miss Varcoe twice loaded the beast's manger secretly with corn; the groom watched her, though she made some pretext for sending him away, and fancied she had removed his chaff."

"Well, and what does that prove?" asked Charles Vigo, indignantly.

"I answer you with another question," said Damerel. "Do you know Trewavas Cliffs?"

"Of course I do," replied Charles Vigo.

"I don't," said Damerel. "Are the cliffs a dangerous spot for a rider on a restive horse?"

"They are simply fearful," replied Charles. "Imagine a precipice three hundred feet high, with a narrow shelving path on the edge, along which a pedestrian can scarcely go safely."

"And to this delightful spot Eleanor Maristowe was to have ridden on a vicious horse," said Damerel. "What would you have say of her life when she started?"

"No man in his senses would take a lady there," replied Charles Vigo.

"But Sir Hilton Trewavas is not in his senses; he is in love," said Damerel; "therefore he permitted Miss Varcoe to persuade him that Trewavas Cliffs was the very place to which he should take his intended wife; and I assure you it was only by the accident of Lady Trewavas asking Miss Maristowe to go for a drive with her, that she was saved."

"I don't believe or understand a word of all this, Damerel," said young Vigo, stardily. "Why should Olive Varcoe wish to kill Miss Maristowe?"

"Because she loves Sir Hilton Trewavas," replied Damerel, in a low, emphatic tone; "and to hinder his marriage, I verily believe she would risk all things."

Charles Vigo's hand shook as he rested it on the billiard table, and his handsome face flushed painfully.

"Do you really think she loves him?" he asked. "I have never noticed it—never seen anything."

"My dear Vigo," said Damerel, "the girl loves her cousin desperately; it is only you have been blind. John Trewavas knew it, Eleanor suspects it, Lady Trewavas guesses it, and all the servants talk of it."

"Then you think I have no chance?" said Charles Vigo, with a forced and hollow laugh.

"On the contrary" replied Damerel, "I think she would accept you directly, and make you miserable. Promise me, Vigo, that you won't try her. I am convinced she is a dangerous girl. You are worthy of a better woman than Olive Varcoe."

"Don't say anything against her, Damerel," said Charles Vigo; "you know nothing—it is all surmise—all suspicion."

"Will you give me time to prove it?" said Damerel. "Will you promise me not to ask her to be your wife for a month?"

"I'll promise that, and I'll watch her meanwhile," replied Charles Vigo. "If she loves Sir Hilton, I shall never ask her. I don't want a woman whose heart is in another's keeping. Besides, if that's the case, she won't have a word to say to me."

"You are mistaken," said Damerel; "she would most likely marry you; or, at all events, she would accept you, and parade her conquest before Sir Hilton's eyes to make him jealous."

"What a noble part I should be made to play," said Charles Vigo, bitterly, "if what you say be true. But I believe nothing of it. You are prejudiced and you don't know the girl. The fact is, she has been brought up like a sister with Sir Hilton and John, and of course she is fond of them."

Mr. Damerel whistled in a provoking manner, but made no reply.

"Then you think it is more than a sisterly affection she feels for Sir Hilton?" continued young Vigo.

"I think it is a mad, desperate love, capable of all things," was the reply; "a love that has already brought her to the verge of crime."

"Beads of sweat broke out on Charles Vigo's brow; and, starting up, he struck his fist heavily on the table.

"By Heavens, Damerel!" he exclaimed, "I'd bear this from no man on earth but you; and I am bound now to prove this girl's innocence. I'll watch her day and night till I convince you that you have brought a false charge against her. Servants' tales! It is unworthy of you to listen for a moment to such vile calumnies; it is unlike you, Damerel. I am lost in wonder at your assertions."

"Pass all that, Vigo, and keep your word as to watching the girl," said Damerel. "That will satisfy me, and amply satisfy you too. Unless your senses are quite gone, you will come to me, long before the month is up, and tell me with thanks that you will never ask Olive Varcoe to be your wife."

Charles Vigo's lips were white with anger and grief; but he restrained himself, and spoke calmly.

"You say what you believe, Damerel, and I forgive you," said he, "but long before the month is gone you will be ashamed of having traduced an innocent girl, and I shall expect one thing then at your hands—I shall expect you to beg her pardon."

"If what I assert is not the melancholy truth, I will do that willingly, and beg your pardon too, my dear boy," said Damerel. "Now let us end this discussion; it grows painful."

"One thing more," said Charles Vigo—"I want your promise that this scandal shall go no further. You will not repeat your suspicions of Olive here or at Trewavas?"

"I promise that, for your sake," replied Damerel. "If I allowed her to know that I suspected her, she would baffle us both, and all your watching would be in vain."

Charles Vigo writhed beneath his friend's words.

"Enough," he said, hurriedly. "I can bear no more of this, even from you."

From that day, although Olive Varcoe guessed it not, watchful eyes were set on her lonely walks, and in her wild wanderings on shore and land.

CHAPTER V.

A SILKEN SNARE.

"And what is this pretty thing for?" said Sir Hilton Trewavas, taking a silken chain from Eleanor's hands and throwing it over the sling in which his arm rested. "It is a silken fetter for a man to wear, or is a snare for a lady's neck, meant to string foolish hearts on?"

"Neither one, you silly Hilton," replied Eleanor; "it is something far more deadly. It is a thing of crime, of murder, of terror; it is one of those silken cords the sultans of old sent to disgraced pashas, and the sight of it means death."

"And who presented you with so ill-omened a gift, Eleanor?" demanded her lover.

"It is not mine," she replied; "it is Olive's. There is a dreadful story belonging to it, so she tells me. By this cord her grandfather died; her mother, then a little child, saw the slave of the sultan approach him with the fatal gift; she saw him kiss the cord, and bare his neck to the executioner; and it was not till the strong hands of the black had commenced their hideous work, that the child stopped her play, and ran shrieking through the harem."

"A horrible story, indeed," said Sir Hilton, throwing the cord on the table with disgust. "But how did Olive get the rope?"

"Her mother gave it to her, and she had it from her mother, who took it from the dead man's neck," replied Eleanor. "Wives and children were sold into slavery when he was slain. Olive's mother was a slave for many years, you know."

"I know nothing of the kind," said Sir Hilton, in an irritated tone. "Who tells you these absurd stories, Eleanor?"

Eleanor's fair face crimsoned, and her eyes drooped timidly.

"Lady Trewavas told me some of this; Olive herself told me the rest," said Eleanor. "She wants me to weave her a rope like this with some Syrian silk I have."

"Don't do anything of the kind love," said Sir Hilton. "Olive is half mad at times, with her queer ways and gloomy fancies. I wish she had not told you this story. The child is too fond of telling tales against herself."

"What is there against herself in this?" asked Eleanor, touching the rope lightly with her finger.

"A grandfather hanged, a mother a slave," murmured Sir Hilton; "it curdles one's blood to think of it. Don't touch that cord, Eleanor, I entreat you. The sight of it between your fingers makes me shudder."

"I touch it without fear," said Eleanor, "because I do not in the least believe these romantic stories; and you will laugh when I tell you why Olive wishes me to make a second cord like this. She wants the two for bell-ropes for your dressing room."

"That's just like her," exclaimed Sir Hilton—"always mingling the grotesque and terrible, without regard for one's nerves. What pleasant fancies I should have as I pulled such a rope! Give it back to her, Eleanor, and tell her I have no wish to summon the ghost of her hanged grandfather by sound of bell."

"Then I am not to obey the behest?" said Eleanor, laughing.

"No, indeed," replied Sir Hilton. "I should be sorry to see your pretty fingers weaving ropes of such a deadly pattern."

He seized her hand as he spoke, and held it loverlike in his own, then drawing her towards him, he stooped and kissed her. Eleanor blushed in her deep happiness as his lips touched hers, and, leaning her head on his shoulder, she gave way for a moment to all her girlish joy and love.

MR. MOWAT AND LOCAL OPTION.

(Toronto World.)

Chief Justice Gale yesterday quashed a local option bylaw on the ground that the authority for permitting the passage of such bylaws belongs to the Dominion and not the Provincial Government.

We have all along argued that the amendment to the Crooks Act permitting municipalities to pass local option bylaws was simply a sop thrown to extreme temperance men, who are ever ready to accept anything wearing the blessed name of prohibition. It seemed evident that the prohibition of the liquor traffic in small municipalities—while on all sides it was legalized by license—could only end in contagion and injury to the cause it was professedly designed to further. It was doomed to certain failure in five municipalities where it was carried with majorities of 15 or under. But however great the majority the bylaw might have in any municipality the influences that would bear against its enforcement and the encroachment of legitimate traffic from the surrounding townships would prevent it from having any good effect worth mentioning.

Sir Thomas Galt's decision will doubtless end the local option agitation in the score of townships where it is about to go to vote. There is one point worthy of note. It is some time now since Mr. Mowat figured as the champion of provincial rights. Is it not possible that he may have been writing lines for a new appearance in his favorite role? There was no particular demand for the local option law—when framed it was impractical and could accomplish nothing, and if not boldly overstepping provincial jurisdiction it bordered suspiciously close upon the exclusive right of the Dominion Government to prohibit a traffic that the province could only regulate in detail and tax at will. Perhaps Mr. Mowat contemplates another strike for wider powers, and the local option amendment may have been passed, not for practical use, but to test a principle in the superior courts.

EAST GARAFRAXA COUNCIL.

The council met at Marsville on March 21st, according to adjournment. All the members present. Minutes of last meeting read and adopted. A by law was passed appointing a local Board of Health, and medical Health Officer for the township.

Moved by Mr. Carroll, seconded by Mr. Turner, that leave be given to introduce a by-law to authorize and empower the trustees of union school [illegible] Erin and East Garafraxa, and [illegible] a [illegible] by [illegible] ants [illegible] order for the same, viz.—Rowell & Hutchinson, bank forms, $6 60; J. Robinson, $1 00; A. Burnett, $1 50; Clerk, drawing collector's bond, $1.00.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Carroll, seconded by Mr. Carroll, that this council do now adjourn to meet again at Anthony's hotel, Marsville, on Saturday, 30th of May, at 10 o'clock a. m., as a Court of Revision on the assessment.—Carried.

JOHN PRESTON,
Clerk.

An anomalous state of things exists on the great lakes in the matter of ice blockades. The Straits of Mackinaw are clear, or so nearly open that steamers could undoubtedly force their way through what little ice remains, but the lower part of the St. Clair River is blockaded by an ice jam that may last for weeks. Usually the straits remain closed long after the St. Clair River is open, and the passage between Lake Huron and Lake Michigan is often first forced by vessels which have gone up from Buffalo through the rivers.

ELECTRIC LIGHT CONTRACT

Discussed at the Council on Monday Night—A Number Wanted to Resign—Chamber Chat.

THE SUN's municipal reporter crowded the council chamber a few minutes behind time on Monday evening. When he arrived, however, he found the press gallery was partially filled and the auditorium contained two or three people who had little bills against this not over wealthy corporation. His Worship Mayor Walsh had ascended the throne and seated around the green-table were Reeve Lindsay, Deputy reeve Bodasett, Ald. Youmans, Green, Coburn, Gillespie, Ketchum, Fiddis, Young and Adamson. The clerk was absent and Assessor Hughson was prevailed upon to jot down the minutes.

As usual there were calls upon the civic coffer and from T. MacAdam, $3.90, ordered to be paid; A Turner, $1.95, referred to T. P. committee; Advertiser, $20, referred to Printing committee; T. MacAdam, $1.95, ref. to T. P. committee; W. Franklin, $3 20 referred to B. & B. committee.

Dr. Henry, medical health officer, wrote to inform the council that arrangements had been made for the removal of night-soil.

WANTED TO RESIGN.

Ald. Ketchum sent in his resignation as a member of the board of health. It will be remembered that he was appointed at a meeting of the council when he was not present. No one would move that his resignation be accepted, so he moved the resolution himself. The mayor ruled the motion out of order, as Ald. Ketchum, the mover, was an interested party. Mr. K. thought it was an imposition to make him serve as a member of the board when he did not want to. His resignation was not accepted.

$50 FOR THE INSTITUTE.

President Foulds and Secretary Hewitt of the mechanics' institute asked for the annual grant. They said the institute had done a great deal of good since the free reading-room was started, and that the best of literature is always on file. Ald. Ketchum was of a very liberal disposition and moved that the grant be increased to $60. The other members, however, thought $50 was sufficient and the latter sum was granted.

SABBATH DESECRATION.

A communication was received from J. S. Leighton regarding the desecration of the Lord's day in town. Attached to the letter was a resolution passed at the vestery meeting of St. Mark's church. It complained about trains running on Sunday, etc. The clerk was instructed to send a copy of the resolution to the superintendent of the C. P. R.

Chairman Adamson read the R & B report, which showed that $22 97½ had been expended repairing sidewalks so far this season; and $50 be placed to the committee's credit. After a little debate, $25 was placed in the report instead of $50.

STREET LIGHTING.

Ald. Fiddis brought down the report of the Street Lighting committee and moved its adoption. The report said the committee had notified Contractor McDonald to appear at the town hall several nights ago, but that he failed to materialise. A letter from the Orangeville Electric Light & Power Co. was attached to the report offering to renew the street lighting contract at the same rates as the present contract. At a later stage the council went into com of the whole. Ald. Fiddis thought it was proper to get light as cheap as possible and probably other companies would do it a great deal cheaper than the present offer. After several more suggestions it was decided to correspond with other municipalities and obtain all the information possible.

NO EXTRA LIGHTS.

Ald. Fiddis, seconded by Deputy reeve Bodasett, moved that the Street Lighting committee be empowered to make arrangements for placing a lamp opposite the stone mill on Mill street. A vote was taken, 6 voting for the motion and 4 against. As it required a two thirds vote to carry the motion the resolution was defeated.

CIVIC CHIPS.

Reeve Lindsay said the Finance committee would report on interest on borrowed money at the next meeting.

The deputy-reeve drew the attention of the chairman of the R. & B. to the dangerous state of the sidewalk on Faulkner street. It will be repaired.

The mayor produced the auditors' report on police court fines and found that $50 was still due the town. Fines to the amount of $102 50 still remain uncollected. An explanation will be made at the next meeting.

MARSVILLE.

The condition of the roads is improving.

Farmers around here are busy plowing and some are ready to commence seeding.

Mr. Hugh McGowan and family left on Tuesday for Minnesota, U. S. A. We wish them every success in their new home.

Mr. Jas. B. Reid, East Garafraxa census enumerator, is going his rounds. It will be three weeks anyhow before he gets through with his work.

Mr. Henry McGowan sustained a severe loss on Sunday last by the death of a valuable mare and colt. The animals were valued at $150 and the owner has our sympathy.

Deputy reeve Simpson met with an accident at the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. Henry McGowan, lot 10, con. 13, East Garafraxa, on Sunday morning last. One of Mr. McGowan's horses took sick and Mr. Simpson went to assist him in caring for the animal. In some manner the animal fell on Mr. Simpson and injured him severely, his left arm being badly sprained. We hope the genial deputy-reeve will soon be himself again.

ENDACOTT BROS.

We have received a letter from Mr D. Bell of Brampton, who is at present at Montague, Texas. Mr. Bell says he is manufacturing a self binder that makes its own rope from straw and that he will have one of them in Canada before long.

Aristotype is the name of a new and beautiful style of picture now made by W. Still of Orangeville. It surpasses anything yet produced in the photographic line. Anyone having photos taken at Still's can have them finished by this process.

PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY.—W. C. Adair, having rented the photographic business of Gale & Co., south side of Broadway, will show something new and novel in photography in a few days. Don't fail to call and see samples of his work before sitting elsewhere.

NEW FRUIT STORE.—Mr. Frank Cousins, a pushing young business man, intends opening up a confectionery and fruit store in the shop lately occupied by J. W. Young. Mr. Cousins will keep a first class stock and he should be liberally patronized by the citizens of this town.

THE BAND REORGANIZED.—A meeting was held in the council chamber on Tuesday evening for the purpose of reorganizing the Citizens' band. Mayor Walsh presided and a large attendance was present. After considering every thing it was decided to advertise for a bandmaster. The band will be reorganized in a very short time.

THE BROOKLYN CASE.—Bob Montgomery had about your old friend Champlin up before P. H. Pettipiece on Saturday for striking his boy with a stone shot from a catapult. The magistrate, considering the tender age of the kid and the able manner in which the culprit was defended by his father, dismissed the case, the defendant to pay the constable's costs.

GOING ON THE ROAD.—Mr. J. J. Kelly, who for the past several years has been foreman of the tinware department of the firm of A. & W. Johnston, has accepted a more lucrative position as traveller for Copp Bros., stove manufacturers, Hamilton. Mr. Kelly enters the drummers' sphere on Monday next. "Jake's" smiling countenance will be greatly missed by his many friends in town.

JOE THE CANNIBAL.—Joe Remain of Amaranth and an ex resident of this town became entangled in a dispute in the Elgin house one day last week and during the frauas both participants were pretty badly used up. Joe imagined he was in Africa and when he had his opponent on the floor he proceeded to make a meal off his face. Chief Shields was summoned them to appear at the police court to-morrow afternoon.

THE LAWYERS ARE IN IT.—Referring to the Haggart Bros. foundry difficulty, the Brampton Banner sarcastically remarks: The sheriff's sale announced to take place at the foundry to-day has been postponed for one week on an order from Judge Fleming. There are better prospects, at the present moment, of a first-class legal fight, and every lawyer in town having a hand in it, than there are that the company will be enabled to make a start.

DON'T GRUMBLE.—A carping spirit rarely goes with a working spirit. It is easier to find fault with what some one else does than it is to do something one's self; hence a man who enjoys doing the easier thing is disinclined to do the harder one. As a rule, men are divided into the two classes of those who grow and those who work; and each class is alike devoted to its own mission. But when it comes to the relative work in the community of the two classes, everybody can see the difference.

ROUTE BILLS.—THE SUN is better prepared than ever to turn out first-class route bills, and horsemen can rely on getting work equal, if not superior to that done in cities. We have a larger and better stock of type and cuts than any other office north of Toronto. Compare a bill printed at this office and one done elsewhere and you will come to the conclusion that THE SUN's Job Department cannot be beaten for work of the highest order. Call around and see our great assortment of cuts.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.—The editor of our contemporary, the Post, had a very unpleasant experience last Friday afternoon. Constable Hurst of Brampton called around and placed him under arrest on a charge of criminally libelling John Willoughby of Caledon. Bail was secured and the quill-driver was set at liberty. On Monday the preliminary hearing took place at Brampton and the luckless editor was ordered to stand his trial at the Peel assizes which open at Brampton next week. It is altogether likely a settlement will be arrived at.

WHO CAN BEAT THIS?—Census Enumerator Jas. B. Reid of East Garafraxa had a novel experience the other day and probably no other enumerator in the Dominion can record a similar event. He dropped into a certain house and asked the questions prescribed. In the house there lived two brothers and two sisters and there combined ages are 306 years. The brothers' ages are 80 and 78 respectively and the sisters' 76 and 72. If any other enumerator can beat this we would like to hear from him.

LANSDOWNES REORGANIZE.—A meeting of the members of the Young Lansdowne lacrosse club was held in their rooms, west Broadway, on Monday evening. After discussing the prospects for this season's campaign, the following officers were elected: John Aiken, hon. pres; Andrew Jones, hon-vice-pres.; Walker Kearns, pres.; Jas. C. Henry, vice pres.; Walter Henry, secretary; John Irving, treasurer; Ernest McGuire, capt.; Alex Harding, field-captain, Willie Irving, Fred Menary, Albert Martin, committee.

THE CHIEF'S REQUEST.—Mrs. Coutts, wife of the insane Mt. Forest child-murderer, has been in town for several weeks past soliciting quarters, dimes and nickles, and she has not been unsuccessful in the pursuit of the root of all evil. Chief Shields, the kind-hearted guardian of the law, imagined she was unnecessarily prolonging her stay in town so he accompanied her to the G. P. R. depot on Friday and saw her safely on board the cars. Mrs. Coutts said she would alight at Mt. Forest, her former home.

KIRKLAND ASSAULTED.—A case of trivial importance came up for ventilation at the police court on Saturday. John Kirkland charged Bill Kinsa and Sam Snell, two Mono farmers, with assault. From the evidence it appears that Kirkland was doorkeeper at Leeson's famous hostelry and the defendants desired to make their exit from the door that was guarded by the stalwart John. John resisted their onslaught and a scuffle ensued, which resulted in a victory for the tyler. The case was not proven to be an aggravated one and the defendants were allowed to go providing they would each put $1 and costs in the legal plate. They did it. Dr. Kishenghan of Erin occupied a seat beside the staff.

MELVILLE FISHING CLUB.—A number of gentlemen have formed a club to be known as the Melville Fishing Club and have applied to the Legislature to be incorporated. The new organization has taken a twenty years' lease of the lands along the Credit river from the centre road to the 1st line, west Caledon, including Melville pond. The club will stock the river with fish and already there are 50,000 speckled trout fry on their way from the hatchery at Newcastle. A strict watch will be kept and any person violating the rules of the club will be prosecuted. The members of the club are: James Crozier, Henry Crozier, T. N. Williamson, George Eveleigh, Orangeville; R. Gourlock, R. G. Davidson, William Fisher, Toronto; William Stubbs, James Dick, Caledon; D. Ellison, Brampton.

TRUANCY ACT.—Foremost among the important measures effecting education now before the Assembly is the Truancy Act which has passed its second reading. The bill provides for the appointment of a truant officer by the police commissioners in each municipality. This officer's duty it shall be to catch and make a dire example of any ill-fated small boy detected "playing truant" during school hours, but such detection will perhaps be the least of his cares. The children who are kept at home for their parents' convenience and wade hewers of wood and drawers of water with no chance of becoming anything else will be looked after, and to these little drudges who are numerous enough in some localities the truant officer will come as an angel of deliverance. The enforcement of the Truancy Act involves of necessity the furnishing of text books free or at a nominal cost per pupil. The main excuse for non-attendance is inability to purchase books, and all the compulsory legislation in the world will not remove the difficulty. In Hamilton the free text book system has been some time in practice, and the teachers report it a success and on the whole a measure of great economy. If Truancy Act passes, the towns and cities of the Province will certainly have to follow in the footsteps of Hamilton. The rural municipalities may find some way of dodging the difficulty, though the need of reform is perhaps greater there than in the towns.

GRAND VALLEY.

(Star.)

The saw-mill has started again.

The C. P. R. intend making several improvements at Grand Valley station this summer. The company have just completed a deal with Mr. Jas. Davey for one and one-half acres of land on south side of track on which they intend laying a siding at once. They will also enlarge the cattle pen which at present, owing to the large quantity of stock which is shipped, is much too small.

On Friday evening the village was startled by the report that a child had been found on the side of the railway track, about 3 miles west of the station here. About two o'clock on Friday afternoon Mr. Robt. Dickson, post master at Pecpebun, was walking along the track, and when about 30 rods east of the sideroad at Mr. Andrew Richardson's, he observed a parcel lying at one side of the track, about six feet from the rails, which at once aroused his curiosity. The parcel was done up with a sheet of grey paper on the outside and tied on by a cord. Mr. Dickson thinking that the package to be goods of some kind and probably dropped off the train at once began to investigate. He unfastened the cord, took off the paper wrapping and found a woman's undergarment surrounding a tin tobacco box, the box being about 1 foot in length. He then opened the tin, which was fastened with small nails, and a black woollen scarf or shawl appeared, and on lifting the scarf he was horror stricken to behold the remains of a female infant, which was crushed into the box of such small dimensions. Mr. Dickson replaced the wrappings, laid the box down where found and proceeded to Mr. Richardson's and secured a basket, taking Mr. Richardson along with him, they went for the box and brought it to Grand Valley. The coroner being away from home the box was placed under the care of Constable McDonald. The coroner being apprised of what had been found, on Saturday afternoon, on the affidavit of Robert Dickson that he believed the infant came to its death by violent means, an inquest was held with a jury empanelled, the evidence corroborating the facts as above stated. The jury considered that it was necessary to have a post mortem examination and the inquest was adjourned until 7 o'clock this Wednesday evening. Whether the box was thrown from the train or was placed there is a mystery. The box bore the marks of a number, and whether any evidence can be produced from that it is difficult to say.

KANE CONVICTED.

The Belleville Wife-Murderer Sentenced to be Hanged on the 21st May.

BELLEVILLE, Oct., April 16.—James Kane was to day tried for the murder of his wife, Elizabeth, on March 23rd, last. The couple, who were both over 50 years old, had for some time lived unhappily, and after a married life of six years had separated about a week before the bloody culmination of their differences. On the day in question Kane, after enquiring the whereabouts of his wife, went to the house of her son, Alfred Skinner, on Church street, where she was assisting in the removal of his effects, and, entering at a moment when all were absent from the house, he in a few minutes completed the bloody deed. A large knife was used, the fatal blow being near the heart. The victim was also stabbed upon the left leg, and her right hand was badly cut. She never, so far as is known, uttered a word after receiving the wound. Kane was almost surprised at the bloody work, as his wife's son entered just after its commission, knocked him down and held him until assistance arrived. After he had done the deed, Kane appeared to have been satisfied with his fiendish work, as in the presence of two or three persons he stated he was proud of what he had done. For the defence it was urged that the prisoner's intellect had been unsettled by an injury to his head received in a railway accident last autumn. Several witnesses swore that Kane had changed in his demeanor since that occurrence. The jury after an absence of about an hour, returned a verdict of guilty, and the prisoner was sentenced to be hanged on the 21st of May.

The roads are in a bad condition and the farmers have to remain at home.

Maple-sugar making is about over and the farmers are getting things in shape for seeding.

A grey horse led by a gentleman is been going across in Amaranth very often. We wonder what the young man is after. What do you think of it, Theodore?

Harry, a young son of Henry Cudney, met with a bad accident on the 14th inst. He and his sister were playing with the cutting box and the boy got his hand caught in the cogs, badly lacerating his fingers. We hope the little sufferer will soon be all right again.

CAMILLA.

The roads are drying up quickly and seeding has commenced in earnest.

Sugar-making has abruptly come to a close on account of the warmness of the weather.

What has happened our baseball club? Did it receive its death-blow last 1st of July? Let its early sleep be undisturbed. The young men of Glenoe are said to be anxious to win another cup.

The sporting spirits of Glenoe (a hamlet a little north of here) are to be congratulated on the completion of their club house. It stands on the corner of Mr. D. McKim's place. Although the architect is a local man and the contractor inexperienced, the building is admitted to be a fair specimen of rural ingenuity.

ADVERTISING DIDN'T PAY HIM.

Some months ago we reprinted in the district news column an advertisement for a wife which had appeared in a Muskoka paper and had been pretty widely copied as a curiosity by exchanges. Those of our readers who noticed the item may not be unwilling to hear the upshot of the affair. The advertiser was a young Muskoka farmer, owning 200 acres of land, a house and some stock. Youth, good looks and ability to work where the desideratum he required in the unknown being after whom his lonely soul, his buttonless shirts and his unwashed dishes cried out from the winter solitudes of the north. The "ad" had perfect good faith written all over the face of it. An Orillia young man saw the thing, and resolved to have a bushel of fun out of the aspirant. He wrote, enclosed a photograph—the prettiest he could buy no doubt—and made a sweeping conquest of the willing victim. The correspondence grew and flourished as the scripture says like a young bay tree. An engagement was the speedy result and the day of meeting was at length appointed. The longing lover in Muskoka looked forward with a bosom bursting with rapture to the day when he should alight at Orillia station and stand face to face with the fair one of his photograph. Half the young people in Orillia shared his joyous anticipations, and when the auspicious hour arrived one day last week at least 300 calm and decorous young people stood round the platform waiting his advent. The young lady was absent, but the bad young man was on hand to explain that she was out of town and would return next day, and the victim was escorted to a hotel. When our informant left next day he was still contentedly awaiting the arrival of the joy of his life, and answering all sorts of questions very amiably.—O. S. Advertiser.

Our local inventor and electrician, A. G. Hunter, has received notice from the president of the inventor's academy, in Paris, France, that after examination of his inventions, more especially his recent electrical invention, the Academy has conferred on him the title of "Corresponding Honorary Member of the Academy," with which is connected a First Class Diploma and Gilded Medal. This will give our townsman the benefit of free access and correspondence in connection with inventions and patents, with the Parisian Inventor's Academy. This honorbie title entails no expense on Mr. Hunter, and has been conferred on him without any solicitation whatever on his part. Not often is a citizen of a remote Canadian village honored so highly by a foreign Society. We congratulate our townsman on his success. Truly an inventor is not without honor, save in his own country and among his own people.—Dundalk Herald.

It will be a fine sight, and the people from the country are invited to witness it. For this magnificent exhibition the public will be indebted to the enterprise of Dr. Norton and Mr. John Jelly.

Last Tuesday evening, at the close of the regular meeting of Court Invincible, Canadian Order of Foresters, Rev. H. W. McTavish was presented with a handsome split bamboo fishing rod, basket, &c., and an address, showing the high esteem in which he is held by his brother Foresters. The presentation was a complete surprise to the reverend gentleman. He replied in very appropriate terms, thanking them for their presents, and admitting that had he been consulted in the matter of selecting presents for himself these would have been the very articles.

A flood swept the town of Ingersoll last week and did immense damage to property. The force of the water washed the side out of an undertaking establishment and a procession of coffins floated down the street.

The town council of Paris has decided to issue a circular setting forth the beauties of Paris as a place of residence and the advantages the town offers to manufacturing industries, and to circulate those all over America and Great Britain.

A Listowel public meeting has resolved to form a joint stock company with $50,000 capital to build and operate a furniture factory. The meeting meant business, and there was a most unanimous expression of opinion to stand by the town.

A Georgia editor has the faculty of looking on the bright side of things down to a fine point. He says, "We are down with the grip three deep, and we are feeling quite cheerful, as we have a lot in the cemetery and the cotton factory owes us $10 for an advertisement."

A lively struggle is expected before the Ontario Express and Transportation Company succeeds in forcing the Grand Trunk to give it express car accommodation. The new company have 200 men ready for business, and seems intent on securing its rights. Doubtless when it tries to obtain passage over the C. P. R. it will find another snag.

Last Wednesday, Stilson, the small-pox patient at Blythswood, Essex county, escaped from quarantine, and the next day a telegram was received from the Health Officer at Sarnia stating that he was under arrest there, and his face was covered with marks of the disease. It is feared that the action of Stilson will cause a small-pox epidemic.

Dr. Wm. O. Cox, who was charged with performing a criminal operation on Bertha Coultis, of Leamington, Ont., was found guilty by a Detroit jury on Thursday. The court sentenced him to pay a fine of $500 and undergo imprisonment in the House of Correction for one year. This is the extreme penalty prescribed for the offence by the law in Michigan.

Solomon Moon, arrested on a charge of insanity, in the Brant county jail awaiting the development of his case. He continues to be religious practically all the time. He imagines himself the city of Stratford, and does not want some real estate deals. Moon is a Five-month brother. His insanity developed very suddenly the other day while at work, and he began preaching.

Politics and whiskey are responsible for a great many fights. In Toronto Sunday the other day John Nesbit, a member of the Bayfield, is an over zealous partisan of the loyal Tory stripe. He got into a political argument on Monday with John Bruce, an ex-policeman on the Bayfield, and failing to convince the latter by oral logic resorted to the persuasion. He was fined $2 and costs on Tuesday morning.

A bill is before the Ontario Legislature, and it will likely pass, for the protection of the plant known as "ginseng." It may not be generally known that this is an article of export to China, and that last year over $20,000 worth of it was sent to the Flowery Kingdom. It is medicinal, and almost any farmer's wife can tell of the virtues of the "Jinsen" weed. That is ginseng, though the farmer's wife does not always know it.

Considerable money has been made out of fast horses, but it is not often that trotting dogs net their owners a large sum of money. Willie Ketchum's trotting dog "Doe", an Irish setter, has proved very valuable to his owner. The dog was shown at nearly all the big fairs up to the close of last season, earning for his master $9,000. For a hall interest $10,000 has been offered and refused. "Doe" is already booked for all next season at big prices, and for the World's Fair he is engaged for five weeks at $500 per week.

On Saturday last Levi Krupp, of Formosa, was brought in to the Walkerton jail, he being of unsound mind. He was one of the petit jury that convicted Donald McLeod, jr., of arson, at the recent assizes. Last Wednesday he evidenced that his mind was unhinged by his talk had reference to God, the Judge and the lawyer in the jury, and what took place in the room. It thus appears that the conviction of McLeod, together with the sentence of the judge, has unhinged Krupp's mind. He was considered unsafe and A. Schumeker, J. P., committed him to the Walkerton jail, preparatory to his removal to an asylum for the insane.—Walkerton Telescope.

An awful accident befel a farmer named Geo. Langdon, of Normanby, on Wednesday of last week in Mr. W. H. Ryan's bush near Pike Lake, where he was at work cutting down trees. The unfortunate man had cut through a tree which in falling knocked a limb off a tree standing near by and struck his head with such force that the whole top of the skull above the ears was literally swept off. Some fellow workman saw the accident and gave the alarm, but death must have been instantaneous. Dr. Jones, coroner, viewed the body, as a matter of form, but no inquest was deemed necessary. The victim of the accident will be remembered by our readers as having given evidence in the Coutts' inquest here last fall, he being the person to whom Coutts alleged to have given his child. A widow and a large family of helpless children are left behind in destitute circumstances, as deceased was but a poor tenant farmer.—Mt. Forest Rep.

The new company have 200 men ready for business, and seems intent on securing its rights. Doubtless when it tries to obtain passage over the C. P. R. it will find another snag.

CHOOSING A SWEETHEART.

Choose your sweetheart, carefully and tenderly, my dear girls, says a writer in the Ladies' Home Journal. Remember he is to be more than this to you some day—he is to be your husband, for surely you are not one of the girls who have a sweetheart here and there, and gives a little love to one and a little love to that one, until when the real one appears the bloom is gone from the peach and you cannot give him what he offers he deserves. Girls know very quickly when one means more than ordinary friendship for you. You have an instinct that tells you that this big good looking fellow is come sweethearting, and that the time for you to study him a little. Think out if his temper and your temper are certain to agree well together; think if his tastes and yours are alike, or if they can grow to be so, for you, little women, if you want to be happy in your married life, you must lean on the great and wonderful virtue of adaptability. You must choose your heart as you do a new gown, so it will wear well; but you want it to last longer than a winter; he must last through the long summer, days when the sun shines, and through the winter ones, and before you put your hands in his and tell him that you are willing to fight out the battle of life together, think it all over without prejudice. Remember that you are choosing a sweetheart not for a day or a year, but for all through life and, please God, if you love each other enough, for all through death.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—The great revolutions which medicine and surgery have undergone within the last half of this century, the development of disease, the development of constitutions favoured by exposure and hardships, are not to be feared, by their own care, as well. Holloway's remedies afford a safe and easy means of cure for those chronic and local maladies which are frequently superadded by tradition, ignorance, circumstance and by incautious exposure. The Ointment is a wonderfully efficacious application, as it cleanses the surface sores and ulcers, soothes the throbbing pain in cases of inflammation, and arrests the progress of skin diseases. To purify the blood, cleanse the liver, remove all noxious matter from the

MR. MOWAT AND LOCAL OPTION.

(Tuesday's World.)

Chief Justice Cale yesterday quashed a local option bylaw on the ground that the authority for permitting the passage of such bylaws belongs to the Dominion and not the Provincial Government.

We have all along argued that the amendment to the Crooks Act permitting municipalities to pass local option bylaws was simply a sop thrown to extreme temperance men, who are ever ready to accept anything wearing the blessed name of prohibition. It seemed evident that the prohibition of the liquor traffic in small municipalities—while on all sides it was legalized by license—would only end in confusion and injury to the cause it was professedly designed to further. It was doomed to certain failure in five municipalities where it was carried with majorities of 15 or under. But however great the majority the bylaw might have in any municipality the influences that would bear against its enforcement and the encroachment of legitimate traffic from the surrounding townships would prevent it from having any good effect worth mentioning.

Sir Thomas Galt's decision will doubtless end the local option agitation in the score of townships where it is about to go to vote. There is one point worthy of note. It is some time now since Mr. Mowat figured as the champion of provincial rights. Is it not possible that he may have been writing lines for a new appearance in his favorite role? There was no particular demand for the local option law—when framed it was impractical and could accomplish nothing, and if not boldly overstepping provincial jurisdiction it bordered suspiciously close upon the exclusive right of the Dominion Government to prohibit a traffic that the province could only regulate in detail and tax at will. Perhaps Mr. Mowat contemplates another strike for wider powers, and the local option amendment may have been passed, not for practical use, but to test a principle in the superior courts.

EAST GARAFRAXA COUNCIL.

The council met at Marsville on March 21st, according to adjournment. All the members present. Minutes of last meeting read and adopted. A by-law was passed appointing a local Board of Health, and medical Health Officer for the township.

Moved by Mr. Carroll, seconded by Mr. Turner, that leave be given to introduce a by-law to authorize and empower the trustees of union school [illegible] Garafraxa, and [illegible] by [illegible] ants [illegible] order for the same, viz.—Rowell & Hutchinson, bank forms, $6 60; J. Robinson, $1 00; A. Burnett, $1 50; Clerk, drawing collector's bond, $1.00.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Carroll, seconded by Mr. Carroll, that this council do now adjourn to meet again at Anthony's hotel, Marsville, on Saturday, 30th of May, at 10 o'clock a. m., as a Court of Revision on the assessment.—Carried.

JOHN PRESTON, Clerk.

An anomalous state of things exists on the great lakes in the matter of ice blockades. The Straits of Mackinaw are clear, or so nearly open that steamers could undoubtedly force their way through what little ice remains, but the lower part of the St. Clair River is blockaded by an ice jam that may last for weeks. Usually the straits remain closed long after the St. Clair River is open, and the passage between Lake Huron and Lake Michigan is often first forced by vessels which have gone up from Buffalo through the rivers.

Hughens was provided upon to put down the minutes.

As usual there were calls upon the civic coffer had from T. MacAdam, $3.90, ordered to be paid; A. Turner, $1.25, referred to T. P. committee; Advertiser, $20, referred to Printing committee; T. MacAdam, $1.95, ref. to T. P. committee; W. Franklin, $3 20 referred to R. & B. committee.

Dr. Henry, medical health officer, wrote to inform the council that arrangements had been made for the removal of night-soil.

WANTED TO RESIGN.

Ald. Ketchum sent in his resignation as a member of the board of health. It will be remembered that he was appointed at a meeting of the council when he was not present. No one would move that his resignation be accepted, so he moved the resolution himself. The mayor ruled the motion out of order, as Ald. Ketchum, the mover, was an interested party. Mr. K. thought it was an imposition to make him serve as a member of the board when he did not want to. His resignation was not accepted.

$50 FOR THE INSTITUTE.

President Foulds and Secretary Hewat of the mechanics' institute asked for the annual grant. They said the institute had done a great deal of good since the free reading-room was started, and that the best of literature is always on file. Ald. Ketchum was of a very liberal disposition and moved that the grant be increased to $60. The other members, however, thought $50 was sufficient and the latter sum was granted.

SABBATH DESECRATION.

A communication was received from J. S. Leighton regarding the desecration of the Lord's day in town. Attached to the letter was a resolution passed at the vestry meeting of St. Mark's church. It complained about trains running on Sunday, etc. The clerk was instructed to send a copy of the resolution to the superintendents of the C. P. R.

Chairman Adamson read the R. & B. report, which showed that $22 97½ had been expended repairing sidewalks so far this season; and $50 be placed to the committee's credit. After a little debate, $25 was placed in the report instead of $50.

STREET LIGHTING.

Ald. Fiddis brought down the report of the Street Lighting committee and moved its adoption. The report said the committee had notified Contractor McDonald to appear at the town hall several nights ago, but that he failed to materialize. A letter from the Orangeville Electric Light & Power Co. was attached to the report offering to renew the street lighting contract at the same rates as the present contract. At a later stage the council went into com. of the whole. Ald. Fiddis thought it was proper to get light as cheaply as possible and probably other companies would do it a great deal cheaper than the present offer. After several more suggestions it was decided to correspond with other municipalities and obtain all the information possible.

NO EXTRA LIGHTS.

Ald. Fiddis, seconded by Deputy reeve Endacott, moved that the Street Lighting committee be empowered to make arrangements for placing a lamp opposite the stone mill on Mill street. A vote was taken, 6 voting for the motion and 1 against. As it required a two-thirds vote to carry the motion the resolution was defeated.

CIVIC CHIPS.

Reeve Lindsay said the Finance committee would report on interest on borrowed money at the next meeting.

The deputy-reeve drew the attention of the chairman of the R. & B. to the dangerous state of the sidewalk on Faulkner street. It will be repaired.

The mayor produced the auditors' report on police court fines and found that $60 was still due the town. Fines to the amount of $102 50 still remain uncollected. An explanation will be made at the next meeting.

Deputy reeve Simpson met with an accident at the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. Henry McGowan, lot 10, con. 13, East Garafraxa, on Sunday morning last. One of Mr. McGowan's horses took sick and Mr. Simpson went to assist him in caring for the animal. In some manner the animal fell on Mr. Simpson and injured him severely, his left arm being badly sprained. We hope the genial deputy-reeve will soon be himself again.

ENDACOTT BROS.

We have received a letter from Mr. D. Bell of Brampton, who is at present at Montague, Texas. Mr. Bell says he is manufacturing a self binder that makes its own rope from straw and that he will have one of them in Canada before long.

Aristotype is the name of a new and beautiful style of picture now made by W. Still of Orangeville. It surpasses anything yet produced in the photographic line. Anyone having photos taken at Still's can have them finished by this process.

PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY.—W. C. Adair, having rented the photographic business of Gale & Co., south side of Broadway, will show something new and novel in photography in a few days. Don't fail to call and see samples of his work before sitting elsewhere.

NEW FRUIT STORE.—Mr. Frank Cousins, a pushing young business man, intends opening up a confectionery and fruit store in the shop lately occupied by J. W. Young. Mr. Cousins will keep a first class stock and he should be liberally patronized by the citizens of this town.

THE BAND REORGANIZED.—A meeting was held in the council chamber on Tuesday evening for the purpose of reorganizing the Citizens' band. Mayor Walsh presided and a large attendance was present. After considering every thing it was decided to advertise for a bandmaster. The band will be reorganized in a very short time.

[illegible] will be greatly missed by his many friends in town.

JOE THE CARTOONIST.—Joe Lemon of Amaranth and an old resident of this town became entangled in a dispute in the Elgin house one day last week and during the frenzy both participants were pretty badly used up. Joe has signed he was in Africa and when he had his opponent on the floor he proceeded to make a meal off his face. Chief Shields has summoned them to appear at the police court to-morrow afternoon.

THE LAWLESS AGE IN IT.—Referring to the Bagnell Bros. foundry difficulty, the Brampton Banner sarcastically remarks: The sheriff's sale announced to take place at the foundry to-day has been postponed for one week on an order from Judge Fleming. There are better prospects, at the present moment, of a first-class legal fight, and every lawyer in town having a hand in it, than there are that the company will be enabled to make a start.

DON'T GRUMBLE.—A carping spirit rarely goes with a working spirit. It is easier to find fault with what some one else does than it is to do something one's self; hence a man who enjoys doing the easier thing is disinclined to do the harder one. As a rule, men are divided into the two classes of those who grow and those who work; and each class is alike devoted to its own mission. But when it comes to the relative work in the community of the two classes, everybody can see the difference.

ROUTE BILLS.—THE SUN is better prepared than ever to turn out first-class route bills, and horsemen may rely on getting work equal, if not superior to that done in cities. We have a larger and better stock of type and cuts than any other office north of Toronto. Compare a bill printed at this office and one done elsewhere and you will come to the conclusion that THE SUN's Job Department cannot be beaten for work of the highest order. Call around and see our great assortment of cuts.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.—The editor of our contemporary, the Post, had a very unpleasant experience last Friday afternoon. Constable Hurst of Brampton called around and placed him under arrest on a charge of criminally libelling John Willoughby of Caledon. Bail was secured and the quill-driver was set at liberty. On Monday the preliminary hearing took place at Brampton and the luckless editor was ordered to stand his trial at the Peel assizes which open at Brampton next week. It is altogether likely a settlement will be arrived at.

WHO CAN BEAT THIS?—Census Enumerator Jas. B. Reid of East Garafraxa had a novel experience the other day and probably no other enumerator in the Dominion can record a similar event. He dropped into a certain house and asked the questions prescribed. In the house there lived two brothers and two sisters and there combined ages are 306 years. The brothers' ages are 80 and 78 respectively and the sisters' 76 and 72. If any other enumerator can beat this we would like to hear from him.

LANSDOWNES REORGANIZE.—A meeting of the members of the Young Lansdowne lacrosse club was held in their rooms, west Broadway, on Monday evening. After discussing the prospects for this season's campaign, the following officers were elected: John Aiken, hon. pres.; Andrew Jones, hon. vice-pres.; Walker Kearns, pres.; Jas. C. Henry, vice pres.; Walter Henry, secretary; John Irving, treasurer; Ernest McGuire, capt.; Alex Hardling, field-captain, Willie Irvine, Fred Menary, Albert Martin, committee.

THE CHIEF'S REQUEST.—Mrs. Coutts, wife of the insane Mt. Forest child-murderer, has been in town for several weeks past soliciting quarters, dimes and nickles, and she has not been unsuccessful in the pursuit of the root of all evil. Chief Shields, the kind-hearted guardian of the law, imagined she was unnecessarily prolonging her stay in town so he accompanied her to the G. P. R. depot on Friday and saw her safely on board the cars. Mrs. Coutts said she would alight at Mt. Forest, her former home.

KIRKLAND ASSAULTED.—A case of trivial importance came up for ventilation at the police court on Saturday John Kirkland charged Bill Nelson and Sam Snell, two Mono farmers, with assault. From the evidence it appears that Kirkland was doorkeeper at Lesson's famous hostelry and the defendants desired to make their exit from the door that was guarded by the stalwart John. John resisted their onslaught and a scuffle ensued, which resulted in a victory for the tyler. The case was not proven to be an aggravated one and was kept and any person violating the rules of the club will be prosecuted. The members of the club are: James Crozier, Henry Crozier, T. N. Williamson, George Kerleigh, Orangeville; R. Gotwalock, R. G. Davidson, William Fisher, Toronto; William Stubbs, James Dick, Caledon; D. Elliott, Brampton.

TRUANCY ACT.—Foremost among the important measures affecting education now before the Assembly is the Truancy Act which has passed its second reading. The bill provides for the appointment of a truant officer by the police commissioners in each municipality. This officer's duty it shall be to catch and make a dire example of any ill-fated small boy detected "playing hookey" during school hours, but such detection will perhaps be the least of his cares. The children who are kept at home for their parents' convenience and wade hewers of wood and drawers of water with no chance of becoming anything else will be looked after, and to these little drudges who are numerous enough in some localities the truant officer will come as an angel of deliverance. The enforcement of the Truancy Act involves of necessity the furnishing of text books free or at a nominal cost per pupil. The main excuse for non-attendance is inability to purchase books, and till the compulsory legislation is in the world will not remove the difficulty. In Hamilton the free text book system has been some time in practice, and the teachers report it a success and on the whole a measure of great economy. If Truancy Act passes, the towns and cities of the Province will certainly have to follow in the footsteps of Hamilton. The rural municipalities may find some way of dodging the difficulty, though the need of reform is perhaps greater there than in the towns.

GRAND VALLEY.

(Star.)

The saw-mill has started again.

The C. P. R. intend making several improvements at Grand Valley station this summer. The company have just completed a deal with Mr. Jas. Davey for one and one-half acres of land on south side of track on which they intend laying a siding at once. They will also enlarge the cattle pen which at present, owing to the large quantity of stock which is shipped, is much too small.

On Friday evening the village was startled by the report that a child had been found on the side of the railway track, about 3 miles west of the station here. About two o'clock on Friday afternoon Mr. Robt. Dickson, post master at Feesbaun, was walking along the track, and when about 30 rods east of the sideroad at Mr. Andrew Richardson's, he observed a parcel lying at one side of the track, about six feet from the rails, which at once aroused his curiosity. The parcel was done up with a sheet of grey paper on the outside and tied on by a cord. Mr. Dickson thinking that the package to be goods of some kind and probably dropped off the train at once began to investigate. He unfastened the cord, took off the paper wrapping and found a woman's undergarment surrounding a tin tobacco box, the box being about 1 foot in length. He then opened the tin, which was fastened with small nails, and a black woollen scarf or shawl appeared, and on lifting the scarf he was horror stricken to behold the remains of a female infant, which was crushed into the box of such small dimensions. Mr. Dickson replaced the wrappings, laid the box down where found and proceeded to Mr. Richardson's and secured a basket, taking Mr. Richardson along with him, they went for the box and brought it to Grand Valley. The coroner being away from home the box was placed under the care of Constable McDonald. The coroner being apprised of what had been found, on Saturday afternoon, on the affidavit of Robert Dickson that he believed the infant came to its death by violent means, an inquest was held with a jury empaneled, the evidence corroborating the facts as above stated. The jury considered that it was necessary to have a post mortem examination and the inquest was adjourned until 7 o'clock this Wednesday evening. Whether the box was thrown from the train or was placed there is a mystery. The box bore the marks of a number, and whether any evidence can be produced from that it is difficult to say.

The roads are drying up quickly and seeding has commenced in earnest.

Sugar-making has abruptly come to a close on account of the warmness of the weather.

What has happened our baseball club? Did it receive its death-blow last 1st of July? Let its early sleep be undisturbed. The young men of Glenoe are said to be anxious to win another cup.

The sporting spirits of Glenoe (a hamlet a little north of here) are to be congratulated on the completion of their club house. It stands on the corner of Mr. D. McKim's place. Although the architect is a local man and the contractor inexperienced, the building is admitted to be a fair specimen of rural ingenuity.

ADVERTISING DIDN'T PAY HIM.

Some months ago we reprinted in the district news column an advertisement for a wife which had appeared in a Muskoka paper and had been pretty widely copied as a curiosity by exchanges. Those of our readers who noticed the item may not be unwilling to hear the upshot of the affair. The advertiser was a young Muskoka farmer, owning 200 acres of land, a house and some stock. Youth, good looks and ability to work where the desideratum he required in the unknown being other whom his lonely soul, his buttonless shirts and his unwashed dishes cried out from the winter solitudes of the north. The "ad" had perfect good faith written all over the face of it. An Orillia young man saw the thing, and resolved to have a bushel of fun out of the aspirant. He wrote, enclosed a photograph—the prettiest he could buy no doubt—and made a sweeping conquest of the willing victim. The correspondence grew and flourished as the scripture says like a young bay tree. An engagement was the speedy result and the day of meeting was at length appointed. The longing lover in Muskoka looked forward with a bosom bursting with rapture to the day when he should alight at Orillia station and stand face to face with the fair one of his photograph. Half the young people in Orillia shared his joyous anticipations, and when the auspicious hour arrived one day last week at least 300 calm and decorous young people stood round the platform waiting his advent. The young lady was absent, but the bad young man was on hand to explain that she was out of town and would return next day, and the victim was escorted to a hotel. When our informant left next day he was still contentedly awaiting the arrival of the joy of his life, and answering all sorts of questions very amiably.—O. S. Advertiser.

Our local inventor and electrician, A. G. Hunter, has received notice from the president of the Inventor's academy, in Paris, France, that after examination of his inventions, more especially, his recent electrical invention, the Academy has conferred on him the title of "Corresponding Honorary Member of the Academy," with which is connected a First Class Diploma and Gilded Medal. This will give our townsman the benefit of free access and correspondence in connection with inventions and patents, with the Parisian Inventor's Academy. This honorific title entails no expense on Mr. Hunter, and has been conferred on him without any solicitation whatever on his part. Not often is a citizen of a remote Canadian village honored so highly by a foreign Society. We congratulate our townsman on his success. Truly an inventor is not without honor, save in his own country and among his own people. —Dundalk Herald

McTavish was presented with a handsome split bamboo fishing rod, basket, &c., and an address, showing the high esteem in which he is held by his brother Foresters. The presentation was a complete surprise to the recipient, Bro. McTavish replied in very appropriate terms, thanking them for their presents, and admitting that had he been consulted in the matter of selecting presents for himself these would have been the very articles.

Considerable money has been made out of fast horses, but it is not often that trotting dogs net their owners a large sum of money. Willie Ketchum's trotting dog "Doc", an Irish setter, has proved very valuable to his owner. The dog was shown at nearly all the big fairs up to the close of last season, earning for his master $9,000. For a half interest $10,000 has been offered and refused. "Doc" is already booked for all next season at big prices, and for the World's Fair he is engaged for five weeks at $500 per week.

On Saturday last Levi Krupp, of Formosa, was brought in to the Walkerton jail, he being of unsound mind. He was one of the petit jury that convicted Donald McLeod, jr., of arson, at the recent assizes. Last Wednesday he showed indications that his mind was unhinged, his talk had reference to God, the Judge and the lawyers, the jury, and what took place in the jury room. It thus appears that the conviction of McLeod, together with the sentence of the judge, has unhinged Krupp's mind. He was considered unsafe by A. Schumeker, J. P., committed him to the Walkerton jail, preparatory to his removal to an asylum for the insane.—Walkerton Telescope.

An awful accident befel a farmer named Geo. Laugdon, of Normanby, on Wednesday of last week in Mr. W. Ryan's bush near Pike Lake, where he was at work cutting down trees. The unfortunate man had cut through a tree which in falling knocked a limb off a tree standing near by and it struck his head with such force that the whole top of the skull above the ears was literally swept off. Some fellow workman saw the accident and gave the alarm, but death must have been instantaneous. Dr. Jones, coroner, viewed the body, as a matter of form, but no inquest was deemed necessary. The victim of the accident will be remembered by our readers as having given evidence in the Coutts' inquest here last fall, he being the person to whom Coutts alleged to have given his child. A widow and a large family of helpless children are left behind in destitute circumstances, as deceased was but a poor tenant farmer.—Mt. Forest Rep.

Now Free From Pain.

DEAR SIRS—I have been troubled with Lame Back for about six months, and thought I would try Hagyard's Yellow Oil, which cured me. Am now free from all pains, and recommend Yellow Oil very highly.

"FRANK PALMER,
—Innes, Ont.

"That boy will make his mark yet," said the patronizing stranger.

"Begorrah, this an' that some be wid him," replied the proud father with some indignation. "He kin write most as good as his father now."

CHOOSING A SWEETHE

Choose your sweetheart, carefully and tenderly, my dear girls, says a writer in the Ladies' Home Journal. Remember he is to be more than this to you some day—he is to be your husband, for surely you are not one of the girls who have a sweetheart here and one there, and gives a little love to one and a little love to that one, until when the real one appears the poor girl is blown is gone from the peach and cannot give him what he offers her. The girls know very quickly when a man means more than ordinary friendship for them. You have an instinct that tells you that this big good looking fellow is some sweetheating, and that that time for you to study him a little. Think out if his temper and your temper will get together; think if his tastes and yours are alike, for they can grow to be so, for you are little women, if you want to be happy in your married life, you must learn the great and wonderful virtue of flexibility. You must choose your sweetheart as you do a new gown, so that it will wear well; but you want his longer than a winter; he must be with you through the long summer days, through the winter ones, and before you put your hands in his and tell him that you are willing to fight out the battle of life together, think it all over well. Remember that you are choosing a sweetheart not for a day or a year, but for all through life and, please God, if you love each other enough, for beyond death.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—The great curatives which soothers and quiets the nervous system when the disease, the development of a cure favored by exposure and hardships is to be feared, by their own careful use. Holloway's remedies afford easy means of cure for those complaints and local maladies which frequently engendered by residence in a healthy climate and by incautious living. The Ointment is a wonderfully efficacious application, as it cleanses the surface of sores and ulcers, soothes the throbbing pain in cases of inflammation, and stops the progress of skin diseases. Through purifying the blood, cleanse the liver, and remove all noxious matter from the system.

Our Homes.—The April issue of Our Homes, a large [illegible] 32 page magazine, announces that in order to increase their circulation they are willing to [illegible] one year's profits to this end, and to every one who, offer competitions in which they give cash rewards to those taking part. One of these competitions is now in progress and closes on April 25th. In addition to the large amount given in cash on their general prize list, they offer as an extra inducement the following special cash prizes: During the weeks ending April 11th and 18th they offer daily cash prizes of $50 for the first named week, and $100 for the latter. For the week ending April 25th they offer daily cash prizes of $25, and a prize of $100 for the week. These exceedingly generous prizes are in addition to the general prize list, and the person who gets one of the special rewards may also get a large prize in the general list. No other magazine publishers have ever made such a liberal offer, and as the competition only remains open three more weeks you should avail yourself of the liberal offer at once. Send 10 cents in stamps for a sample copy of Our Homes and complete particulars of the competition. Address Our Homes Publishing Co., Brockville, Ont.

At no season in the year is cold in the head and catarrh more prevalent than during April. To neglect either means misery and perhaps fatal results. Nasal Balm is the only certain remedy for these dangerous diseases, and as a precautionary remedy should be kept in every household. Nasal Balm has cured thousands of sufferers—It will cure you. Try it.

CHOOSING A SWEETHEART.

Choose your sweetheart, carefully, wisely and tenderly, my dear girls, says a writer in the Ladies' Home Journal. Remember he is to be more than even this to you some day—he is to be your husband, for surely you are not one of the girls who have a sweetheart here and one there, and gives a little love to this one and a little long to that one, until when the real one appears the perfect bloom is gone from the peach and she cannot give him what he offers her. Holloway's Ointment.—The great climate variations which soldiers and sailors experience render them liable to a variety of diseases, the development of which is favoured by exposure and hardships—often, it is to be feared, by their own carelessness as well. Holloway's remedies afford a safe and easy means of cure for those constitutional and local maladies which are so frequently engendered by residence in unhealthy climates and by incautious living. The Ointment is a wonderfully healing application, as it cleanses the surface of foul sores and ulcers, soothes the throbbing and pain in cases of inflammation, and checks the progress of skin diseases. The Pills purify the blood, cleanse the liver, and remove all noxious matter from the system.

By a new law of the State of Victoria, Australia, habitual drunkenness is made sufficient cause for divorce from either husband or wife. The Journal of Inebriety remarks on the law.—This is a clear anticipation of the higher sentiments which demands relief from the barbarous laws that would hold marriage with an inebriate as fixed and permanent.

The kola nut has been highly recommended as a substitute for both tea and coffee. It possesses stimulating properties, but has almost no tannin. It grows in Brazil, the West Indies and Africa. If bits of the nut are chewed they produce in a short time an effect similar to intoxication, though not followed by the evil results of a "drunk."

Keep the Works in good order.

Newman, Ont., January 25, 1890.

W. H. Comstock, Brockville, Ont.

Dear Sir,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time piece; frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but if you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.

Yours faithfully,
H. F. Atwell.

Dear Sir,—For many years, I have been a firm believer in your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills." Not with a blind faith, but a confidence wrought by an actual personal experience of their value and merit. My business is such that I spend much of my time away from home, and I would not consider my travelling outfit complete without a box of Morse's Pills.

Yours, &c.,

CHOOSING A SWEETHEART.

Choose your sweetheart, carefully, wisely and tenderly, my dear girls, says a writer in the Ladies' Home Journal. Remember he is to be more than even this to you some day—he is to be your husband, for surely you are not one of the girls who have a sweetheart here and one there, and gives a little love to this one and a little love to that one, until when the real one appears the perfect bloom is gone from the peach and she cannot give him what he offers her. You girls know very quickly when a man means more than ordinary friendship for you. You have an instinct that tells you that this big good looking fellow has come sweethearting, and that that is the time for you to study him a little bit. Think out if his temper and yours are certain to agree well together; think out if his tastes and yours are alike, or if they can grow to be so, for you know, little women, if you want to be happy in your married life, you must learn the great and wonderful virtue of adaptability. You must choose your sweetheart as you do a new gown, so that he will wear well; but you want him for longer than a winter; he must last through the long summer days and through the winter ones, and before you put your hands in his and tell him that you are willing to fight out the battle of life together, think it all over well and remember that you are choosing your sweetheart not for a day or a year but for all through life and, please God, if you love each other enough, for after death.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—The great climate variations which soldiers and sailors experience render them liable to a variety of diseases, the development of which is favoured by exposure and hardships—often, it is to be feared, by their own carelessness as well. Holloway's remedies afford a safe and easy means of cure for those constitutional and local maladies which are so frequently engendered by residence in unhealthy climates and by incautious living. The Ointment is a wonderfully healing application, as it cleanses the surface of foul sores and ulcers, soothes the throbbing and pain in cases of inflammation, and checks the progress of skin diseases. The Pills purify the blood, cleanse the liver, and remove all noxious matter from the system.

By a new law of the State of Victoria, Australia, habitual drunkenness is made sufficient cause for divorce from either husband or wife. The Journal of Inebriety remarks on the law:—This is a clear anticipation of the higher sentiments which demands relief from the barbarous laws that would hold marriage with an inebriate as fixed and permanent.

The kola nut has been highly recommended as a substitute for both tea and coffee. It possesses stimulating properties, but has almost no tannin. It grows in Brazil, the West Indies and Africa. If bits of the nut are chewed they produce in a short time an effect similar to intoxication, though not followed by the evil results of a drunk.

Keep the Works in good order.

W. H. COURTICE, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time piece; frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but—it you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.

Yours faithfully, H. F. ATWELL.

DEAR SIR,—For many years, I have been a firm believer in your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills." Not with a blind faith, but a confidence wrought by an actual personal experience of their value and merit. My business is such that I spend much of my time away from home, and I would not consider my travelling outfit complete without a box of Morse's Pills. Yours, &c.

FASHION NOTES.

Steel trimmings are reserved for most dressy wraps.

Snakes are considered most appropriate ornaments for hats.

Some of the most freakish sashes are adapted next, as, for instance, in the new bonnets.

Ruches are used for the bottoms of dresses. They flatter out from under the Vandyck points.

"Edinburgs" is the name given to some new crochets made for babies learning how to use their teeth.

Some of the new gowns that are bordered with ribbon show the latter caught with fancy "nail heads."

Women who are fond of chewing gum, should remember that the habit is sure to give an ugly twist to the mouth.

"Trilaun pansies" are having a great vogue in Paris. The [illegible] certain to agree well together; think out if his tastes and yours are alike, or if they can grow to be so, for you know, little women, if you want to be happy in your married life, you must learn the great and wonderful virtue of adaptability. You must choose your sweetheart as you do a new gown, so that he will wear well; but you want him for longer than a winter; he must last through the long summer days and through the winter ones, and before you put your hands in his and tell him that you are willing to fight out the battle of life together, think it all over well and remember that you are choosing your sweetheart not for a day or a year but for all through life and, please God, if you love each other enough, for after death.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—The great climate variations which soldiers and sailors experience render them liable to a variety of diseases, the development of which is favoured by exposure and hardships—often, it is to be feared, by their own carelessness as well. Holloway's remedies afford a safe and easy means of cure for those constitutional and local maladies which are so frequently engendered by residence in unhealthy climates and by incautious living. The Ointment is a wonderfully healing application, as it cleanses the surface of foul sores and ulcers, soothes the throbbing and painful pains of inflammation, and checks the progress of skin diseases. The Pills purify the blood, cleanse the liver, and remove all noxious matter from the system.

By a new law of the State of Victoria, Australia, habitual drunkenness is made sufficient cause for divorce from either husband or wife. The Journal of Inebriety remarks on the law:—This is a clear anticipation of the higher sentiments which demands relief from the barbarous laws that would hold marriage with an inebriate as fixed and permanent.

The kola nut has been highly recommended as a substitute for both tea and coffee. It possesses stimulating properties, but has almost no tannin. It grows in Brazil, the West Indies and Africa. If bits of the nut are chewed they produce in a short time an effect similar to intoxication, though not followed by the evil results of a "drunk."

Keep the Works in good order.

NORWICH, Ont., January 15, 1890.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time piece; frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign matter adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but—all you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.

Yours faithfully,
H. F. ARNELL.

DEAR SIR,—For many years, I have been a firm believer in your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills." Not with a blind faith, but a confidence wrought by an actual personal experience of their value and merit. My business is such that I spend much of my time away from home, and I would not consider my travelling outfit complete without a box of Morse's Pills.

I was mighty good-looking when I was young,

With fellows a-courtin' me every night,
'Specially Jim.

The likeliest one of 'em all was he,
Chipper and hev'sum' an trim;
But I teased up my hand an' made fun o' the crowd,
'Specially Jim.

I said I hadn't no 'pinion to spare,
An' I wouldn't take stock in him;
But they hug' an a-coaxing, in spite o' my talk,
'Specially Jim.

I got so tired o' hearin' 'em roar'
(Specially Jim!)
I made up my min' I'd settle down,
An' take up with him.

So we was married one Sunday in church
'Twas crowded full to the brim;
'Twas the only way to get rid o' 'em all,
Specially Jim.

THE LABORER'S SONG.

I can be happy, if any one can—
I wrong no woman and rob no man;
I have no riches—my only wealth
Is health-producing, robust health.
I never was in a condition to hoard,
And yet I've a nest from a friend at my hand,
And a kindly welcome for all who come
To my humble and poor, but cosy home.
I can go man's debtor—I pay my way,
And while my little ones round me play,
I look every wife in loving and hail,
And prouder than any prince I feel.

Steel trimmings are reserved for married women.

Sashes are considered most appropriate ornaments for hats.

Some of the most fashionable modes are adopted now, as, for instance, in the new bonnets.

Brushes are used for the bottoms of dresses. They flutter out from under tiny Vandyck points.

"Edinburgs" is the name given to some new crackers made for babies bearing hard to use their teeth.

Some of the new gowns that are bordered with ribbon show the latter caught with fancy "nail heads."

Women who are fond of chewing gum should remember that the habit is sure to give an ugly twist to the mouth.

"Trianon panier" are having a great go" in Paris. They are only suitable for Dresden china looking silks and slender girls.

Fashionable women when paying visits carry a spray or branch of some flower. This is carried in the hand, and is useful to play with in place of a fan.

It is fashionable when dining or supping at restaurants to use claret glasses for champagne. To practise this custom at home would argue the non-possession of the proper ones.

Some of the costumes which were worn at the Opera Garden (London) fancy dress ball were most novel. One was composed of oyster shells, another of photographs, and still another consisted of nothing but satin pictures cards.

A certain restaurant which boasts an old and respected name is a free rendezvous for dinner after the theater. Of

For my dominion however great.

I have my trials and care, 'tis true,
But has not the monarch his troubles, too?
'Tis seldom, that care dewaps his brow,
And I sing ten songs to his one, I know.
My couch is rude, but my sleep is sweet,
I have clothes to wear and enough to eat;
I've a conscience clean and a mind at ease,
And where is the king that can boast of these?

SUNBEAMS.

The war with Italy seems to be all write.

A bad boy is often hand-cuffed by his parents.

The interest you take in another man's business is never profitable.

Women are cruel to dumb animals. No woman will wilfully step on a mouse.

When your friend isn't inclined to talk, the wisest thing you can do is to listen to him.

"I can't see," said Jimmieboy, "why fish have to be cleaned. They're in bathing all the time."

The pussy-willow forces the season, but she's prudent; she always wears her furs.

There is one business industry that has some snap to it even in dull times—the whip manufacture.

It should be very easy for a detective to get on the trail of a woman now, if she is at all in the fashion.

Strange that everybody should kick about having snow in April and yet want to have ice in July.

A California inventor has built a boat made entirely of soap. It ought to be just the thing for a scrub-race.

He, gazing at the stars—"I wonder which are the evil stars?" She—"The ones that wink. Certainly such conduct is very reprehensible."

Smith—They say that Brown's wife goes through his pockets. Jones—Nonsence. A woman of her size can hardly go through a barn door.

"I see father is behind us," said the eloping girl to her sweetheart by her side. "I always thought he was a stern parent," was the prompt reply.

When a girl has a handsome new solitaire diamond engagement ring, the thought involuntarily comes to her mind how foolish it is for women to wear gloves so much.

Pertman—"I think something ought to be done to protect poets; they have a hard time of it." Van Leer—"What would you suggest?" Pertman—"They might be brought under the game laws—only to be shot during the spring poem and beautiful snow season."

"What place is it," asked the Sabbath school teacher, "where the worm dieth not?"

"Oh, that's a chestnut," answered the bad boy in the back row.

"What was the idea of dressing the little pages at the Revere wedding like a Western Desperado?"

"Oh, he was to hold up the train, you know."

"Your husband is of retiring disposition," remarked one of Mrs. DePoque's friends.

"Indeed he is," replied the good woman with a sigh. "Sometimes it's all I can do to keep him from [illegible]

John Bull—Hello, what makes you so stuck up?

Uncle Sam—Why my dear fellow, I have risen to the dignity of having a war scare.

"I liked your sermon so much to day," said the old woman to the clergyman.

"Indeed?" said he, evidently pleased.

"Yes," she went on; "it reminded me so much of one I read when I was a girl.

"By Jove!" said the museum man, turning pale.

"What's the matter, Rupert?" asked his wife.

"I forgot to send the dog-faced boy any supper, and he is locked up in the same cage with the ossified man."

First Merchant—The base ball season will soon be open.

Second Merchant—Yes. What a terrible mortality will ensue in the families of our clerks; aunts, uncles, grandfathers and grandmothers will die daily.

Spring Cleaning.

Be particular every Spring to clean the house, but never mind cleansing the blood until some troublesome disease takes hold of you. This is poor policy when by using Burdock Blood Bitters the blood will be thoroughly cleansed, the body strengthened and future suffering prevented.

FASHION NOTES.

Gold [illegible] are reserved for morning costume.

Sashes are considered most appropriate accessories to the dress.

Some of the most fashionable parties are adopted now, as, for instance, in the new bonnets.

Leather can cast for the bottoms of dresses. They flutter out from under long Vandyck points.

"Edinburgh" is the name given to some new crackers made for ladies learning how to use their teeth.

Some of the new gowns that are bordered with ribbon show the latter caught with fancy "nail heads."

Women who are fond of chewing gum should remember that the habit is sure to give an ugly twist to the mouth.

"Trianon panniers" are having a great go" in Paris. They are only suitable for Dresden china, looking silks and slender girls.

Fashionable women when paying visits carry a spray or branch of some flower. This is carried in the hand, and is useful to play with in place of a fan.

It is fashionable when dining or supping at restaurants to use claret glasses for champagne. To practice this custom at home would argue the non-possession of the proper ones.

Some of the costumes which were worn at the Covent Garden (London) fancy dress ball were most novel. One was composed of oyster shells, another of photographs, and still another consisted of nothing but cattle pictures cards.

A certain restaurant which boasts an old and respected name is a fine rendezvous for dudes after the theater. Of course they are accompanied by duchesses but, thank goodness! the latter have no pockets in which to hide their self conscious hands.

The striking costume of a young woman at an Easter festivity was a plain black velvet dress with low bodice, the velvet resting against the skin, and a diamond ornament in the middle of the corsage—a bird about as large as a sparrow with one wing folded and the other open.

SHE WAS CONFUSED.

A Surprisingly Interesting Little Story of a Mongolian Beauty.

The arrival of the China steamer Gaelic recently brought a handsome Chinese girl, apparently not much over 19 years old. She had no papers, and was released on the usual writ of habeas corpus, along with a score of others. The writ was returned a few days ago, and with it the fair Ho Sing. She claimed to be married, and said that her husband lived in San Francisco. Between herself and an assistant attorney for the prosecution the following conversation ensued through an interpreter

"How old may you be?" commenced the attorney.

"Ninetteen years," was the prompt reply.

"Are you married?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where were you married?"

"In China, five years ago."

"Have you ever seen your husband?"

"No, sir. He has always been in San Francisco."

"Well, well! And is it a custom in China to marry a man without seeing him?"

"Yes, sir."

"You have never see your husband, then?"

"No, sir."

"Would it be too much to ask you to tell the Court how many children you have?"

"Two."

This answer fairly paralyzed the Court, and the almond eyed damsel was ordered to return to her children.

HOT WATER CURES.

There are but few cases of illness where water should not occupy the highest place as a medical agent. A strip of flannel or a napkin wrung out of hot water, and applied around the neck of a child that has croup, will usually bring relief in ten minutes. A towel folded several times and quickly wrung out of hot water, and applied over the seat of pain in toothache or neuralgia, will generally afford prompt relief. The treatment in colic works like magic. We have known cases that have resisted other treatment for hours yield to this in ten minutes. There is nothing that will so promptly cut sore throat or rheumatism as hot water when applied promptly and thoroughly.

[illegible] cotton batting dipped in hot [illegible] applied to sores and new [illegible] and sprains is the treatment [illegible] any hospitals. Sprained [illegible] been cured in an hour by [illegible] hot water, poured from the height of a few feet.

THE LABORER'S SONG.

I can be happy, Honey one sun—
I wrong no woman and rob no man;
I have no riches—my only wealth
Is sound good health, robust health.
I never was in a condition to hoard,
And yet I've met, one friend at my hand,
And kindly welcome for all who come
To my humble cot poor, but cosy home.

I am no man's debtor—I pay my way,
And while my little ones round me play,
I look down calm to loving and look
And prefer them any princes I look,
I pity my foes and love my friends,
And give God thanks for all He sends,
And I would not change my earthly state
For my dominion however great.

I have my trials and care, 'tis true,
But has not the monarch his troubles, too?
'Tis seldom, that care deserts his brow,
And I sing my songs to his one, I know.
My couch is rude, but my sleep is sweet,
I have clothes to wear and enough to eat;
I've a conscience clear and a mind at ease,
And where is the king that can boast of these?

Poetry.

A PLEA FOR THE BIRDS.

Gentle eyed maid with the feathers
Of gently iridescent plume,
Would you like to look dainty and pretty
At the price of a mourning bird's bier,
Or the death of a little brown robin—
A grateful reminder of spring?
Would you like to greet blossoming April
With never a bird to sing?

My dainty, your one not unfeeling,
But gentle and kind without guile;
You will weep for all down trodden creatures
Yet wear a dead bird with a smile.
O beautiful girl of the feathers,
Are velvet and ribbons and lace
Not dainty enough for your purpose,
To set off your radiant face?

But must you demand the sweet creatures
God gave us to cheer with their notes,
As they pour out the joy that is in them
From their delicate, musical throats—
Or to gladden the world with their beauty
While time they are happy and free?
Then look to the years that are coming,
And the fruits of your vanity see.

It may be, in the days of the future,
No birds will be found in the land,
Because of your thoughtless compliance
With fashions relentless command;
No flash of bright wings in the forest;
No mornings made merry with song—
But man shall remember the victims,
And lay at our threshold the wrong.

"There were birds in the ages departed"
(Even so shall the story be told),
"But because of the beautiful plumage
They were slain for the women of old.
They wished for an added adornment,
And the birds were remorselessly snared."
Oh! Would you would think of the pity,
And the lives of the birds might be spared.

OLIVE VARCOE

—OR—

TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER V. (CONTINUED)

A BITTER PETTER.

THEY made a pretty picture, standing thus, with encircling arms, her bright brown curls waving loosely on his breast, and her glowing face hiding itself there in sweet security and peace.

"Are you ever jealous now, Eleanor?" he asked suddenly.

Eleanor started, and, in her surprise and pretty maiden shame, she replied falsely, "Jealous! No, of course not; since you told me that—that you loved only me."

"I am glad you are not, Eleanor," said Sir Hilton, "because I have just had a fuss with your mother on that very point. She declares that you are still jealous of little Olive Varcoe, and she says, the poor child shall not live here when we are married; she pretends her stay would make you unhappy."

A burning red flushed Eleanor's cheek, but she replied gently, almost timidly, "Do you wish her always to live at Trewavas, Hilton?"

"Well, it is a pity to thrust a poor little creature like her into the world," he replied; "and if she is happy here, I see no reason why she should not stay."

"She may not always be happy here," said Eleanor, slily; "she may fall in love."

"Olive fall in love!"—exclaimed Sir Hilton with a strange laugh—"that child fall in love!"

"She is only two years younger than I," said Eleanor; "she is no child; she is just as capable of falling in love as any other girl."

"Not a bit of it, Nell," said Sir Hilton. "And if she did who in the world would ever like such a little elf as Olive for a wife?"

"I know someone who loves her," replied Eleanor, "some one who would marry her to-morrow."

"Not John!" exclaimed Sir Hilton, in a tone of intense amazement and vexation.

"No, not John," replied Eleanor. "Guess again."

"My dear Eleanor, I can't guess," replied he. "The absurd idea of any one liking Olive is too absurd; it is only a fancy of yours; no one would venture to marry her, with her strange ways, and her queer parentage—that is, no gentleman."

"The person I mean is a gentleman every inch," said Eleanor; "even you would own that; and I firmly believe he would be proud to make Olive his wife, in spite of all the drawbacks you name."

A curious shadow flitted over Sir Hilton's face, and his lip twitched nervously as he tried to laugh.

"Well, Eleanor," he answered, "this unknown lover is a more generous fellow than I am, that's all. I own that I would not give a girl my name, without she stood before the world without a flaw in birth, fame and lineage. If her birth were doubtful, or she had earned a character for eccentricity like Olive, I could not make her Lady Trewavas."

"Take care," said Eleanor, a little sadly; "if you talk like this, I shall think you have asked me to be your wife to gratify your pride, and your love. Or else you love me to please the world, not yourself."

"My dear Eleanor," said he, "if my judgment approves of the choice my heart has made, surely you will not make it a matter of complaint. If in loving you I have pleased the world, the fault is not mine, it is due to your perfections; and I am so obliged to confess that I have chosen well."

He stooped, and looked lightly with his lips the shining brown tresses, that lent so near his breast, but Eleanor did not look up nor smile. His words had sounded in her ears like the dripping of icy water, and she was chilled even to her innermost soul. Yet his speech was courteous, gallant, and flattering; but there it was only these—it seemed to want the true ring of love; the reflection of the flame was here, but not its warmth.

Dropping her eyelids that he might not see the tears shining within them, Eleanor took up the Syrian cord, and began twisting it around her arms in an embarrassed way. It was a desire to give herself time and courage to speak the thought hanging on her lips; but Sir Hilton did not divine this; he spoke again and laughingly.

"Put the unlucky rope down Eleanor!" he cried. "You should never bring anything scarlet so near your fair hair; you should leave all glowing colors to Olive. By the by, who is this unknown Quixote whom you believe to be smitten by her charms?"

With a quick gesture Eleanor flung the scarlet cord on the table.

"I want nothing of Olive's," she said with sudden disdain. "I do not pretend to vie with her; I am willing to leave her all glowing colors; and all other things she covets. As to the gentleman who loves her, Sir Hilton, you have but to use your eyes, and you will soon discover him. Perhaps there is more than one who loves Olive Varcoe."

Sir Hilton's brown cheek changed color, and his eyes flashed.

"Are you quarrelling, Eleanor?" he said, in a constrained tone. "If there be really any one paying attention to Olive I shall feel obliged by your naming him to me. You forget that we were brought up together, and I have to play the part of a brother towards her."

"A brother!" exclaimed Eleanor, indignantly. "You do not behave like a brother to Olive Varcoe. My mother is right; she and I cannot live in the same house together. You must choose between us."

Sir Hilton Trewavas started from his careless attitude, and the color forsook his cheek and lip rapidly.

"You are jealous, Eleanor," he said, in a voice which he tried to make jesting.

"There can be no question of jealousy between me and Olive Varcoe," said Eleanor, in her coldest, proudest manner; "a girl whom you yourself profess to disdain, with a slur upon her birth, and the shadow of an evil reputation following her."

"Evil reputation! Who dared to say so?" thundered Sir Hilton.

Eleanor's face grew crimson at his loud tone, and her lips quivered when she spoke again.

"You mistake me," she said. "I alluded to her reputation for eccentricity and a vindictive temper. I repeat again, Sir Hilton, I cannot endure the presence of this girl. If we marry, she must quit Trewavas. She would be a constant source of quarrel between us. My mother has often pointed this out to me, only I have not had the courage to say it to you. I think you should have seen it before for yourself, and so have spared me the pain of uttering this."

"Pain!" exclaimed Sir Hilton, hotly. "And who thinks of the pain to poor little Olive—the pain of quitting Trewavas, the pain of being thrust out of her home into the cold world?"

"No one would be so cruel," replied Eleanor, struggling with her tears. A comfortable home could be found for her, or she may marry."

Sir Hilton ignored the last phrase of this speech, and the first seemed to irritate him.

"A comfortable home found by advertisement, I suppose," he retorted, "a musty, dingy, stifling room, at a flabby family's, all dirt, noise, and disorder! What happiness for Olive! How considerate you women are, when you settle together to dispose of the existence of one of your own sex."

"I will not talk to you any more of Olive," she said—"I think her a wicked, vindictive girl. I shall speak to my mother, and if she obeys my wishes we will both quit Trewavas to-night, and I will never return to your roof while Miss Varcoe remains beneath it. After this conversation, I should deem myself deceitful if I met her again as a friend. One thing more, Sir Hilton; when you first proposed to me I was astonished, I did not believe you loved me—I do not believe it now. I release you from all engagement to me. You are free as air."

She took the diamond ring of her betrothal from her finger, and laid it on the table close to the silken cord. It gave a strange appearance of life to the secret coil, gleaming like an eye among its inky folds.

Sir Hilton looked at her in bewilderment. He was greatly annoyed by her words; they irritated him as a lover, and touched his honor as a gentleman. Moreover, he could not understand this sudden transformation of a gentle, timid girl, into an outspoken, unjust woman. He had wished for an outburst of jealousy, but he had imagined it in quite another shape; and because it had not taken the form he supposed, he failed to recognize it.

"If you and Mrs. Maristowe choose to fling Lady Trewavas by quitting us to-night, I have nothing to say against," he replied, coldly. "It is a matter for yourselves or doctor on. I can only wonder, Miss Maristowe, what I have done or said to cause this burst of unnecessary anger. With regard to my engagement to you, let me tell you that a man's honor cannot be so easily flung from him as a lady's jewel. You may contemptuously withdraw my ring from your finger, and throw it from you, but my word still stands fast. You have every claim, Miss Maristowe, on my forbearance and affection, and I shall acknowledge those claims till the end of my life."

"I have no claim on you, Sir Hilton," she replied. "I have a right to expect to be loved. To marry, with only the dead ashes of your honor to warm our lives, would be misery indeed. I would not hold you for one moment on such terms. I release you from your word to me. Go, give it to her who already has your love; and be quick, lest Mr. Vigo should seize the prize before you."

She turned quickly and quitted the room, leaving Sir Hilton alone. He sprang after her to the door, but caught only the flutter of her robe as she passed swiftly up the great staircase. Then he came back, and flung himself into a chair.

What did it all mean?—was it a dream? No; here was the diamond ring gleaming at him, like the cruel eye of a blood-red snake; and Eleanor was in earnest, else she would never have drawn this ring from her finger, and thrown it here with such contemptuous and bitter words. With any other girl he would think it was only a lover's quarrel; but Eleanor was so tranquil, so calm, that anger from her came with double strength, and showed she was earnest indeed. If it had been little Olive now, who had flung herself into a fury. Ah! what did this mean about Mr. Vigo? Really, Eleanor had shown unpardonable temper in all she had said, especially in this nonsense about young Vigo and Olive, which was perfectly absurd and untrue. And now, what would Lady Trewavas say? What a horrible row and fuss there would be in the house over this affair, should Eleanor tell of it. What was the matter with her?—what had she quarrelled about?

Here a gleam of intelligence entered Sir Hilton's brain, and a glimmer of the truth reached him. Eleanor was jealous! There was a momentary flush of triumph in his eyes, and then a cloud fell over his features. It was evident the thought did not give him the pleasure he had fancied it would. No, because she was jealous of Olive; and he saw how, that if her jealousy took this phase, Olive was the last person in the world of whom he would wish her to be jealous. Like a sultan, he had dreamed of having two women at his feet, vying with each other in lavishing their tenderness on him; and lo! one had scornfully relinquished him, and the other it seemed was to be snapped up by this Vigo!

Sir Hilton Trewavas was not a puppy, although he indulged at times in puppyish thoughts. He took himself honestly to task now for the vanity which had led to this fracas; and, with his hand on his brow, he puzzled his brains how he was to get out of his trouble, and restore Eleanor's peace, without involving Olive in some misfortune.

"And there's that horrid ring," he said to himself; "what am I to do with it? I can't let it lie there, I suppose. I wonder if Eleanor will come after it if I do? Of course she won't hold out. I feel very odd. I can't tell whether I am a free man or no."

At this moment John's hand tapped on the glass, and his head obtruded itself through the open window.

"Hilton, Hilton, what are you dreaming about?" he cried. "Here's young Vigo and Mr. Damerel in the smoking-room. Come and help us at pool."

Sir Hilton started up and glanced at John, and then at the diamond ring, lying on the little table before him, among the inky coils of the scarlet rope. He caught it up, and put it in his pocket, unobserved he thought; but John recognized the ring, and saw the action, and noted the perplexity on his brother's face; and with a strange flutter of new hope about his heart, stirring every vein, he walked by his side silently to the smoking and billiard room, which was in a pavilion standing in the park.

Olive was also in the billiard room, with a cue poised in her small hand, and her glowing face very near Vigo's, as that blushing young squire, stooped in an atmosphere of intense delight, was bending over her, with practical intuitive how to hit the ball. In his present mood this sight irritated Sir Hilton Trewavas.

"We are going to smoke, Olive," he said.

"You mean you are going to smoke!" she returned, laughing. "All the others are smoking like chimneys already."

"I am, and it's really too bad," said Mr. Damerel; "you my honor it is."

"Not at all," said Olive; "I like smoke."

Sir Hilton went over to the bell and rang it loudly.

"What are you about?" asked John.

"I want some beer—some brandy—no, some champagne."

This he said because he now perceived that the side table was well laden with bottles, and he guessed champagne was the sole thing wanting.

"Have champagne if you like," said John; "but really it is scarcely the right sort of thing for a morning. We have to dine with the ladies, you know."

"For that reason I don't see that we want to smoke and play billiards with ladies," returned his brother. "Olive, if you were my wife, or my sister, I would say, leave the room; but since you are only my guest at Trewavas, I can but say, pray please yourself."

As he spoke the word "wife," a flush covered Olive's face; but when he went on to utter the cruel truth that she was only his guest, and had no home at Trewavas, she turned pale as death. For a moment she could not speak; it was so strange, so new for Sir Hilton to taunt her; and in that instant's silence, young Vigo took up cudgels in her defence.

"Come, come, Sir Hilton," he said, "you are too bad; and you don't know the truth."

"The truth seems evident enough, Mr. Vigo," observed Sir Hilton. "I see Olive here playing the fast young lady among a set of young men, and——"

"Excuse me," said Charles Vigo. "I was going to tell that had you come a minute earlier you would have seen Lady Trewavas also. She has but just left us, and in going she told Olive to stay."

"And play out her game," continued Olive triumphantly. "She said she would be back in a minute; Mrs. Maristowe wanted her for something. I wish she would not keep her so long."

Hilton's face paled terribly. Eleanor then was determined to make a fuss; she would not keep this silly quarrel to herself. He felt himself growing pale with anger. To hide it, and moved by some other feeling about which he did not question himself, he turned savagely on Olive.

"I think," he exclaimed. "It would have shown better taste on your part had you gone with Lady Trewavas; but it is nothing to me; you are not my sister and our distant cousinship can scarcely count. Do as you please; perhaps you would like a cigar?"

The young men listened to this rudeness in silent amazement. They waited, with some wonder, to hear what Olive would say to this unjust and unexpected attack. She did not keep them in suspense long. One look of angry pain shot from her eyes, and then she turned at bay.

"Since the matter is nothing to you, Sir Hilton Trewavas, I shall remain," she said, proudly. "And I should like a cigar. It is no sin in my country for women to smoke; in Syria, in Egypt, in Persia, in Spain, they share the weed with their friends and lovers, but not with their enemies. I won't take a cigar from you. Mr. Vigo, will you give me one?"

John Trewavas listened and trembled. Here surely was the opportunity for which Olive had panted. And if her idea was true, that Sir Hilton secretly liked her, and she succeeded now in rousing his anger and jealousy, what would happen? Should he be spared this daily agony of seeing Eleanor betrothed to a man who played carelessly with her happiness? Might he hope that his own deep, strong love would one day find a hearing? The thought rushed over him in a great wave of happiness, making his heart beat violently. His brain grew bewildered, and he heard things like one in a dream, or like a man lost and wandering in a mist, on whose ear familiar sounds fall with drear ghostliness.

"You are welcome to every cigar I have, Miss Varcoe," said young Vigo, his handsome face flushing with pleasure; "but I confess I would rather not see you smoke."

"Nonsense! I smoked when I was six years old," said Olive, laughing. "Give me your cigar case."

In another moment a small puff of smoke curled from her red lips, as in a pretty attitude of defiance she leant against the billiard table, and glanced furtively at Sir Hilton Trewavas.

"So that is the girl Eleanor has told me to marry!" he said to himself bitterly. "And I should feel ashamed of her as my wife, just as I feel now."

There was a sickening tightness at his heart as he looked at her, a yearning and miserable feeling of pain and anger, inexplicable and wordless.

"You smoke capitally, Miss Varcoe," said Mr. Damerel, in a slightly familiar voice. "Shall I mix you some cold brandy-and-water, or will you have a glass of champagne?"

Olive's cheek tingled, her sensitive nature felt the lowering of the man's respect, and her whole blood seemed stung; but she was determined not to be daunted.

"Wine is forbidden by the Koran," she replied, "else I should be glad to accept your obliging offer, Mr. Damerel. There was a wonderful intention in

—OR—

TRUE TO THE LAST.

A SILKEN FETTER.

THEY made a pretty picture, standing thus, with encircling arms, her bright brown curls waving loosely on his breast, and her glowing face hiding itself there in sweet security and peace.

"Are you ever jealous now, Eleanor?" he asked suddenly.

Eleanor started, and, in her surprise and pretty maiden shame, she replied falsely, "Jealous! No, of course not; since you told me that—that you loved only me."

"I am glad you are not, Eleanor," said Sir Hilton, "because I have just had a fuss with your mother on that very point. She declares that you are still jealous of little Olive Varcoe, and she says, the poor child shall not live here when we are married; she pretends her stay would make you unhappy."

A burning red flushed Eleanor's cheek, but she replied gently, almost timidly, "Do you wish her always to live at Trewavas, Hilton?"

"Well, it is a pity to thrust a poor little creature like her into the world," he replied; "and if she is happy here, I see no reason why she should not stay."

"She may not always be happy here," said Eleanor, slily; "she may fall in love."

"Olive fall in love!"—exclaimed Sir Hilton with a strange laugh—"that child fall in love!"

"She is only two years younger than I," said Eleanor; "she is no child; she is just as capable of falling in love as any other girl."

"Not a bit of it, Nell," said Sir Hilton. "And if she did who in the world would ever like such a little elf as Olive for a wife?"

"I know someone who loves her," replied Eleanor, "some one who would marry her to-morrow."

"Not John!" exclaimed Sir Hilton, in a tone of intense amazement and vexation.

"No, not John," replied Eleanor. "Guess again."

"My dear Eleanor, I can't guess," replied he. "The absurd idea of any one liking Olive is too absurd; it is only a fancy of yours; no one would venture to marry her, with her strange ways, and her queer parentage—that is, no gentleman."

"The person I mean is a gentleman every inch," said Eleanor; "even you would own that; and I firmly believe he would be proud to make Olive his wife, in spite of all the drawbacks you name."

A curious shadow flitted over Sir Hilton's face, and his lip twitched nervously as he tried to laugh.

"Well, Eleanor," he answered, "this unknown lover is a more generous fellow than I am, that's all. I own that I would not give a girl my name, without she stood before the world without a flaw in birth, fame and lineage. If her birth were doubtful, or she had earned a character for eccentricity like Olive, I could not make her Lady Trewavas."

"Take care," said Eleanor, a little sadly; "if you talk like this, I shall think you have asked me to be your wife to gratify your pride, and your love. Or else you love me to please the world, not yourself."

"My dear Eleanor," said he, "if my judgment approves of the choice my heart has made, surely you will not [illegible] Are velvet and ribbons and lace Not dainty enough for your purpose, To set off your radiant face?

But want you demand the sweet creature Will give us to cheer with their notes, As they pour out the joy that is in them From their delicate, musical throats—Or to gladden the world with their beauty Want time they are happy and free? Then look to the years that are coming, And the fruits of your vanity see.

It may be, in the days of the future, No birds will be found in the land, Because of your thoughtless compliance With fashions relentless command; No flesh of bright wings in the forest; No warblings made merry with song—But man shall remember the victims, And lay at our threshold the wrong.

"There were birds in the age departed" (Even so shall the story be told), "But because of the beautiful plumage They were slain for the women of old. They wished for an added adornment, And the birds were remorselessly snared." Oh! Would you would think of the pity, And the lives of the birds might be spared.

Dropping her epaulettes that he might not see the tears shining within them, Eleanor took up the Byron card, and began twisting it around her name in an embarrassed way. It was a desire to give herself time and courage to speak the thoughts hanging on her lips; but Sir Hilton did not divine this; he spoke again and laughingly.

"Put the unlucky rope down Eleanor!" he cried. "You should never bring anything scarlet so near your fair hair; you should leave all glowing colors to Olive. By the by, who is this unknown Quixote whom you believe to be smitten by her charms?"

With a quick gesture Eleanor flung the scarlet cord on the table.

"I want nothing of Olive's," she said with sudden disdain. "I do not pretend to vie with her; I am willing to leave her all glowing colors; and all other things she covets. As to the gentleman who loves her, Sir Hilton, you have but to use your eyes, and you will soon discover him. Perhaps there is more than one who loves Olive Varcoe."

Sir Hilton's brown cheek changed color, and his eyes flashed.

"Are you quarrelling, Eleanor?" he said, in a constrained tone. "If there be really any one paying attention to Olive I shall feel obliged by your naming him to me. You forget that we were brought up together, and I have to play the part of a brother towards her."

"A brother!" exclaimed Eleanor, indignantly. "You do not behave like a brother to Olive Varcoe. My mother is right; she and I cannot live in the same house together. You must choose between us."

Sir Hilton Trewavas started from his careless attitude, and the color forsook his cheek and lip rapidly.

"You are jealous, Eleanor," he said, in a voice which he tried to make jesting.

"There can be no question of jealousy between me and Olive Varcoe," said Eleanor, in her coldest, proudest manner; "a girl whom you yourself profess to disdain, with a slur upon her birth, and the shadow of an evil reputation following her."

"Evil reputation! Who dared to say so?" thundered Sir Hilton.

Eleanor's face grew crimson at his loud tone, and her lips quivered when she spoke again.

"You mistake me," she said. "I alluded to her reputation for eccentricity and a vindictive temper. I repeat again, Sir Hilton, I cannot endure the presence of this girl. If we marry, she must quit Trewavas. She would be a constant source of quarrel between us. My mother has often pointed this out to me, only I have not had the courage to say it to you. I think you should have seen it before for yourself, and so have spared me the pain of uttering this."

"Pain!" exclaimed Sir Hilton, boldly. "And who thinks of the pain to poor little Olive—the pain of quitting Trewavas, the pain of being thrust out of her home into the cold world?"

"No one would be so cruel," replied Eleanor, struggling with her tears. A comfortable home could be found for her, or she may marry."

Sir Hilton ignored the last phrase of this speech, and the first seemed to irritate him.

"A comfortable home found by advertisement, I suppose," he retorted, "a musty, dingy, stifling room, at a flabby family's, all dirt, noise, and disorder! What happiness for Olive! How considerate you women are, when you settle together to dispute of the existence of one of your own sex."

"I will not talk to you any more of Olive," she said—"I think her a wicked, vindictive girl. I shall speak to my mother, and if she obeys my wishes we will both quit Trewavas to-night, and I will never return to your roof while Miss Varcoe remains beneath it. After this conversation, I should deem myself deceitful if I met her again as a friend. One thing more, Sir Hilton; when you first proposed to me I was astonished, I did not believe you loved me—I do not believe it now. I release you from all engagement to me. You are free as air."

She took the diamond ring of her betrothal from her finger, and laid it on the table close to the silken cord. It gave a strange appearance of life to the scarlet coil, gleaming like an eye among its snaky folds.

Sir Hilton looked at her in bewilderment. He was greatly annoyed by her words; they irritated him as a lover, and touched his honor as a gentleman. Moreover, he could not understand this sudden transformation of a gentle, timid girl, into an unreasoning, unjust woman. He had wished for an outburst of jealousy, and he had received a calm, deliberate, unemotionally withdrawal of his ring from your finger, and throw it from you, but my word still stands fast. You have every claim, Miss Mariotone, on my forbearance and affection, and I shall acknowledge those claims till the end of my life."

"I have no claim on you, Sir Hilton," she replied. "I have a right to expect to be loved. To marry, with only the dead ashes of your honor to warm our lives, would be misery indeed. I would not hold you for one moment on such terms. I release you from your word to me. Go, give it to her who already has your love; and be quick, lest Mr. Vigo should seize the prize before you."

She turned quickly and quitted the room, leaving Sir Hilton alone. He sprang after her to the door, but caught only the flutter of her robe as she passed swiftly up the great staircase. Then he came back, and flung himself into a chair.

What did it all mean?—was it a dream? No; here was the diamond ring gleaming at him, like the cruel eye of a blood-red snake; and Eleanor was in earnest, else she would never have drawn this ring from her finger, and thrown it here with such contemptuous and bitter words. With any other girl he would think it was only a lover's quarrel; but Eleanor was so tranquil, so calm, that anger from her came with double strength, and showed she was earnest indeed. If it had been little Olive now, who had flung herself into a fury. Ah! what did this mean about Mr. Vigo? Really, Eleanor had shown unpardonable temper in all she had said, especially in this nonsense about young Vigo and Olive, which was perfectly absurd and untrue. And now, what would Lady Trewavas say? What a horrible row and fuss there would be in the house over this affair, should Eleanor tell of it. What was the matter with her?—what had she quarrelled about?

Here a gleam of intelligence entered Sir Hilton's brain, and a glimmer of the truth reached him. Eleanor was jealous! There was a momentary flash of triumph in his eyes, and then a cloud fell over his features. It was evident the thought did not give him the pleasure he had fancied it would. No, because she was jealous of Olive; and he saw how, that if her jealousy took this phase, Olive was the last person in the world of whom he would wish her to be jealous. Like a sultan, he had dreamed of having two women at his feet, vying with each other in lavishing their tenderness on him; and lo! one had scornfully relinquished him, and the other it seemed was to be snapped up by this Vigo!

Sir Hilton Trewavas was not a puppy, although he indulged at times in puppyish thoughts. He took himself honestly to task now for the vanity which had led to this fracas; and, with his hand on his brow, he puzzled his brains how he was to get out of his trouble, and restore Eleanor's peace, without involving Olive in some misfortune.

"And there's that horrid ring," he said to himself; "what am I to do with it? I can't let it lie there, I suppose. I wonder if Eleanor will come after it if I do? Of course she won't hold out. I feel very odd. I can't tell whether I am a free man or no."

At this moment John's hand tapped on the glass, and his head obtruded itself through the open window.

"Hilton, Hilton, what are you dreaming about?" he cried. "Here's young Vigo and Mr. Damerel in the smoking-room. Come and help us at pool."

Sir Hilton started up and glanced at John, and then at the diamond ring, lying on the little table before him, among the snaky coils of the scarlet rope. He caught it up, and put it in his pocket, unobserved he thought; but John recognized the ring, and saw the action, and noted the perplexity on his brother's face; and with a strange flutter of new hope about his heart, stirring every vein, he walked by his side silently to the smoking and billiard room, which was in a pavilion standing in the park.

Olive was also in the billiard room, with a cue poised in her small hand, and her glowing face very near Vigo's, as that blushing young squire, steeped in an atmosphere of intense delight, was bending over her, with practical instructions how to hit the ball. In his present mood this sight irritated Sir Hilton Trewavas.

"We are going to smoke, Olive," he said.

"You mean you are going to smoke!" she returned, laughing. "All the others are smoking like chimneys already."

"Yes, and it's really too bad," said Mr. Damerel; "you my honor it is."

"Not at all," said Olive; "I like to smoke and play billiards with ladies," returned his brother. "Olive, if you were my wife, or my sister, I would say, leave the room; but since you are only my guest at Trewavas, I can but say, pray please yourself."

As he spoke the word "wife," a flush covered Olive's face; but when he went on to utter the cruel truth that she was only his guest, and had no home at Trewavas, she turned pale as death. For a moment she could not speak; it was so strange, so new for Sir Hilton to taunt her; and in that instant's silence, young Vigo took up cudgels in her defense.

"Come, come, Sir Hilton," he said, "you are too bad; and you don't know the truth."

"The truth seems evident enough, Mr. Vigo," observed Sir Hilton. "I see Olive have played the fast young lady among a set of young men, and——"

"Excuse me," said Charles Vigo. "I was going to tell that had you come a minute earlier you would have seen Lady Trewavas also. She has but just left us, and is going she told Olive to stay."

"And play out her game," continued Olive triumphantly. "She said she would be back in a minute; Mrs. Mariotone wanted her for something. I wish she would not keep her so long."

Hilton's face paled terribly. Eleanor then was determined to make a fuss; she would not keep this silly quarrel to herself. He felt himself growing pale with anger. To hide it, and moved by some other feeling about which he did not question himself, he turned savagely on Olive.

"I think," he exclaimed. "It would have shown better taste on your part had you gone with Lady Trewavas; but it is nothing to me; you are not my sister and our distant consinship can scarcely count. Do as you please; perhaps you would like a cigar?"

The young men listened to this rudeness in silent amazement. They waited, with some wonder, to hear what Olive would say to this unjust and unexpected attack. She did not keep them in suspense long. One look of angry pain shot from her eyes, and then she turned at bay.

"Since the matter is nothing to you, Sir Hilton Trewavas, I shall remain," she said, proudly. "And I should like a cigar. It is no sin in my country for women to smoke; in Syria, in Egypt, in Persia, in Spain, they share the weed with their friends and lovers, but not with their enemies. I won't take a cigar from you. Mr. Vigo, will you give me one?"

John Trewavas listened and trembled. Here surely was the opportunity for which Olive had panted. And if her idea was true, that Sir Hilton secretly liked her, and she succeeded now in rousing his anger and jealousy, what would happen? Should he be spared this daily agony of seeing Eleanor betrothed to a man who played carelessly with her happiness? Might he hope that his own deep, strong love would one day find a hearing? The thought rushed over him in a great wave of happiness, making his heart beat violently. His brain grew bewildered, and he heard things like one in a dream, or like a man lost and wandering in a mist, on whose ear familiar sounds fall with drear ghostliness.

"You are welcome to every cigar I have, Miss Varcoe," said young Vigo, his handsome face flushing with pleasure; "but I confess I would rather not see you smoke."

"Nonsense! I smoked when I was six years old," said Olive, laughing. "Give me your cigar case."

In another moment a small puff of smoke curled from her red lips, as in a pretty attitude of defiance she leant against the billiard table, and glanced furtively at Sir Hilton Trewavas.

"So that is the girl Eleanor has told me to marry!" he said to himself bitterly. "And I should feel ashamed of her as my wife, just as I feel now."

There was a sickening tightness at his heart as he looked at her, a yearning and miserable feeling of pain and anger, inexplicable and wordless.

"You smoke capitally, Miss Varcoe," said Mr. Damerel, in a slightly familiar voice. "Shall I mix you some cold brandy-and-water, or will you have a glass of champagne?"

Olive's cheek tingled, her sensitive nature felt the lowering of the man's respect, and her whole blood seemed stung; but she was determined not to be daunted.

"Wine is forbidden by the Koran," she replied, "else I should be glad to accept your obliging offer, Mr. Damerel. There was a wonderful intoxication in

EDITORIAL NOTES.

BARR, of Dufferin, would fill a long felt want in the Ontario Legislature if he spoke his name with a small "b," one "r," and kept a choice supply of liquors and cigars always on hand.—Toronto Telegram.

THE army of Liberals who are opposed to commercial union grows larger and more aggressive every day. The latest man of prominence in the party ranks to follow in the footsteps of Mr. Blake is Hon. James Young. He had been a Liberal of the Liberals for a generation, zealous and uncompromising to a fault. But his convictions have overcome his regard for party considerations, and he has now publicly come out against the one plank policy. In doing this he falls into line with many of the most thoughtful Liberals in the Dominion, among whom are Hon. Edward Blake, Hon. Alex. Mackenzie, Hon. Wm. Macdougall and Hon. David Mills. Commercial union does not commend itself to the judgment of these men as a safe and hopeful policy. There is, therefore, left only such men as Sir Richard Cartwright, Mr. John Charlton and Mr. J. D. Edgar to advocate the Wiman fad. This they will probably do with accustomed vigor, and with the purpose of committing the Liberal party so far as possible to their own views. But the Canadians will assert their judgment effectively before long.

NINE MONTHS' TRADE.

(London Free Press.)

THE exports of Canada for the month of March compare very favorably with the figures of the corresponding period last year. There is a falling off in value amounting to about one per cent., which is of but little consequence. For the nine months, beginning July first, 1890, and ending 31st March, there is an increase made up in this way —

|---|---|
| 1890-91 | $75,731,012 |
| 1889-90 | 75,205,731 |
| Increase | $525,283 |

This is satisfactory. During nearly six months of this period the McKinley tariff has been in operation across the line, and it would seem that it has not seriously effected our general trade. There may have been a falling off in the shipments to the United States—the figures are not to hand—but if there has, Great Britain has probably taken just so much more from us. That is to say, there may have been a diversion of trade. This is encouraging, since it is of little consequence who buys from us so long as we find ready sales at good prices. What the Liberals threatened was the ruin of our export trade, and the answer is a substantial increase during the first nine months. The facts at hand warrant the expectation that Great Britain will buy all that we have to sell, no matter how severe the McKinley tariff may operate. Of course, it is understood that an effort must be made to substitute other products for some of the coarser sorts which have heretofore been raised along the border, and against which the new tariff is almost prohibitive.

BUSINESS FARMING.

THERE is not so much talk of the abandoned farms in Ontario now as during the late election, when the lachrymose glands of Grit orators were set actively working over the alleged decadence of our agriculture. It is, indeed, a rare thing to find an abandoned farm in the southern part of this Province, which vies in fertility with the choicest gardens of the world. If there is any disability on the farmers' part it is probably due either to the lack of the right kind of experience and proper business management or the ever varying pursuit of some great object not to be profitably met with in the remedy is to change the methods of doing business. And a farmer of Mono—where hundreds of farms have been abandoned—has set a good example of this kind. He was apparently one of the few who understood that with changed methods to meet the changed conditions, the agriculturist could still make a living, even off his rock hillsides. He had observed that Roxbury russets of peculiarly fine growth and flavor grew to perfection in that neighborhood. So he began setting out an acre or so of first class young Roxbury russet grafts last year. As the trees came into bearing and produced salable fruit, he was exceedingly careful with the picking, packing and marking of the fruit. He looked carefully about, too, till he got a good market, and then rushed his Roxbury russets in on their merits. Soon his particular brand of apples got a fine reputation in a market, so that he was always able to dispose of them at good prices. Now that farmer, who tills his broiler as well as his hands, gets $2,000 of his farm in good years. He has a first class living and splendid independence, with little labor. The apples grow when he is asleep. Was not that better than toiling of the old farm and living into next century were to work in a rolling atmosphere for as many hours a day, and die of consumption finally, leaving children to follow the same way? Apples are always in demand. They are never very cheap in the large cities. There are never enough of them to supply the retail demand at reasonable rates. They are the most healthful food that can be eat, and we might be consumers ten times as many of them as we do. Among the best apple growers are those of Canada. Throughout the whole Dominion this fruit can be grown abundantly, and of the very best kinds. The Nova Scotia apple orchards are a mine of wealth to their owners. And so it might be in Ontario with a more systematic culture.

THEY WANT A LOAN!

OWEN SOUND QUARRY CO. ASK FOR $5000

To Help Build a Spur Line to Their Quarries—The Board of Trade is Favor of It.

A meeting of the Orangeville board of trade was held in the council chamber on Monday evening last. President Stevenson occupied the chair and Secretary Bailey carefully copied the minutes. The attendance was fair and a great deal of interest was manifested.

After the minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted the secretary read a communication from the Owen Sound Quarry & Construction Co., explaining that last year the company opened up a quarry in Mono, but having to team the stone all the way to the station they could not make it pay. The stone, the communication said, was far superior to that of their Owen Sound quarries. The company wanted a spur line built from the quarries to the C. P. R. station, a distance of three miles, which would cost about $12000. They proposed that the town should bonus or loan them $5,000. The corporation should have control of the line and other quarries could use it also. They would employ 100 to 150 men in the quarries.

Mr. George Endacott was against the bonus business, but if the C. P. R. was consulted he thought they would do something towards the project. He moved that the board of trade recommend the council to loan the quarry company $5000.

Mr. Moody, manager of the old stone grist mill and a new resident of the town, was asked to express an opinion. He said he had some experience in railroad building. It took about $2000 per mile to build a road without the iron. He thought bonusing and loaning companies money was foolish and unprofitable business for municipalities. In Ridgetown, he said, they had some experience in that line and it was most unprofitable. Some other gentlemen spoke and all of them were against the bonus system.

Mr. Endacott's motion was put and carried, 6 voting for it and 3 against it.

After some unimportant business had been transacted the board adjourned.

SHELBURNE.

Mr. John Wilson, of Shelburne, is about starting a foundry in Dundalk. He intends building as soon as the frost is out of the ground.

A meeting was held in the council chamber Tuesday evening for the purpose of making arrangements for the usual 24th of May celebration.

Last Saturday, as the four year-old child of Mr. Bracken, of Amaranth, was riding on a little express wagon, the seat came out and the little one fell to the ground, resulting in its collar bone being broken. Dr. Norton attended the little sufferer.

The plant put in here by the Reliance Electric Light Co. is giving excellent satisfaction. The first illumination of our streets and business places took place Monday evening. The power is furnished by Mr. W. Robertson from the engine in his saw-mill, and seems quite sufficient for the purpose. We congratulate Mr. John Jelly and Dr. Norton, the gentlemen who have purchased the plant, upon the great promise of success in their undertaking. In Mr. Robertson's hands, as manager of plant and equipments, a satisfactory service is assured.

On Monday last Shelburne Lodge, No. 149, A. O. U. W. presented to Mrs. Brown a check for $2,000, being the full amount of beneficiary certificate held in the order by her late husband, Mr. David Brown, who was drowned in Toronto Bay in February last. The promptness with which all demands are met by this society is deserving of all praise, and it is worthy of note that since the foundation of the order no just claim has ever been disputed. Its beneficiaries have never any trouble in obtaining the amount due to them, as everything necessary to that end is attended to by the proper officers.

A Rosemont correspondent says: Some of our young men are in a fair way of becoming drunkards. Who will help to rescue them? Fathers, won't you? Have you provided amusement and company at home, or have you led them to the bar and given them their first glass? Will it be any pleasure to you to see that loved son, or neighbor's son, a drunkard? Have you thought of the future, when you will have to give an account of every word and deed? You cannot escape. Though you had wings of a dove to fly to the uttermost parts of the earth, yet there God awaits you. Though He lets you run for years this is not because He has not power to stop you, but because He desires to give you time to repent. But the day will come when all patience will be at an end, and then He will say "cut him down why cumbereth he the ground." Then it will be too late to do anything, even for your own salvation. Hotelkeepers, could YOU not help to save our young men by closing your house in proper time?

THE NEW SABBATH SCHOOL.—A Sunday school in connection with the Methodist church was started in the old Salvation Army barracks, Mill street, on Sunday morning last. The attendance was over fifty, which augurs well for the future of the school.

FRUIT STOCK SOLD.—Last Saturday the stock of Jack Young, the fruiterer who skipped out a couple of weeks ago, was sold by Bailiff McQuarrie. The purchaser was Mr. Frank Cousins, who has just opened out a fresh stock of fruit, etc., at the old stand.

Ruthven, honorary-president; E Denison, president; H. S. Webber, vice-president; F. W. Wilson, secretary; R. King, treasurer; W. Hewat, H. Armstrong and A. Skey, committee.

CANNIBALISM TAXED.—At the police court on Friday Chief Shields had Joe Rennix and Andrew Collins summoned up for creating a row in an east Broadway hotel a couple of weeks ago. This case was referred to in THE SUN of last week. It was proven that Rennix was the aggressor and he was fined $2.00 and costs, the case against Andy being dropped.

A RISING MUSICIAN.—Miss Annie Kearns has returned home after a very successful term at the Toronto Conservatory of Music. While attending that excellent institution, Miss Kearns received instruction from Canada's most distinguished musicians and, as a result, she ranks high in that art. Miss Kearns, who is an excellent piano player, has decided to instruct a number of pupils on that instrument. Her announcement appears in this issue.

SETTLED.—The action brought by John Chambers, a shoddy peddler of this town, against H. L. Atkinson of Mono for $1,000 damages for injuries received during a row has been settled by the parties concerned. The terms of settlement, we believe, were that Atkinson should pay Chambers $50 and each pay his own costs. Chambers's relatives, to use a slang phrase, are a little shy about getting their fists and it would not be surprising if another lawsuit would be the result.

SETTLE, SPARE THE ROD NOW.—The case of Mr. W. A. Grant against William Elder for unlawfully cutting timber on the property of the former, in Mono, was finally dealt with by P. E. Pettalo on Friday last. According to the evidence there was but one way for the magistrate to dispose of the case—and that was by committing Elder to jail to stand his trial at the approaching assizes. Elder was released from jail on Monday on $1200 bail; himself in $400, his brother John and Joseph Cutler in like amounts.

SHAKES AND SHAKES.—Thus saith a truthful exchange:—"A man who writeth for the newspaper is of a few days and lots of grief. He riseth in the morning and knoweth not what the day may bring forth. If he telleth all the news he runneth a great risk of getting a tin ear put on him, and he telleth not the news the people say he is a g. and there is no health in him. The crafty man enjoleth him into giving a fifty cent puff for a five cent cigar, and food mothers frown on him if he faileth to flatter their freckled faced brats. And all his ways are ways of woe, and days are full of sorrow. The life insurance man tackleth him and the tree peddler and the book agent layeth snares for him, and on the whole he hath a short of a time."

SERIOUS RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.—While Joseph and William, sons of ex-Councillor Island of Mono, were driving into town last Saturday evening they met with a mishap that they will not likely forget for some time to come, and the wonder is that it did not terminate fatally. The horse was not a restless animal and the thought of it running away never entered their heads. When passing the exhibition grounds on the old racecourse, however, a hound was munching away at a dead pig and it barked and caused the horse to run away. Joseph, who was driving, pulled desperately on the lines and one of them broke, upsetting the buggy and throwing the driver out. The other boy got caught in one of the wheels and the vehicle righted itself again. The horse continued to run and had not the remaining line wound around the wheel and turned the horse into the fence, William would probably be in his grave to day. After he had been extricated from his perilous position it was found he was very seriously injured. His head and face being badly cut besides numerous bruises about the body. Since the accident he has been under strict medical care and is progressing favorably.

IT IS TO TEACH THE LADIES.

An Importation of Designers of Ladies' Gowns—What the Enterprise of an International Fashion Magazine has done for its Readers.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Among the cabin passengers who arrived from Europe to-day by the steamship "La Bourgogne," were fourteen Parisian designers of ladies' fashionable gowns. These artists have been engaged by the enterprising managers of the New York and Paris Young Ladies' Fashion Bazar, to contribute exclusively to the columns of that popular magazine. All of them are well known in New York, for their reputations have preceded them. Mrs. Astor, the Vanderbilts, Mrs. Cleveland and Mrs. Marshall O. Roberts are among the society leaders who have worn gowns designed by these artists. During an interview with a reporter one of the designers said:

"Paris still leads the world of fashion although Eugenie no longer sits on the throne. Parisian gowns have a style about them that can not be equaled. That, I suppose, is the reason why we have been engaged to come to America to teach the ladies of your beautiful country, through the columns of The New York and Paris Young Ladies' Fashion Bazar, how these wonderful creations of the dress-makers' art are constructed. It is our business to design the handsomest and most fashionable gowns for the different seasons of the year. These designs will be printed in colors and will be accompanied by such clear instructions as to the selection of materials and the cutting and fitting of the garments that no woman of sense will have the least difficulty in making perfect-fitting gowns herself. It is a knack, a science, to fashion a gown that will make a very small and very fleshy lady appear slim. Not one designer out of a thousand can hit upon the true lines unless he makes it the study of a life-time. You ought to see the May number of our Magazine. We have designed in it that will take the hearts of the ladies by storm. They do not get a new dress made up every day, and I can tell you it is an important item to get the best magazine, and the very latest and most exquisite Paris styles, and have it fashioned like the one that is best suited to their figure."

TARBERT.

Mr. John Carson of Amaranth has returned home from his honeymoon. He is well known around this part of the country, and the fair sex were astonished to hear that John had gone and got married. We wish Mr. Carson and wife health and prosperity.

A DASTARD'S WORK!

A FIEND APPLIES A TORCH TO THE WATERWORKS.

The Bell-Tower and Town Clock Consumed—Surrounding Buildings Have Close Calls.

Owing to an immense rush of work THE SUN is not issued until Saturday this week, last being delayed as we are too flurried to furnish our readers with a lively topic until. THE SUN makes its appearance on Thursday morning next with a detailed report.

At about 10:20 o'clock last night the fire alarm sounded a few warning notes and then everything was still. Those who heard the bell rushed from their houses and were horrified to see the bell-tower and waterworks building all ablaze. Some fiend in human form had saturated the base of the tower with coal-oil and then applied a match. The tower and the hardwood were entirely consumed, and the engine-house was badly scorched. The next building east, occupied by Clark & Son as an undertaking establishment and a residence, was badly wrecked. The loss will be heavy, but we believe everything is covered by insurance.

A full report will be found in our next issue.

HONORING "JAKE."

Mr. J. J. Kelly is the Recipient of a Handsome Present from his Fellow-Employes.

On Thursday evening last the employes of A. & W. Johnston assembled at the residence of Mr. J. J. Kelly, foreman of the tinware department, previous to his leaving town to accept a position as traveller for the firm of Copp Bros., of Hamilton. Mr. T. T. Paul was voted into the chair, and after speeches were indulged in he called upon Mr. Hugh Ferguson, bookkeeper for the firm, to present Mr. Kelly with a handsome locket and chain, and the following

ADDRESS,

Mr. John J. Kelly:

DEAR FRIEND.—The boys with whom you have labored for years past, having learned with deep regret your determination to sever your connection with our employers, Messrs. A. & W. Johnston, for the purpose of bettering your condition by accepting a position with one of the great "Iron Firms" of the Ambitious City, we cannot let the opportunity pass of wishing you success in your new departure, and of assuring you that we feel proud to have the privilege of expressing our respect and esteem for the kind hearted, genial Jake.

We wish you to accept our sincere and best wishes for your future success as a "Knight of the Grip" and trust you will long be spared to your good wife and family.

Kindly accept this locket and chain, not for its intrinsic worth, but as a small token of true friendship coming from honest hearts, and when you look upon it, it will remind you of "The Sports You Left Behind You."

ACCIDENTALLY HANGED HIMSELF.

A Sixteen-Year-Old Boy Near Shelburne Meets With a Tragic Death.

A very serious accident occurred within a mile of Shelburne on Saturday whereby the sixteen-year-old son of Mr. R. J. Whitten lost his life. It appears that the boy and a younger brother were playing around the barn. In their rambles they found a small piece of plough line. The boy had read or heard of a thirteen-year-old boy hanging himself, and he was apparently trying to explain to his younger brother how it was done. He fastened the plough line to a beam and made a noose of the rope, in which he placed his head. The ground being slanting and slippery, he seems to have lost his footing, and was strangled before assistance arrived. His father drove into the yard then, and called to him, thinking he was fooling, but received no reply. He immediately cut him down and summoned Dr. Norton, but when the Dr. reached him life was extinct. The coroner, Dr. Norton, held an inquest at the home Saturday night, when the following verdict was returned:—"That Rufus John Whitten came to his death by strangulation, the same not being intentional but an accident occurring in play."

SHADOWS OF COMING EVENTS.

Every town dog to wear a new tag.

A monster celebration here Dominion Day.

The town council will meet on Monday evening.

Division court will be held here on Tuesday next.

Meeting of the high school trustees on Thursday evening next.

"Laila," an operetta in three parts, will shortly be given in aid of St. Mark's church building fund. A large number of children are in training for the event.

Dufferin spring assizes will commence in the court house, Orangeville, on Monday, 11th of May, Mr. Justice Street presiding. The docket is very small and in all probability the business will not occupy more than two or three days.

Editorial Evidence.

GENTLEMEN—Your Hagyard's Yellow Oil is worth its weight in gold for both internal and external use. During the late La Grippe epidemic we found it a most excellent preventive, and for sprained limbs, etc., there is nothing to equal it.

LICENSES GRANTED.

List of Places authorized to sell Liquor.

Licensed Commissioners, George L. Dobbs, Primrose, Dr. C. H. Smith and Robert Beatty, Orangeville, met at the court house here on Friday to decide who would be allowed to legally dispense liquor in Dufferin county for the twenty year of 1891-2. There was quite a large crowd present and to say that some were greatly disappointed after the permits had been granted would be putting it mildly.

In Orangeville "diplomas" were given to Henry Crozier of the Queen's hotel, James Booth of the Elgin house, James Bennett of the Pinkey-house, Shaw & Young of the Commercial hotel, John Irving of the Dufferin house, John Hinks of the Hinks house, Patrick Kelly of the Royal hotel, John Longevey and J. M. Bennett, shops. Licenses were refused to Edwards of the Lennox house and Hamer Oliver of the G.T.R. restaurant. Two new hotel permits will be granted in town and John Hanshaw of the American, R. W. Rooney of the Globe, and D. Livingstone of the Gordon are scrambling for them.

Four hotel permanents were given in Shelburne to R. F. Tosh, John Witten, Joseph Black and George Gillespie.

Only two licenses were granted in Mono, one to W. J. Morrison, Camilla, and Thomas Henderson, Rosemont.

Richard Anthony, Marsville, is the only legalized dispenser of firewater in East Garafraxa.

Amaranth and East Garafraxa are neck-and-neck in the race, Mrs. Fergrave of Waldemar being the only licensee-holder in the first-named township.

A. Martin and D. E. Black, Grand Valley, are the only persons in East Luther who hold a license. The commissioners could not see the necessity of supplying George Swain, of "Temperance hotel" fame, with a permit.

Mulmur has a whole slew of hotels, licenses having been granted to James Dean, George McCarthy, W. A. Beatty and George Cook.

It takes only two licensed dispensers to supply the thirsty populace of Melancthon with their favorite beverage, and Wm. McLean and Samuel Moore are the chosen ones.

The commissioners will meet at the same place to-morrow to wind up the business.

ALTON.

The cantata "Under the Palms," will be given in the Congregational here on Thursday evening, May 7th. The proceeds will be devoted to the organ fund of the Methodist church. Give them a bumper house.

An entertainment in aid of the base ball club will be held in the Presbyterian hall here on Tuesday evening next, May 5th. The programme will consist of songs, recitations, readings, etc., and will conclude with the comedietta "The Irish Merchant."

Mr. A. Rutherford, of the Dixie house, has the noblest driving outfit in the village. The top buggy is the latest style and was bought from Mr. Robt. Beatty, Orangeville. The horse is a nice driver, and Mr. Rutherford takes pride in keeping him well groomed and the whole outfit in clean, trim style. Ah, there! Alexander.

BLOUNT.

Alf. Allen has recovered from his recent illness.

Philospher Carson has completed his share of the census-taking.

Robert McKim has sown 75 acres this season and seeding is being rapidly pushed ahead.

L. W. is looking for another school ma'm. We hope he will have better luck than he had the last time.

James Hammond, a tenant of the postmaster, is out of a job. Jim wishes he could get employment near by.

We hear that H. Atkinson has settled his law scrape with Chambers of Orangeville. It is said that Chambers was wholly responsible for the row.

Robert McKim has completely recovered from the grip and is able to travel after the spring harrow, which is very unusual as the work is very hard.

William Eaton, of Cambridge, Ind., does not believe in talking, having spoken but four words in 20 years. He is 55 years old. He owned 80 acres of land adjoining his father's farm, which he sold for $2,000, and invested his money in small hand Bibles, which he would give away to every one he would see, until they were all gone. To any question his answer would be "Lord's willing," "So be it," or "So it so." Eaton is a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and his relatives ascribe his strange conduct to his hallucination, that it is a sin to talk.

Why Not Treat?

WHY not treat such troubles as boils, pimples, blotches, sores, humors, eruptions, rashes, skin irritations, etc., with Burdock Blood Bitters. It is filled with virtue as a blood purifier and goes right to the right spot. It makes the skin bright and clear, while also invigorating the entire system.

The Niagara Falls Power Company has been given leave to increase its capital up to $10,000,000.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—When inclemency weather checks to a considerable extent the action of the skin, an alternative is required to compensate the body by means of other channels. Holloway's Pills can be confidently recommended as the easiest, surest, and safest means of attaining this desirable end without weakening the most delicate or inconvenicing the most feeble. When from frequently recurring chills or the inhalation of impure air the blood becomes foul and the secretions vitiated, these Pills present a ready and efficient means of cleansing the former and correcting the latter. By this salutary proceeding disease is arrested at its outset, its pains and inconveniences averted, and the nervous structures saved from the distressing effects entailed upon them by an illness.

John Campbell, of Toronto, familiarly known as "Jumbo" Campbell, has entered suit in the county division court against Mayor Clarke and Treasurer Coady, representing the city. The suit is entered "on behalf of himself and all the ratepayers of the city to recover $40 wrongfully paid out by them from the city funds." This money was paid to engross a resolution of condolence upon the death of Rev. Father Laurent. The case will be tried week after next.

Supposing.

Supposing you suffer from some disease. Suppose it is dyspepsia or biliousness or constipation or bad blood. Suppose you learn that Burdock Blood Bitters has cured thousands of others and should cure complaints. Don't you suppose you ought to try it? It cannot harm you and in nine cases out of ten it cures.

The army of Liberals who are opposed to commercial union grows larger and more aggressive every day. The latest case of prominence in the party ranks to follow in the footsteps of Mr. Blake is Hon. Jessie Young. He had been a Liberal of the Liberals for a generation, unless and uncompromising to a fault. But his convictions have overcome his regard for party considerations, and he has now publicly come out against the one plank policy. In doing this he falls into line with many of the most thoughtful Liberals in the Dominion, among whom are Hon. Edward Blake, Hon. Alex. Mackenzie, Hon. Wm. Macdougall and Hon. David Mills. Commercial union does not commend itself to the judgment of these men as a safe and hopeful policy. There is, therefore, left only such men as Sir Richard Cartwright, Mr. John Charlton and Mr. J. D. Edgar to advocate the Wiman fad. This they will probably do with commendable vigor, and with the purpose of committing the Liberal party as far as possible to their own views. But the Dominion will assert their judgment effectively before long.

NINE MONTHS' TRADE.

(London Free Press.)

THE exports of Canada for the month of March compare very favorably with the figures of the corresponding period last year. There is a falling off in value amounting to about one per cent., which is of but little consequence. For the nine months, beginning July first, 1890, and ending 31st March, there is an increase made up in this way —

This is satisfactory. During nearly six months of this period the McKinley tariff has been in operation across the line, and it would seem that it has not seriously effected our general trade. There may have been a falling off in the shipments to the United States—the figures are not to hand—but if there has, Great Britain has probably taken just so much more from us. That is to say, there may have been a diversion of trade. This is encouraging, since it is of little consequence who buys from us so long as we find ready sales at good prices. What the Liberals threatened was the ruin of our export trade, and the answer is a substantial increase during the first nine months. The facts at hand warrant the expectation that Great Britain will buy all that we have to sell, no matter how severe the McKinley tariff may operate. Of course, it is understood that an effort must be made to substitute other products for some of the coarser sorts which have heretofore been raised along the border, and against which the new tariff is almost prohibitive.

BUSINESS FARMING.

THERE is not so much talk of the abandoned farms in Ontario now as during the late election, when the lachrymose glands of Grit orators were set actively working over the alleged decadence of our agriculture. It is, indeed, a rare thing to find an abandoned farm in the southern part of this Province, which vies in fertility with the choicest gardens of the world. If there is any disability on the farmers' part it is probably due either to the lack of the [illegible] enterprises and proper business management, or the unvarying pursuit of [illegible] that cannot be profitable [illegible] remedy is to change the [illegible] business. And a farmer of [illegible]—where hundreds of farms have been abandoned—has set a good example of this kind. He was apparently one of the few who understood that with changed methods to meet the changed conditions, the agriculturist could still make a living even off his rock hillsides. He had observed that Roxbury russets of peculiarly fine growth and flavor grew to perfection in that neighborhood. So he began setting out an acre or so of first class young Roxbury russet grafts each year. As the trees came into bearing and produced suitable fruit, he was exceedingly careful with the picking, packing and marking of the fruit. He looked carefully about, too, till he got a good market, and then rushed his Roxbury russets in on their merits. Soon his particular brand of apples got a fine reputation in a market, so that he was always able to dispose of them at good prices. Now that farmer, who tons his brains as well as his hands, gets $2,000 of his farm in good years. He has a first class living and splendid independence, with little labor. The apples grow when he is asleep. Was not that a business like idea?

To Help Build a Spur Line to Their Quarries—The Board of Trade to Favor of It.

A meeting of the Orangeville board of trade was held in the council chamber on Monday evening last. President Stevenson occupied the chair and Secretary Bailey carefully copied the minutes. The attendance was fair and a great deal of interest was manifested.

After the minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted the secretary read a communication from the Owen Sound Quarry & Construction Co., explaining that last year the company opened up a quarry in Mono, but having to team the stone all the way to the station they could not make it pay. The stone, the communication said, was far superior to that of their Owen Sound quarries. The company wanted a spur line built from the quarries to the C. P. R. station, a distance of three miles, which would cost about $12000. They proposed that the town should bonus or loan them $5,000. The corporation should have control of the line and other quarries could use it also. They would employ 100 to 150 men in the quarries.

Mr. George Rodgerson was against the bonus business, but if the C. P. R. was consulted he thought they would do something towards the project. He moved that the board of trade recommend the council to loan the quarry company $5000.

Mr. Moody, manager of the old stone grist mill and a new resident of the town, was asked to express an opinion. He said he had some experience in railroad building. It took about $2000 per mile to build a road without the iron. He thought bonusing and loaning company money was foolish and unprofitable business for municipalities. In Ridgetown, he said, they had some experience in that line and it was most unprofitable. Some other gentlemen spoke and all of them were against the bonus system.

Mr. Rodgerson's motion was put and carried, 6 voting for it and 3 against it.

After some unimportant business had been transacted the board adjourned.

Mr. John Wilson, of Shelburne, is about starting a foundry in Dundalk. He intends building as soon as the frost is out of the ground.

A meeting was held in the council chamber Tuesday evening for the purpose of making arrangements for the usual 24th of May celebration.

Last Saturday, as the four year-old child of Mr. Bracken, of Amaranth, was riding on a little express wagon, the seat came out and the little one fell to the ground, resulting in its collar bone being broken. Dr. Norton attended the little sufferer.

The plant put in here by the Reliance Electric Light Co. is giving excellent satisfaction. The first illumination of our streets and business places took place Monday evening. The power is furnished by Mr. W. Robertson from the engine in his saw-mill, and seems quite sufficient for the purpose. We congratulate Mr. John Jelly and Dr. Norton, the gentlemen who have purchased the plant, upon the great promise of success in their undertaking. In Mr. Robertson's hands, as manager of plant and equipments, a satisfactory service is assured.

On Monday last Shelburne Lodge, No. 149, A. O. U. W. presented to Mrs. Brown a check for $2,000, being the full amount of beneficiary certificate held in the order by her late husband, Mr. David Brown, who was drowned in Toronto Bay in February last. The promptness with which all demands are met by this society is deserving of all praise, and it is worthy of note that since the foundation of the order no just claim has ever been disputed. Its beneficiaries have never any trouble in obtaining the amount due to them, as everything necessary to that end is attended to by the proper officers.

A Rosemont correspondent says: Some of our young men are in a fair way of becoming drunkards. Who will help to rescue them? Fathers, won't you? Have you provided amusement and company at home, or have you led them to the bar and given them their first glass? Will it be any pleasure to you to see that loved son, or neighbor's son, a drunkard? Have you thought of the future, when you will have to give an account of every word and deed? You cannot escape. Though you had wings of a dove to fly to the uttermost parts of the earth, yet there God awaits you. Though He lets you run for years this is not because He has not power to stop you, but because He desires to give you time to repent. But the day will come when all patience will be at an end, and then He will say "cut him down why cumbereth he the ground." Then it will be too late to do anything, even for your own salvation. Hotelkeepers, could you not help to save our young men by closing your houses in proper time?

For the past couple of weeks several noted drunks held high carnival on the streets, but they have departed now. Chief Shields and Nightwatchman Parkin were instrumental in getting rid of them.

Aristotype is the name of a new and beautiful style of picture now made by W. Still of Orangeville. It surpasses anything yet produced in the photographic line. Anyone having photos taken at Still's can have them finished by this process.

THE NEW SABBATH SCHOOL.—A Sunday school in connection with the Methodist church was started in the old Salvation Army barracks, Mill street, on Sunday morning last. The attendance was over fifty, which augurs well for the future of the school.

FRUIT STOCK SOLD.—Last Saturday the stock of Jack Young, the fruiterer who skipped out a couple of weeks ago, was sold by Bailiff McQuarrie. The purchaser was Mr. Frank Cousins, who has just opened out a fresh stock of fruit, etc., at the old stand.

ANOTHER B. A.—Mr. N. J. Sproul of this town, a graduate of our excellent high school, has just taken the degree of Bachelor of Arts at the Queen's University, Kingston. During the summer months Mr. Sproul will preach at Vanatter, Waldemar and other places.

ORANGEVILLE TENNIS CLUB.—The local exponents of lawn tennis met here one evening last week and reorganized the Orangeville club. The officers elected were: W. W. Ruthven, honorary-president; E. Denison, president; H. S. Webber, vice-president; F. W. Wilson, secretary; R. King, treasurer; W. Howat, H. Armstrong and A. Skey, committee.

CANNIBALISM TABED.—At the police court on Friday Chief Shields had Joe Rennix and Andrew Collins summoned up for creating a row in an east Broadway hotel a couple of weeks ago. This case was referred to in THE SUN of last week. It was proven that Rennix was the aggressor and he was fined $2.00 and costs, the case against Andy being dropped.

C. O. F. OFFICERS.—Last Monday night Court Gardiner, C. O. F., met and held the semi annual election of officers with the following result: T. W. Chapman, P. C. R.; B. McGuire, C. R.; T. J. Bennett, F. S., G. H. Thompson, R. S.; A. H. Turnbull, F.; J. S. Haley, C.; F. Jackson, S. W.; S. Murch, J. W.; A. Carter, S. B.; W. W. Kelly, J. B; T. W. Chapman, delegate to high court.

A RISING MUSICIAN.—Miss Annie Kearns has returned home after a very successful term at the Toronto Conservatory of Music. While attending that excellent institution, Miss Kearns received instruction from Canada's most distinguished musicians and, as a result, she ranks high in that art. Miss Kearns, who is an excellent piano player, has decided to instruct a number of pupils on that instrument. Her announcement appears in this issue.

[illegible] Mr. Chambers [illegible] witness [illegible] "A man who swears for the newspaper is of a few days and lots of grief. He stands in the morning and harasses out what the day may bring forth. If he talketh all the oath he runneth a great risk of getting a tax put on him, and he talketh not the news the people may be in a g. and there is no health in him. The crafty man enjoleth him into giving a fifty cent puff for a ten cent cigar, and fond mothers frown on him if he falleth to flatter their freckled faced brats. And all his ways are ways of woe, and days are full of sorrow. The life insurance man taketh him and the tree peddler and the book agent layeth snares for him, and on the whole he hath a short of a time."

SERIOUS RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.—While Joseph and William, sons of ex-Councillor Island of Mono, were driving into town last Saturday evening they met with a mishap that they will not likely forget for some time to come, and the wonder is that it did not terminate fatally. The horse was not a restless animal and the thought of it running away never entered their heads. When passing the exhibition grounds on the old racecourse, however, a hound was munching away at a dead pig and it barked and caused the horse to run away. Joseph, who was driving, pulled desperately on the lines and one of them broke, upsetting the buggy and throwing the driver out. The other boy got caught in one of the wheels and the vehicle righted itself again. The horse continued to run and had not the remaining line wound around the wheel and turned the horse into the fence, William would probably be in his grave to day. After he had been extricated from his perilous position it was found he was very seriously injured. His head and face being badly cut besides numerous bruises about the body. Since the accident he has been under strict medical care and is progressing favorably.

IT IS TO TEACH THE LADIES.

An Importation of Designers of Ladies' Gowns—What the Enterprise of an International Fashion Magazine has done for its Readers.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Among the cabin passengers who arrived from Europe to-day by the steamship "La Bourgogne," were fourteen Parisian designers of ladies' fashionable gowns. These artists have been engaged by the enterprising managers of the New York and Paris Young Ladies' Fashion Bazar, to contribute exclusively to the columns of that popular magazine. All of them are well known in New York, for their reputations have preceded them. Mrs. Astor, the Vanderbilts, Mrs. Cleveland and Mrs. Marshall O. Roberts are among the society leaders who have worn gowns designed by these artists. During an interview with a reporter one of the designers said:

"Paris still leads the world of fashion although Eugenie no longer sits on the throne. Parisian gowns have a style about them that can not be equaled. That, I suppose, is the reason why we have been engaged to come to America to teach the ladies of your beautiful country, through the columns of The New York and Paris Young Ladies' Fashion Bazar, how these wonderful creations of the dress-makers' art are constructed. It is our business to design the handsomest and most fashionable gowns for the different seasons of the year. These designs will be printed in colors and will be accompanied by such clear instructions as to the selection of materials and the cutting and fitting of the garments that no woman of sense will have the least difficulty in making perfect-fitting gowns herself. It is a knack, a science, to fashion a gown that will make a very small and very fleshy lady appear slim. Not one designer out of a thousand can hit upon the true lines unless he makes it the study of a life-time. You ought to see the May number of our Magazine. We have designed in it that will take the hearts of the ladies by storm. They do not get a new dress made up every day, and I can tell you it is an important item to get the best magazine, and the very latest and most exquisite Paris styles, and have it fashioned like the one that is best suited to their figure."

Mr. J. J. Kelly is the Recipient of a Handsome Present from his Fellow-Employes.

On Thursday evening last the employes of A. & W. Johnston assembled at the residence of Mr. J. J. Kelly, foreman of the gauze department, previous to his leaving town to accept a position as traveller for the firm of Copp Bros., of Hamilton. Mr. T. T. Paul was voted into the chair, and after speeches were indulged in he called upon Mr. Hugh Ferguson, bookkeeper for the firm, to present Mr. Kelly with a handsome locket and chain, and the following

ADDRESS,

Mr. John J. Kelly:

DEAR FRIEND.—The boys with whom you have labored for years past, having learned with deep regret your determination to sever your connection with our employers, Messrs. A. & W. Johnston, for the purpose of bettering your condition by accepting a position with one of the great "Iron Firms" of the Ambitious City, we cannot let the opportunity pass of wishing you success in your new departure, and of assuring you that we feel proud to have the privilege of expressing our respect and esteem for the kind hearted, genial Jake.

We wish you to accept our sincere and best wishes for your future success as a "Knight of the Grip" and trust you will long be spared to your good wife and family.

Kindly accept this locket and chain, not for its intrinsic worth, but as a small token of true friendship coming from honest hearts, and when you look upon it, it will remind you of "The Sports You Left Behind You."

ACCIDENTALLY HANGED HIMSELF.

A Sixteen-Year-Old Boy Near Shelburne Meets With a Tragic Death.

A very serious accident occurred within a mile of Shelburne on Saturday whereby the sixteen-year-old son of Mr. R. J. Whitten lost his life. It appears that the boy and a younger brother were playing around the barn. In their rambles they found a small piece of plough line. The boy had read or heard of a thirteen-year-old boy hanging himself, and he was apparently trying to explain to his younger brother how it was done. He fastened the plough line to a beam and made a noose of the rope, in which he placed his head. The ground being slanting and slippery, he seems to have lost his footing, and was strangled before assistance arrived. His father drove into the yard then, and called to him, thinking he was fooling, but received no reply. He immediately cut him down and summoned Dr. Norton, but when the Dr. reached him life was extinct. The coroner, Dr. Norton, held an inquest at the home Saturday night, when the following verdict was returned:—"That Rufus John Whitten came to his death by strangulation, the same not being intentional but an accident occurring in play."

Why Not Treat?

WHY not treat such troubles as boils, pimples, blotches, sores, humors, eruptions, rashes, skin irritations, etc., with Burdock Blood Bitters. It is filled with virtue as a blood purifier and goes right to the right spot. It makes the skin bright and clear, while also invigorating the entire system.

The Niagara Falls Power Company has been given leave to increase its capital up to $10,000,000.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—When inclemente weather checks to a considerable extent the action of the skin, an alternative is required to compensate the body by means of other channels. Holloway's Pills can be confidently recommended as the easiest, mildest, and safest means of attaining this desirable end without weakening the most delicate or incommoding the most feeble. When from frequently recurring chills or the inhalation of impure air the blood becomes foul and the secretions vitiated, these Pills present a ready and efficient means of cleansing the former and correcting the latter. By this salutary preceding disease is arrested at its outset, its pains and inconveniences averted, and the nervous structures saved from the distressing effects entailed upon them by an illness.

John Campbell, of Toronto, familiarly known as "Jumbo" Campbell, has entered suit in the county division court against Mayor Clarke and Treasurer Coady, representing the city. The suit is entered "on behalf of himself and all the ratepayers of the city to recover $40 wrongfully paid out by them from the city funds." This money was paid to engrave a resolution of condolence upon the death of Rev. Father Laurent. The case will be tried week after next.

AFTER THE BALL.

Amid the merry dancers
My face is blithe and bright,
And in the waltz or lancers
My feet are lithe and light;
He seems to see me laughing
Amid the joyous crew,
And thinks I do not love him;
Ah! if he only knew!

He deems a woman's passion
The art of a coquette,
And vows that naught but fashion
My heart has stirred as yet;
He only sees the actress
Behind the play is through;
Alert behind the curtain,
Ah! if he only knew!

Men women o'er be wooing
The heart upon the sleeve,
A tempting for the staring
Cheap lovers may believe?
I am not cold nor fickle,
Forgetful, nor untrue!
I love him, I adore him;
Ah! if he only knew!

Mr. Robt. Board has been laid off work for a week on account of a sprained knee. He is now able to be around again.

A large drive of cordwood was run down the river through here to Fergus and Elora last week. This week drives of sawlogs are on the move. An immense quantity of timber of all kinds are to be floated down to this place, Waldemar, and other points down the river. The water is quite high for the work yet.

An inquest, which was adjourned until Wednesday evening last, the jury came to the conclusion that the infant found on the railway track the previous Friday afternoon came to its death by foul means, murdered by a party or parties unknown, crushed into the box and dropped from the train at the place where found. The engineer and fireman of the express train were examined, who stated that they had seen the box that day and the day previous. The place where the box was found was at the top of a steep grade on the track, and the train would be moving much slower at this point, as it is an up grade from that direction for some distance.

Amid the merry dancers
My face is blithe and bright,
And in the waltz or lancers
My feet are lithe and light;
He frowns to see me laughing
Amid the joyous crew,
And thinks I do not love him;
Ah! if he only knew!

He deems a woman's passion
The art of a coquette,
And vows that naught but fashion
My heart has stirred as yet;
He only sees the actress
Before the play is through;
Alas! behind the curtain,
Ah! if he only knew!

Most women e'er be wearing
The heart upon the sleeve,
A mark for idle staring
That lovers may believe?
I am not cold nor fickle,
Forgetful, nor untrue!
I love him, I adore him;
Ah! if he only knew!

The C. P. R. outbuildings at Bracebridge had a narrow escape from being destroyed by fire one night last week.

If the Owen Sound clothing houses continue to give away hats so freely, clap will be on that in this community as black thereafter.—O. S. Times.

The G. T. R. have settled with Mrs Sheane, formerly of Berlin, who received injuries by the train moving at Tavistock before she had proper time to alight, for $250 and costs.

According to the Herald Dundalk is experimenting a terrible waste of things from a sanitary point of view. Dead animals are allowed to lie on its streets unburied, and the whole town resembles a barnyard.

Last week a woman 40 years of age, living in Hanoverton, paid Oakville a visit. Strange to say, though living within fourteen or fifteen miles of Lake Ontario all her life, she had never seen it before.

Wm. Lawlor, who was convicted with Wm. Black, of having robbed Darling's jewelry store, Simcoe, of $14,000 worth of jewelry, has been released from the penitentiary after serving seven years of his ten year term.

A farmer was fined in Wellerton the other day for tying his horse to a shade tree. This should serve as a warning to all who are accustomed to follow this bad practice.

H. Rider Haggard has returned from Mexico full of enthusiasm over the natural resources of the country, but impressed with the belief that its civilization was more strongly advanced in the time of Cortez than it is now.

J. G. Geddes, custom house broker, Hamilton, is alleged to have skipped out with a $500 cheque with which Thos. Lawry entrusted him to get some goods out of bond. The cheque was cashed at St. Catharines, but Geddes' whereabouts is unknown.

Two hundred and sixty five tons of powder exploded at Rome on Thursday, causing immense damage to property. The whole city shook and the various received serious injury. Fourteen persons were killed.

Isaac Haas of Port Dover, emptied a quinine capsule and filled it with strychnine to take to school for experimental purposes, placing it with the others. Feeling unwell, he took one of the capsules, and in mistake picked up the one containing strychnine. Doctors had hard work in saving his life.

Count Von Moltke died suddenly at Berlin on Thursday. He attended a session of the Reichstag in the afternoon and was apparently in good health. The physicians who were summoned announced that death was caused by failure of the heart. He was 91 years of age.

There is considerable uneasiness among the G. T. R. employes at Windsor over the recent interviews with the officials, wherein it was stated that when the tunnel went into operation the force at that point would be cut down 75 per cent. and only one boat would be used.

In a house not a hundred miles from Victoria there are living at present one grand mother, four mothers, three sisters, five brothers, six uncles, three aunts, five nephews, six nieces, eight cousins, five sons, six daughters, one sister-in-law, three grand daughters, one widow and one widower—and yet there are only thirteen persons in all.—Victoria Times.

The superintendent of the northern division of the Grand Trunk Railway has issued a circular requesting agents to take very determined action against allowing boys about cars, yards or premises, and to warn the parents that legal proceedings will be taken against their children. This action has been taken to avoid similar accidents to those which recently occurred at Berlin.

The Sun was presented by Mr. Berry of the Owen Sound Clothing house with a ball and a bat one day last week. The bat is coming in handy as a shillelah. The young man of the Sun has a stuffed figure of a man suspended from the ceiling and is practising on this movable form almost daily. People who have grievances against the Sun should note the training being observed in this establishment, remembering that it will never do to send a boy on a man's errand.

A great deal of agitation has been going on in regard to women wearing birds on their hats. It now turns out that the majority of birds used for millinery purposes are made up. The feathers of an ordinary fowl are dyed with much care. The various tints necessary to produce the real bird are blended harmoniously, and each feather is stuck on separately by skilled workmen. This industry is carried on in Paris and Berlin.

A telegram from Chatham of the 23rd inst., says: "The Grits have been threatening since before the election to take away the licenses from all Conservatives in town that dared show their colors at that time, and have been using the threat ever since to stop a protest being put in against Archibald Campbell, as they did not wish the cases sifted in court. When they found out Tuesday the protest had gone in, they proceeded at once to carry out the threat by taking licenses away from five good hotels, and the only first-class shops in town, all being held before by Conservatives. There is big excitement in town to night over the proceedings of the commissioners, who have not studied the interests of the town or the wishes of the people in the slightest manner."

REMEMBER.

Remember, when the dusk draws outdoors
Her fragile pallor to the east's bright banner,
Remember, when the passive night reposes
Beneath her silvery veil in tender dreams,
When pleasures calls time, when the heart is light,
When to sweet music dance glide [illegible] night,
List, through the deep woods ring
Sweet voices, murmuring
Remember!

Remember, when fate's cruel hand has broken
For ever the tie that bound my life with thine
When, with long years and calls, grief unspoken,
Deepening heart and blasted hopes are mine,
Think of my sad love—think of my lost love—
Absence and time are naught when love is true!
Long as my heart shall beat
Even it shall repeat
Remember!

Remember, when beneath the cold ground lying,
My broken heart forever is at rest;
Remember, when some lonely flower is trying
Its petals soft to open on my breast,
Then will not we meet, but my soul, set free,
Faithful in death, shall then return to thee!
Then back to the sad mortal
Of a deep voice that pleads
Remember!

her voice; it tingled through Mr Damerel's brain, and ran down through his back bone, covering him with a creeping shame. It was a tone which spoke plainly to his understanding, saying, "This is a war between me and Sir Hilton. Leave me alone, and don't insult me like a coward."

But Sir Hilton had brought a bellicerent atmosphere into the room with him. The contagion in his rasped, angry nerves, was spreading around him dangerously; and Mr. Damerel, whose opinion of Olive we have heard him give, had taken somewhat of the fever. He looked in her face, and smiled.

"We don't admit the laws of the Kowan here, Miss Vareoe," he retorted. "Trewavas, don't you persuade your cousin to drink a glass of champagne? A dry cigar is a very bad thing."

He appealed to Sir Hilton to show that he had arrayed himself on the enemy's side; and this naturally made Olive turn pleadingly towards young Vigo.

"Mr. Vigo," she cried, "shall we go on with our game? Mr. Damerel, Sir Hilton, will not persuade me to take champagne; he knows I never touch wine of any kind. A canon, Mr. Vigo, and both balls pocketed. Can you beat that?"

Olive followed the young man to his side of the table as she spoke, and laid her fingers on his arm.

"Here, give me a corkscrew," cried Sir Hilton, starting up. "Let's get the champagne opened. You'll take some, I know, Vigo, if your fellow-smoker won't."

Fellow smoker! Olive grew a little pale, but she poised her cue with untrembling hand, as Mr. Vigo looked up, and said, hastily, "No thanks, none for me."

"There is no corkscrew here," observed John, searching among the glasses on the side-table.

"Never mind; my pocket corkscrew will do," said Sir Hilton.

He thrust his hand in the pocket of his velveteen jacket, and dragged forth with the corkscrew a scarlet silken cord and a ring. This latter fell to the ground and rolled beneath the billiard table. Young Vigo stooped and picked it up. Every one recognized it, every one has seen it on Eleanor's finger, and knew it as that significant jewel which bespeaks an engagement. The gentlemen said nothing, hiding their thoughts adroitly, and Mr. Vigo was about to place the ring silently on the table, when Olive took it from his hand.

"Why, it is Eleanor's!" she exclaimed with an air of surprise. "How strange——"

But she checked her speech, and the blood flew to her heart, as she saw the anger and confusion on Sir Hilton's face. Then she turned to John, and exclaimed with him one rapid glance of burning hope and gladness.

"It is this accursed rope that has caused the mischief!" exclaimed Sir Hilton, flinging it on the ground. "I take you all to witness this cord is mine," said Olive, winding it round her waist as she spoke; "and I cannot tell in the least how it got into your possession, Mr. Hilton."

"Is it a valuable relic?" asked Mr. Damerel.

"It is one I do not covet," replied Sir Hilton; "a hangman's perquisite is not a pleasant gift in one's pocket."

Again Olive colored, but she turned gaily to Mr. Vigo.

"You see," she remarked, "Sir Hilton's grandfather broke his neck respectably, out hunting; so he can afford to despise ropes; but mine had his neck broken for him. This is the cord with which his Highness the Sultan had him amiably strangled by his own slave. You can imagine how I value it."

Young Vigo, evidently not knowing what was expected of him, seized the dangling ends, and examined them attentively, until it was a curious history, and doubtless the cord was worth preserving.

"Send it to Madame Tussaud's," said Mr. Damerel, "with a card attached, saying, 'By this rope was strangled the grandfather of the beautiful Miss Vareoe, of Trewavas.'"

"Leave out Trewavas, if you please, Damerel," said Hilton, haughtily.

Olive glanced at his angry face and turned pale, and as she withdrew her eyes, dewy with crushed tears, she encountered the blue orbs of Mr. Vigo.

"Say of Bosvicca, Damerel, of Miss Vareoe will permit it," said he. "The place and its master will both feel honored by her name being associated with theirs."

Every one felt this was a little serious, and Mr. Damerel elevated his eyebrows in a warning way. Sir Hilton ran the corkscrew into his hand, and then flung it on the floor.

"Give me Eleanor's ring, Olive," he said, in a husky voice. "You are clinging it on that horrible rope, and the contact irritates me."

With a glance of fire in her eyes, Olive gave it to him hastily; but as her hand touched his she screamed, and drew it away.

"There is blood on the ring, and on my fingers!" she cried. "What have you done?"

"Don't be frightened," said John; "it is only a scratch he gave himself with the corkscrew. I think somehow we have fallen into a disagreeable kind of talk—blood and ropes, and hanging, and I don't know what."

"It is all Miss Vareoe's fault," said Mr. Damerel. "She dined us up her grandfather's house."

Sir Hilton was busy wiping the blood from Eleanor's ring, but it still had a spot on it when he placed it on his little finger. He looked dangerous, so strange was his expression and manner. At this moment the door opened and a servant appeared.

"My lady wishes to know, sir, if you can step up to her room and speak to her?"

He addressed himself to Sir Hilton, but John answered him.

"We are all coming in directly, Kinsman," said he. "What does Lady Trewavas want?"

"I don't know, sir, unless it's some thing about Mrs. Maristowe, sir. She is going away so very sudden with Miss Eleanor."

The servant shut the door, as a blank silence fell upon all. Sir Hilton broke it with an abrupt laugh.

"What can have happened?" he said. "I suppose I must go and see what is the matter. But it is quite a mistake of Kinsman's to suppose that Mrs. and Miss Maristowe are leaving us."

"Perhaps she has had a telegram with bad news in it," suggested young Vigo. "Miss Vareoe, give me a tiny piece of this cord, and I'll wear it as a new kind of order."

"What shall the order be called?" said Olive. "Knights Defenders of the Friendless, will that do?"

Seeing Mr. Vigo turn instantly from him to Olive, Sir Hilton's footsteps lingered, and he of course heard this, and saw the look of admiration with which he regarded her.

"Olive!" he exclaimed, "if you have finished smoking and playing billiards, perhaps you will come in, and see if Lady Trewavas wants you."

Grip still holds full sway in New York.

Fashion decreed that the summer girl of 1891 will wear vests, jackets and skirts. Instead of becoming wholly masculine in apparel, however, she will retain skirts. In the way of jackets are two sorts of coats, one for the street and the other for indoors. The latter will, it is predicted, be so little different from the male smoking jacket that in the tennis season, when costumes become so bewildering, it will be a difficult task to determine off-hand whether you are addressing your best girl or her elder brother.

For you the day that bound my life with thine
When, with tear-years and calm, grief unspoken,
Despairing heart and blasted hopes are mine,
Think of my sad lot—think of my lost lifetime!
Absence and time can weaken other love to wear!
Long as my heart shall beat
Even it shall repeat
Remember!

Remember, when beneath the cold ground lieth
My broken heart forever in its rest;
Remember, when some lonely flower is trying
Its petals soft to open on my breast;
Then without pro mise, but my soul, not free,
Faithful to death, shall then return to thee;
Then kneel to the God Human
Of a deep voice that genius
Remember!

her voice, it tingled through Mr Damerel's brain, and ran down through his back bone, covering him with a creeping shame. It was a tone which spoke plainly to his understanding, saying, "This is a war between me and Sir Hilton. Leave me alone, and don't insult me like a coward."

But Sir Hilton had brought a bellicose atmosphere into the room with him. The contagion in his raged, angry nerves, was spreading around him dangerously; and Mr. Damerel, whose opinion of Olive we have heard him give, had taken somewhat of the fever. He looked in her face, and smiled.

"We don't admit the laws of the Koran here, Miss Vareco," he retorted. "Twenavas, don't you persuade your cousin to drink a glass of champagne? A dry cigar is a very bad thing."

He appealed to Sir Hilton to show that he had arrayed himself on the enemy's side; and this naturally made Olive turn pleadingly towards young Vigo.

"Mr. Vigo," she cried, "shall we go on with our game? Mr. Damerel, Sir Hilton will not persuade me to take champagne; he knows I never touch wine of any kind. A canon, Mr. Vigo, and both balls pocketed. Can you beat that?"

Olive followed the young man to his side of the table as she spoke, and laid her fingers on his arm.

"Here, give me a corkscrew," cried Sir Hilton, starting up. "Let's get the champagne opened. You'll take some, I know, Vigo, if your fellow-smoker won't."

Fellow-smoker! Olive grew a little pale, but she poised her cue with untrembling hand, as Mr. Vigo looked up, and said, hastily, "No thanks, none for me."

"There is no corkscrew here," observed John, searching among the glasses on the side-table.

"Never mind; my pocket corkscrew will do," said Sir Hilton.

He thrust his hand in the pocket of his velveteen jacket, and dragged forth with the corkscrew a scarlet silken cord and a ring. This latter fell to the ground and rolled beneath the billiard table. Young Vigo stooped and picked it up. Every one recognized it, every one has seen it on Eleanor's finger, and knew it as that significant jewel which bespeaks an engagement. The gentlemen said nothing, hiding their thoughts adroitly, and Mr. Vigo was about to place the ring silently on the table, when Olive took it from his hand.

"Why, it is Eleanor's!" she exclaimed with an air of surprise. "How strange——"

But she checked her speech, and the blood flew to her heart, as she saw the anger and confusion on Sir Hilton's face. Then she turned to John, and exchanged with him one rapid glance of burning hope and gladness.

"It is this accursed rope that has caused the mischief!" exclaimed Sir Hilton, flinging it on the ground. [illegible] scattered, [illegible] purpose, and has [illegible] g the [illegible] that [illegible] in his haste [illegible] with the [illegible] from the window. N[illegible] must be said of Eleanor.

"I take you all to witness this cord is mine," said Olive, winding it round her waist as she spoke; "and I cannot tell in the least how it got into your possession, Mr. Hilton."

"Is it a valuable relic?" asked Mr. Damerel.

"It is one I do not covet," replied Sir Hilton; "a hangman's perquisite is not a pleasant gift in one's pocket."

Again Olive colored, but she turned gaily to Mr. Vigo.

"You see," she remarked, "Sir Hilton's grandfather broke his neck respectably, out hunting; so he can afford to despise ropes; but mine had his neck broken for him. This is the cord with which his Highness the Sultan had him amiably strangled by his own slave. You can imagine how I value it."

Young Vigo, evidently not knowing what was expected of him, seized the dangling ends, and examined them at

"It is all Miss Vareco's hair," said Mr. Damerel. "She dished an ap her grandfather's house."

Sir Hilton was busy wiping the blood from Eleanor's ring, but it still had a spot on it when he placed it on his little finger. He looked dangerous, so strange was his expression and manner. At this moment the door opened, and a servant appeared.

"My lady wishes to know, sir, if you can step up to her room and speak to her?"

He addressed himself to Sir Hilton, but John answered him.

"We are all coming in directly, Kinsman," said he. "What does Lady Trevavas want?"

"I don't know, sir, unless it's something about Mrs. Maristowe, sir. She is going away so very sudden with Miss Eleanor."

The servant shut the door, as a blank silence fell upon all. Sir Hilton broke it with an abrupt laugh.

"What can have happened?" he said. "I suppose I must go and see what is the matter. But it is quite a mistake of Kinsman's to suppose that Mrs. and Miss Maristowe are leaving us."

"Perhaps she has had a telegram with bad news in it," suggested young Vigo. "Miss Vareco, give me a tiny piece of this cord, and I'll wear it as a new kind of order."

"What shall the order be called?" said Olive. "Knights Defenders of the Friendless, will that do?"

Seeing Mr. Vigo turn instantly from him to Olive, Sir Hilton's footsteps lingered, and he of course heard this, and saw the look of admiration with which he regarded her.

"Olive!" he exclaimed, "if you have finished smoking and playing billiards, perhaps you will come in, and see if Lady Trevavas wants you."

The Story Teller.

OLIVE VARCOE

—OR—

TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER V. (CONTINUED)

A BILKEN FETTER.

It was not the tone of irony in which he spoke, but the implied command that she was to make herself useful when "wanted," that irritated Olive, and made her turn fiercely on him.

"I have not finished my cigar," she replied; "and if I had, I suppose I am not wanted to send Miss Maristowe's boxes. Oh," she added, in a low tone, so Mr. Vigo, "when shall I be delivered from the bondage?"

She said these wilful words, not meaning them. Knowing that Sir Hilton listened, she spoke them in the wild hope that in his mistaken heart he cared for her, and would be jealous. But if he was jealous, he did not show it in the ordinary way. A sudden pallor struck him, and he closed the door without a word. As he passed the opened window he saw young Vigo leaning over Olive, whispering, while Mr. Damerel, was saying, in a weary voice, "What's the row, John? Do you think the lovers have quarrelled?"

"So I am to be a nine days' wonder? said Sir Hilton to himself. "I will never submit to this. Eleanor must stay. A bondage—Trewavas is a bondage! Let her leave it, then. She is free to go. She almost proposed to young Vigo in saying that. Well, if——"

But Sir Hilton stopped, for a sharp pang seized him, and putting his hand to his brow he almost gasped for breath.

Lady Trewavas stood unnaturally upright as she greeted him, and her handsome, unwrinkled face flushed with anger.

"What is all this, Hilton?" she said, steadying her voice to speak calmly.

"All what?" said he, throwing himself languidly into a chair, and looking at her with a weary air.

"Hilton, your assumption of indifference won't deceive me," she replied. "You cannot be indifferent in a matter where your honor and happiness are concerned, as they are in this. Why have you quarrelled with Eleanor?"

"Why has Miss Maristowe quarrelled with me, you mean?" returned Sir Hilton.

"She is not quarrelsome, Hilton—she is wonderfully gentle tempered," said Lady Trewavas; "but I let the expression pass. Why, then, has she quarrelled with you?"

"I don't know myself," he replied. "Have you asked her why?"

"This pretense of ignorance is absurd Hilton," said the old lady. "Of course I have asked her; but I get nothing but tears, and a passionate declaration that she deems it better to part at once."

Sir Hilton was silent for an instant, and the shadow of a deep perplexity crossed his face.

"And can we part, grandmother?" he demanded.

"Is it a Trewavas that asks me?" said she, scornfully. "Can a gentleman break his word? Can he jilt a girl like a butcher would? Can he consent to be mean, dishonorable, base?"

"But if Miss Maristowe wishes to break her engagement, it appears to me I am bound to submit," said Sir Hilton.

"She does not wish it," said Lady Trewavas. "The girl is jealous, that's all. Go to her, Hilton, and ask her to marry you this day month, and see what her answer will be."

"I don't know that I am prepared to do that," said Sir Hilton, a little startled.

"Why not?" she resumed. "You proposed to Eleanor, meaning to marry her, I suppose. And can you find a girl anywhere better suited to you? There was no answer. "Is she not beautiful, rich, well born, gentle, good?"

"She is all that," replied Sir Hilton.

"A girl worthy of the name of Trewavas," continued the old lady. "A wife of whom you would be proud, who would never bring pain or shame, or sorrow on you, or yours, and whose children and grandchildren would love you as your own. Hilton, I shall not live much longer. I have set my heart on seeing you married before I die. Let me see your children, and I shall be ready to go to my husband. Hilton, I shall never hold up my head again. I shall feel ashamed of my grandson. You are as much bound in honor to Eleanor Maristowe as if she were your wife."

"But if they will leave Trewavas in this hurried, discourteous manner, it seems to me it is you and I who have a right to complain," said Sir Hilton.

"No; Eleanor has explained her motives," replied Lady Trewavas. "She goes to avoid giving you further pain; she has made every apology to me. And besides, I tell you, it is her mother who hurries her away; she catches at this quarrel eagerly, to part you and Eleanor."

Sir Hilton's jealous temper could ill brook Mrs. Maristowe's interference.

"I believe this is all her doing," he said, sourly.

"And are you going to bear it?" asked Lady Trewavas. "Hilton, do not deceive yourself. Eleanor loves you dearly; and if she leaves this house, and your engagement is broken off, I shall blame you, and the whole world will blame you. I shall say you have done a mean, base thing, and I shall be ashamed to own you."

Sir Hilton was silent. He was not a man to take his own part, when a mother or grandmother was heaping reproaches on him. Seeing him so apathetic Lady Trewavas grew more angry.

"I believe Eleanor's jealousy is not unfounded," she resumed; "you like that artful girl better than you do her."

Sir Hilton was stung.

"What artful girl do you mean?" he demanded. "There are so many."

"I mean Olive Varcoe," was the reply.

"Your own grand niece?" said Sir Hilton. "Well, I would not marry Olive Varcoe for the world. I left her smoking cigars with young Vigo, and making love to him."

"It's a pity young Vigo can't be got to marry her," said Lady Trewavas.

"That's not likely," returned Sir Hilton drily. "He won't marry her, for the same reason that I, or any other gentleman, would not, because her position here has been made too equivocal. You have kept her too much in the housekeeper's room. And her birth and manners are against her."

"Well, then," said Lady Trewavas, "since you don't want to marry Olive, why do you hesitate to convince Eleanor of that fact, by going to her at once and making up this childish quarrel?"

"Why do I hesitate?" he cried. "Because I don't wish to pain you."

"Me, Hilton?" she exclaimed.

"Yes, you have always been used to Olive," he replied; "you don't want to drive her away from Trewavas, I'm certain."

"Assuredly not," said Lady Trewavas. "Who would think of driving the girl out of her home?"

"Eleanor does," replied Sir Hilton. "She makes it a condition of our marriage that Olive shall leave. That's the subject we quarrelled on."

Lady Trewavas looked at her grandson in painful astonishment.

"It would certainly break Olive's heart to quit Trewavas," she ejaculated.

"I don't think that," said Sir Hilton, turning a weary gaze to the window. "I believe you are mistaken there. I heard her tell young Vigo just now that Trewavas was a house of bondage. Therefore I was thinking of your plan, not of hers, when I hesitated to consent to her departure."

"Then hesitate no more," interposed Lady Trewavas. "Your happiness and Eleanor's must come first with me; Olive's afterwards. So Trewavas is a 'house of bondage' to her!"

"I don't know that the words were exactly those," he observed, "'This bondage,' and 'who will deliver me?'—that was it, I think. Neither you nor I, grandmother, will let these foolish words affect her future."

"Oh, certainly," she replied. "But I did not think ingratitude was one of her faults. However, since she will be glad to leave Trewavas, it makes matters less painful for all. I'll find her a home somewhere. Go to Eleanor, and tell her that point is settled. On the whole, Hilton, I am not sorry that Olive should leave. I believe Eleanor is right; she is thrown too much with you and John."

"With John!" exclaimed Sir Hilton.

The old lady would hear no more; she took him resolutely by the arm, and led him across the hall to the dining-room door, Sir Hilton turned on her a strangely pale face, and whispered, "Grandmother, I believe you are moving me from a great misery. I know what I do now is best for my happiness and for yours."

"Why, what's the matter with the girl?" exclaimed his grandmother. "If they leave in this manner, Hilton, I shall never hold up my head again. I shall feel ashamed of my grandson. You are as much bound in honor to Eleanor Maristowe as if she were your wife."

"But if they will leave Trewavas in this hurried, discourteous manner, it seems to me it is you and I who have a right to complain," said Sir Hilton.

"No; Eleanor has explained her motives," replied Lady Trewavas. "She goes to avoid giving you further pain; she has made every apology to me. And besides, I tell you, it is her mother who hurries her away; she catches at this quarrel eagerly, to part you and Eleanor."

Sir Hilton's jealous temper could ill brook Mrs. Maristowe's interference.

"I believe this is all her doing," he said, sourly.

"And are you going to bear it?" asked Lady Trewavas. "Hilton, do not deceive yourself. I know what I do now is best for my happiness and for yours."

"Where is Mrs. Maristowe," said Olive hurriedly. "Let me escape—do! She hates me, I know. Get the truth out of her, John, and then come and tell me. There is one comfort—I suppose we shall not be kept long in suspense."

Olive ran hastily out of the door as Mrs. Maristowe entered.

"Is Mr. Trewavas here?" she said. "Dear me, Miss Varcoe, how disagreeably your dress smells of tobacco smoke! I wonder you like to remain here when the young men are smoking."

Olive gave her a comical look, and then said daringly, "I have just been smoking a cigar myself, Mrs. Maristowe. John is in there, if you want him."

"What a dreadful girl!" said the lady to herself. "It is impossible for Eleanor to endure her as a companion, I wonder Sir Hilton has the effrontery to expose it. Mr. Trewavas," she said, aloud, "will you take a stroll with me in the garden? I should like a little talk with you before I leave."

"Are you going to leave us, Mrs. Maristowe?" said John. "You have received no unpleasant news, I hope?"

"Oh, no ill news," she replied, calmly; "only I have been explaining to Lady Trewavas that if this unpleasantness between Sir Hilton continues, we had better leave. It would be so awkward, you see, for all parties, if we stayed."

She linked her arm in John's, and pacing the shrubbery, she poured forth her complaint to him in haughty words. She was glad Eleanor had acted with a spirit at last. Her daughter could not condescend to any rivalship with Miss Varcoe. Sir Hilton would now have finally chosen between them. For her part, she was not anxious that the engagement should continue. Eleanor had a very large fortune; it would be wiser

Is a certain and speedy cure for Cold in the Head and Catarrh in all its stages.

SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.

Instant Relief. Permanent Cure. Failure Impossible.

Catarrh sufferers are strongly urged to try this remedy. Its mild, soothing, healing nature, coupled with its wonderful power to arrest the disease, will induce every sufferer to try it. Some cases have been of long standing, attended with Ulceration and Discharge, requiring a bottle or two before a permanent cure was effected; but we have never heard of a case in which it did not give immediate relief. We have received hundreds of testimonials from all parts of the Dominion, but we do not publish them, as we think the best evidence in favor of the Balm is the fact that it is rapidly becoming the leading remedy in all parts of the country where it is known. Price in each Province of the Dominion, Nova Scotia excepted, where it is not yet introduced, is only $1 per bottle, or five bottles for $4. ## The Story Teller.

OLIVE VARCOE

—OR—

TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER V. (CONTINUED)

A SILKEN FETTER.

It was not the tone of irony in which he spoke, but the implied command that she was to make herself useful when "wanted," that irritated Olive, and made her turn fiercely on him.

"I have not finished my cigar," she replied; "and if I had, I suppose I am not wanted to tend Miss Maristowe's boxes. Oh," she added, in a low tone, to Mr. Vigo, "when shall I be delivered from the bondage?"

She said these wilful words, not meaning them. Knowing that Sir Hilton listened, she spoke them in the wild hope that in his mistaken heart he cared for her, and would be jealous. But if he was jealous, he did not show it in the ordinary way. A sudden pallor struck him, and he closed the door without a word. As he passed the opened window he saw young Vigo leaning over Olive, whispering, while Mr. Damerel, was saying, in a weary voice, "What's the row, John? Do you think the lovers have quarrelled?"

"So I am to be a nine days' wonder! said Sir Hilton to himself. "I will never submit to this. Eleanor must stay. A bondage—Trewavas is a bondage! Let her leave it, then. She is free to go. She almost proposed to young Vigo in saying that. Well, if——"

But Sir Hilton stopped, for a sharp pang seized him, and putting his hand to his brow he almost gasped for breath.

Lady Trewavas stood unnaturally upright as she greeted him, and her handsome, unwrinkled face flushed with anger.

"What is all this, Hilton?" she said, steadying her voice to speak calmly.

"All what?" said he, throwing himself languidly into a chair, and looking at her with a weary air.

"Hilton, your assumption of indifference won't deceive me," she replied. "You cannot be indifferent in a matter where your honor and happiness are concerned, as they are in this. Why have you quarrelled with Eleanor?"

"Why has Miss Maristowe quarrelled with me, you mean?" returned Sir Hilton.

"She is not quarrelsome, Hilton—she is wonderfully gentle tempered," said Lady Trewavas; "but I let the expression pass. Why, then, has she quarrelled with you?"

"I don't know myself," he replied. "Have you asked her why?"

"This pretense of ignorance is absurd Hilton," said the old lady. "Of course I have asked her; but I get nothing but tears, and a passionate declaration that she deems it better to part at once."

Sir Hilton was silent for an instant, and the shadow of a deep perplexity crossed his face.

"And can we part, grandmother?" he demanded.

"Is it a Trewavas that asks me?" said she, scornfully. "Can a gentleman break his word? Can he jilt a girl like a butcher would? Can he consent to be mean, dishonorable, base?"

"But if Miss Maristowe wishes to break her engagement, it appears to me I am bound to submit," said Sir Hilton.

"She does not wish it," said Lady Trewavas. "The girl is jealous, that's all. Go to her, Hilton, and ask her to marry you this day month, and see what her answer will be."

"I don't know that I am prepared to do that," said Sir Hilton, a little startled.

"Why not?" she resumed. "You proposed to Eleanor, meaning to marry her, I suppose. And can you find a girl anywhere better suited to you?" There was no answer. "Is she not beautiful, rich, well born, gentle, good?"

"She is all that," replied Sir Hilton.

"A girl worthy of the name of Trewavas," continued the old lady. "A wife of whom you would be proud, who would never bring pain or shame, or sorrow on you, or yours, and whose children and grandchildren would love right to remember," said Sir Hilton.

"No; Eleanor has explained her motives," replied Lady Trewavas. "She goes to avoid giving you further pain; she has made every apology to me. And besides, I tell you, it is her mother who harries her away; she catches at this quarrel eagerly, to part you and Eleanor."

Sir Hilton's jealous temper could ill brook Mrs. Maristowe's interference.

"I believe this is all her doing," he said, scarily.

"And are you going to bear it?" asked Lady Trewavas. "Hilton, do not deceive yourself. Eleanor loves you dearly; and if she leaves this house, and your engagement is broken off, I shall blame you, and the whole world will blame you. I shall say you have done a mean, base thing, and I shall be ashamed to owe you."

Sir Hilton was silent. He was not a man to take his own part, when a mother or grandmother was heaping reproaches on him. Seeing him so apathetic Lady Trewavas grew more angry.

"I believe Eleanor's jealousy is not unfounded," she resumed; "you like that artful girl better than you do her."

Sir Hilton was stung.

"What artful girl do you mean?" he demanded. "There are so many."

"I mean Olive Varcoe," was the reply.

"Your own grand niece?" said Sir Hilton. "Well, I would not marry Olive Varcoe for the world. I left her smoking cigars with young Vigo, and making love to him."

"It's a pity young Vigo can't be got to marry her," said Lady Trewavas.

"That's not likely," returned Sir Hilton drily. "He won't marry her, for the same reason that I, or any other gentleman, would not, because her position here has been made too equivocal. You have kept her too much in the housekeeper's room. And her birth and manners are against her."

"Well, then," said Lady Trewavas, "since you don't want to marry Olive, why do you hesitate to convince Eleanor of that fact, by going to her at once and making up this childish quarrel?"

"Why do I hesitate?" he cried. "Because I don't wish to pain you."

"Me, Hilton?" she exclaimed.

"Yes, you have always been used to Olive," he replied; "you don't want to drive her away from Trewavas, I'm certain."

"Assuredly not," said Lady Trewavas. "Who would think of driving the girl out of her home?"

"Eleanor does," replied Sir Hilton. "She makes it a condition of our marriage that Olive shall leave. That's the subject we quarrelled on."

Lady Trewavas looked at her grandson in painful astonishment.

"It would certainly break Olive's heart to quit Trewavas," she ejaculated.

"I don't think that," said Sir Hilton, turning a weary gaze to the window. "I believe you are mistaken there. I heard her tell young Vigo just now that Trewavas was a house of bondage. Therefore I was thinking of your pain, not of hers, when I hesitated to consent to her departure."

"Then hesitate no more," interposed Lady Trewavas. "Your happiness and Eleanor's must come first with me; Olive's afterwards. So Trewavas is a 'house of bondage' to her!"

"I don't know that the words were exactly those," he observed. "'This bondage,' and 'who will deliver me?'—that was it, I think. Neither you nor I, grandmother, will let these foolish words affect her future."

"No, certainly," she replied. "But I did not think ingratitude was one of her faults. However, since she will be glad to leave Trewavas, it makes matters less painful for all. I'll find her a home somewhere. Go to Eleanor, and tell her that point is settled. On the whole, Hilton, I am not sorry that Olive should leave. I believe Eleanor is right; she is thrown too much with you and John."

"With John!" exclaimed Sir Hilton.

The old lady would hear no more; she took him resolutely by the arm, and led him across the hall to the dining-room door, Sir Hilton turned on her a strangely pale face, and whispered, "Grandmother, I believe you are saving me from a great misery. I know what I do now to be best for my happiness and for yours."

Bolstered! how very pleasant these visits to Trewavas must be for him!"

"They appear to be very agreeable to you, Damerel," said Vigo; "you seemed to be pretty well amused this morning."

"Oh, ah, yes," said he. "As a looker-on I see a good deal, and it's waxhaw amusing, certainly."

"And what have you seen as a looker-on to-day?" asked Vigo.

"I have seen what I remarked about Sir Hilton," he replied; "that he has never been properly introduced to himself."

"Talk English, Damerel, do!" exclaimed Vigo.

"Do you mean you want me to speak out my opinion plainly—in a ridiculous coarse way?" he asked.

"Yes, I mean that," replied Vigo.

"Well, then, I have a strong idea that Sir Hilton would like to join the Mawmons, if they were a respectable body, with bawonets among them and members of Parliament."

"Upon my word, Damerel, I am in no mood for fooling," said Vigo. "Talk nonsense to-night, if you will, but speak sense now if you can."

"You won't listen if I do," returned his friend, changing his tone. "You are in love; and so, of course, you have neither sense, shape, sight, hearing, recollection, nor smell."

"Am I so poor as that?" said Vigo.

"Yes, and I'll prove it," replied Damerel. "I'll bet you a pony that you have not heard any one speak this morning but Miss Varcoe, and you haven't seen any one but her, and can't recollect any one but her and as to sense, you can't put two and two together, and with regard to smell, I should say you were quite lost, for when Miss Varcoe lighted a lucifer match, you said, 'Beautiful! I give you my word you did."

"I will take your bet," said Vigo, smiling in spite of himself. "I have no doubt that I have lost all my senses. And now let me hear what your idea is about Trewavas turning Mormon."

"Well, since you are no longer quite deaf, I'll tell you," said Damerel. "My idea is, that Sir Hilton would like to marry two wives; one to gratify his pride, and the other his ignorance—his ignorance—yes, that is the only word I can use to express such a love as his. Oh, he is hopelessly idiotic, is Sir Hilton Trewavas. I wouldn't have his baronetcy and his estates for the world, if I was obliged to take his brains with them."

"That is an absurd idea of yours, Damerel. It won't bear examination for a moment. It it was true, why of course Sir Hilton would be an idiot; but he had his choice, and he deliberately chose Eleanor; that proves where his love is. And Olive—are you still of the same opinion to her?"

"For your sake," replied his friend, seriously, "I am sorry to say I am. Think no more of this girl, Vigo. If there is anything like a lasting quarrel between the lovers, she'll go in for the baronet, depend upon it; and if the quarrel is made up, I shouldn't like to be Miss Maristowe, that's all.

"It is hard you should think so ill of her, Damerel," said Charles; "but I'll keep my word."

"Well, don't keep it in the unpleasant way you did this morning," said Damerel. "Whispering sweet things to her, and skirting the brink of a proposal every minute. I really trembled for you. Remember, a mistake you make in marriage can never be rectified."

"True," said Charles; "matrimony is an awful affair."

For a few minutes after the utterance of this aphorism, the friends walked on in silence, then Mr. Damerel turned suddenly, and said, "Why did she smoke to-day, Vigo?—can you tell me that?"

"Why?—because she liked to, I suppose, he replied. "But I must say I don't admire that style of thing, and I was sorry to see her doing it."

"There is no one has more taste or knowledge as to what a lady should or should not do than Miss Varcoe," said Damerel. "She smoked to day to annoy her cousin—from no other motive, Mr. Vigo; so don't waste your sorrow. What will you bet she don't touch another cigar for ten years?"

"I'll never make her the subject of bets, Damerel," he answered. "Let us walk faster; the governor will be waiting dinner."

"What sort of revenge would that be?" said John. "Don't talk again like a demon, Olive. I have heard too much of it already."

Olive was silent. There was a suppressed excitement about the usually quiet John that checked her own keenness, and held her passionate tongue chained.

"Did you see Eleanor's ring, Olive?" asked John. "She must give it back to him. Oh, what a blessing it will be for all of us, if this wretched, mistaken, foolish engagement is indeed broken off. Never were two people so unfitted for each other."

"The world says differently, John," replied Olive. "Never was match so fitting, says smiling Mrs. Grundy."

"A mistake, Olive," said he, "Hilton will make that girl wretched if he marries her."

"But he shan't marry her!" exclaimed Olive. "I'll tear up the world first, John, I shall kill somebody if you don't take care of me."

John smiled, but it was such a sickly, painful smile, that Olive ran over to him, and put her hand kindly on his shoulder.

"What is the matter, John?" she said. "You are not yourself to day."

"It is this hope, Olive, tearing out my very heart," he replied. "I cannot bear it. I did not think that a faint glimmer of hope would unnerve me like this. I was patient. I had given it all up, you know; and now this is tearing open the wound afresh."

"And you must give it up again, John," said Olive—"Eleanor loves Hilton. Your situation is not like mine. I am quite certain Hilton likes me."

"All the more cruel is it if he marries Eleanor," said John, bitterly, "especially as he takes her from a man to whom, heaven knows, she would be dearer than life. As to his liking you, Olive, I doubted it once, but I begin to think now it may be so."

A glow of triumph spread itself in a crimson flush over Olive's cheek.

"And do you think I'll let him marry that girl?" she cried. "No I'll——"

"No threats, Olive," said John, putting up his hand to check her. "I'm so weary of them. What do they do? They alter nothing. I have no reliance on any of your schemes. I trust most in Mrs. Maristowe. She is not very fond of Hilton; and Eleanor's love for him is not so very deep rooted as you think, else her mother's words would not have the weight with her that they possess."

At this moment a shadow passed the window.

"Here is Mrs. Maristowe," said Olive hurriedly. "Let me escape—do! She hates me, I know. Get the truth out of her, John, and then come and tell me. There is one comfort—I suppose we shall not be kept long in suspense."

Olive ran hastily out of the door as Mrs. Maristowe entered.

"Is Mr. Trewavas here?" she said. "Dear me, Miss Varcoe, how disagreeably your dress smells of tobacco smoke! I wonder you like to remain here when the young men are smoking."

Olive gave her a comical look, and then said daringly, "I have just been smoking a cigar myself, Mrs. Maristowe. John is in there, if you want him."

"What a dreadful girl!" said the lady to herself. "It is impossible for Eleanor to endure her as a companion, I wonder Sir Hilton has the effrontery to expose it. Mr. Trewavas," she said, aloud, "will you take a stroll with me in the garden? I should like a little talk with you before I leave."

"Are you going to leave us, Mrs. Maristowe?" said John. "You have received no unpleasant news, I hope?"

"Oh, no ill news," she replied, calmly; "only I have been explaining to Lady Trewavas that if this unpleasantness between Sir Hilton continues, we had better leave. It would be so awkward, you see, for all parties, if we stayed."

She linked her arm in John's, and pacing the shrubbery, she poured forth her complaint to him in haughty words. She was glad Eleanor had acted with a spirit at last. Her daughter could not condescend to any rivalship with Miss Varcoe. Sir Hilton would now have finally chosen between them. For her part, she was not anxious that the engagement should continue. Eleanor had a very large fortune; it would be wiser

IN THINGS FOR ALL.
ORANGEVILLE, MAY 7, 1891.

THE railway bonus delegation will be heard at OTTAWA on Thursday, the 21st inst.

NORTH Wellington election has been protested. Jim McMullen's friends have entered a cross-petition.

A PROTEST ENTERED.

On Saturday last a petition was filed at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, protesting the election of Mr. Andrew Semple, the gentleman declared elected for Centre Wellington. At the elections last March Mr. Semple, the Reform candidate, had a majority of 157 over Mr. W. H. Hunter, the Conservative. In order to get that large majority it is alleged Mr. Semple's agents used money freely in many parts of the riding. Mr. Hugh Ferguson of Orangeville is the petitioner and the usual charges of bribery by agents are preferred. A cross petition has also been filed by the Reformers.

AN INCREASE OF SALARIES.

(World.)

The closing hours of all parliaments are marked with such a rush, fuss and hustle, as inaugurated earlier in the session would clear the slate before the new members could become familiarized with their surroundings so as to spit under the desk without compunction, or ask a favor of one of the House pages with out apologizing.

The last hours of the present Ontario Legislative session was very busy, but are celebrated by a tardy act of justice to Hon. Oliver Mowat and William Ralph Meredith.

The Ontario Government has certain sins at its door, that it shows no great anxiety to put to flight, but all agree that, while it permits fat feeders to expand even to obesity, it has never properly repaid the Premier for his services. An ordinary man may live in comfort on $5000 per year, but as a lawyer Oliver Mowat could many times multiply that sum. He has pursued politics at personal financial loss, though a couple of side provisions for relatives have the appearance of purposed recuperation. But it was a fit and proper thing for the Legislature to increase the Premier's salary to $7000.

No member of the Legislature and no outsider who cares to visit it while in session can come away without feeling that one of the very ablest and most useful men in the House—if not the ablest and most useful without except ion—is William Ralph Meredith. He is always present and always pested. Many times each session his advice is courteously tendered the Premier and gratefully accepted. His abilities all recognize, and his fairness and honest endeavors to promote legislation are proverbial.

He has too long employed his fine abilities for the slight recompense of the ordinary member, who is expected to vote and implored to attempt nothing else. As the motion adopted last night raising his salary to $2000 sets forth, there is not in the province two Houses of Parliament where one can ratify and reconsider the doings of the others.

On the leader of the Opposition very much depends, and $2000 is no fair reward for the conscientious hard labor of W. R. Meredith.

There was no fair basis for objection to the motions made and adopted, and the country will undoubtedly applaud the course of the Legislature Friday night.

The proposal to increase the salary of all members of the Assembly had little to recommend it and suffered deserved defeat. Half the members do nothing, and if value received by the province is to regulate the scale of rewards many of them should be forced to disgorge a salary received by them under false pretences.

ELECTION PROTESTS.

R & B APPROPRIATIONS

A SNUG SUM SET BY FOR STREET WORK.

Encourage Industries—Waste to Start a Woolen Mill—Much Business Transacted.

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the town council was held in the council chamber on Monday night. At 7.35 business commenced, but as the electric illuminator had not yet started it was almost too dark to proceed. The clerk had some trouble in reading the minutes in the dark, but when he got the lamp lighted everything proceeded as usual. As this meeting was a very important one, a large crowd of ratepayers thronged the hall.

The mayor read the following

ACCOUNTS:

Wm. McKinney, 60cts., ordered to be paid; A. Hughson, $80, referred to Assessment committee; D. McDonald, $6.25, referred to T. P. committee.

WOULD LOCATE HERE.

Mr. A. B. Campbell of Lampton Mills communicated the fact to the council that he was anxious to start a woolen mill in Orangeville and asked that his building and plant be exempt from taxation for a term of ten years. Mr. Campbell was in town on Monday and took a look through the place. He was exceedingly well pleased with Orangeville and if his request was granted he would commence to manufacture woolen goods here. The mayor said Mr. Campbell was talking to him some time ago and he encouraged him to locate here. His worship thought it was a good thing and that Mr. Campbell meant business. Nearly all other manufacturers were after bonuses. Everybody was in favor of encouraging the project and a motion to that effect was adopted.

SUNDAY TRAINS.

C. P. R. Superintendent Tait replied to the clerk's letter about running trains on the Sabbath. Mr. Tait said his company tried to let its employes observe Sunday as they thought best, but it was necessary to run trains on Sunday. The C P. R. had to compete with American roads where Sunday running was largely indulged in, and for numerous other reasons Sunday trains had to be run.

P. M. Pattullo wrote regarding the police court fines. A statement of his account, which was attached to the letter, amounted to $169 he paid for books, etc. The town was in his debt to the extent of $19. He would meet a committee of the council and arrange the matter.

THAT SPUR LINE.

The Owen Sound Stone Quarrying & Construction Co's letter, regarding the building of a spur line from the C. P. R. to the Mono quarries, was forwarded by Secretary Bailey of the Orangeville board of trade. A full report of the board of trade's meeting appeared in THE SUN's last issue. The mayor thought there were many legal obstacles in the way of complying with the company's request. Ald. Ketchum moved that a committee consisting of the mayor, reeve, Young, Gillespie and the mover be appointed to confer with the board of trade's committee. No person opposed the motion and it carried.

Reeve Lindsay handed in Town Treasurer Irwin's report for the month of April.

ENGINEER HARKIES RESIGNS.

Chairman Gillespie read the F. & W. report. The report referred to the recent fire at the waterworks and asked power to engage a suitable place to keep the fire appliances until a new fire hall was erected. The report also stated that there was trouble among the firemen over the present captain, and asked power to reorganize the brigade. Engineer Harkies, who has been in charge of the waterworks for three years, tendered his resignation. He said he and his family lost all their clothing in the fire and asked some consideration at the hands of the council. The council went into committee of the whole on the report, Deputy-reeve Endacott in the chair. Each clause in the report was dealt with separately. The engineer's resignation was accepted and his salary for May was allowed. Applications for the position were received from James Babe and James Pickering, a young unmarried man. Mr. Babe took the floor and addressed the council. He was competent to take charge of the works, as he had twenty years' experience in running engines. The present salary ($250 per annum, bonuses free rent, oil and fuel) would not suit him; it would have to be increased $50. The building would have to be remodelled before he could take up his residence therein. Mr. Pickering came forward, blushing clean up to the roots of his hair. He had several recommendations from former employers and he would assume control at the old salary. He was at present employed in E. D. Moody's grist mill, but would throw up the job if he was appointed caretaker of the fire department. He got the call and went on duty shortly afterwards. Ald. Gillespie requested the mayor to state what he heard about the trouble in the brigade. His worship said the firemen seemed dissatisfied with the captain and they threatened to resign if he was kept on. Mayor Walsh also stated that he had taken what steps he thought best to ferret out the incendiary, but hoped the council would not ask him to make a public statement. The council rose and the report was adopted.

Ald. Adamson stated that since the last R. & B. report was submitted $35.19½ had been expended in repairing streets.

R. & B. ESTIMATE.

Chairman Adamson of the R. & B. committee brought in the estimates for street work this year. The council went into committee of the whole and reported the following allowances: West Broadway, $220, the township of Mono to contribute $100; east Broadway, $40; West ward $72; North ward $40; East ward, $40; South ward, $368 50; sidewalk on east side of Mill street, $45; general repairs $200. A clause in the report provided $40 to gravel Mill street, but a special report will be submitted later on.

THE POETICAL WOODMEASURER.

Poet Laureate McLean, who has acted in the capacity of woodmeasurer, sent in his semi annual report. He thought it was a great "boom" to consumers of wood. A motion re engaging him was carried.

BORROWED $8000.

Reeve Lindsay introduced a bylaw to borrow $8000 to keep things running until the taxes are collected. The committee of the whole and the bylaw received its third reading.

ON TO OTTAWA!

Mayor Walsh drew the council's attention to the fact that the railway bonus deputation would go to Ottawa some time this month. Delegates from all over Ontario would be present and nearly every municipality had its delegate appointed. Orangeville, which has figured conspicuously in the movement, had not appointed its delegate yet. The mayor was the unanimous choice. Some thought he should be allowed $100, others $50, etc. His worship suggested $25, and his suggestion was accepted.

COURT OF REVISION.

Reeve Lindsay moved that the mayor, reeve, deputy-reeve, Green, and Youmans be the court of revision for 1891. The motion carried.

CHIT CHAT.

During the months of June, July and August the council will not meet until 8 o'clock.

The Druggists' Association which meet here on Monday next, were granted the free use of the council chamber.

Ald. Adamson asked if the clerk had received any replies from saw mills regarding supplying the corporation with lumber. The clerk said he had and the replies were at his office.

BORN, BOUND, BURIED.—There were registered at the town clerk's office during the month of April two births, five marriages and six deaths.

TOWNSHIP COUNCILS.—Mono council will meet at Mono Centre on Friday, May 29th. Amaranth council will meet at Laurel on May 30th, and East Garafraxa council will meet at Marsville on Saturday, May 30th.

COOL WEATHER.—The weather for the past several days has been very cool and many people had to fall back on their winter clothing. The beautiful! snow flurried all day Tuesday and winter was with us for a short time.

NEARLY A BLAZE.—Between 6 and 7 o'clock on Monday evening "Doc" Barnhart, a clerk in Turner's drug store, discovered flames issuing from the engine room of the stone grist mill on Mill street. "Doc" called as loud as he could for help, which arrived in the nick of time. The blaze was extinguished before doing any serious damage.

SUNDAY SPORTSMEN.—Numerous complaints have reached THE SUN about town boys adjourning to a neighboring bush on Sundays and spend the day by shooting off revolvers and otherwise conduct themselves in an unseemly manner. One of the complainants says he will prosecute the kids (?) if they do not discontinue this unholy work.

DUFFERIN TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.—The Dufferin Teachers' Association will hold their next meeting in the high school building, Orangeville, on Thursday and Friday, June 11 and 12. It will be a monster gathering and every teacher in Dufferin is expected to be present. The musical and literary programme will be followed by a lecture on the "Success and Failure in Country Schools" by N. W. Campbell, Esq.

FISHERMAN'S LUCK.—The fishing season opened on Friday, and, of course, everybody had to go a-fishing. This season is similar to any other season, some having good catches and others having only stories of the big 'uns getting away. Several Torontonians were angling in this vicinity last week and were fortunate in getting down into fishing trout. Barber Greenle, the tribe painter, claims the championship for Orangeville. He brought every speckled beauty in the Creek.

FISHED ON SUNDAY.—Michael Longway, an old resident of this town who resides in the north ward, appeared before P. M. Pattullo a few days ago for fishing when he should have been saying his prayers in church. The offence was committed a week ago Sunday. Fishery Inspector Hughson was the complainant, but he did not want "Mack" severely dealt with; he only wanted to give other offenders warning to quit in time. P. M. Pattullo let "Mack" off this time by paying $1.

SOLD LIQUOR TO A BOY.—License-inspector Anderson laid an information against Hotelkeeper James Bean of Primrose for selling whiskey to Willie Allen, a boy under 16 years of age, on the 29th day of April last. The rum-seller appeared before P. M. Pattullo at Saturday's police court and pleaded guilty to the charges. The magistrate mulcted him in the tune of $10 and costs, $17 15 in all. This should prove a warning to hotelkeepers who supply minors with liquor, as the next guilty person will not be so leniently dealt with.

BACK FROM MANITOBA.—Thomas R., son of Mr Thos. E. Reid of Amaranth, one of the young men who went to Manitoba about six weeks ago, returned on Monday. He reports wages from $20 to $22 a month during the summer season, with nothing to do during the winter. An immense quantity of wheat has been sown this spring, much of which is already getting green. He says that they were very high winds while he was there which blew the loose soil in clouds, filling his mouth, eyes and ears with dust. This made work very disagreeable while putting in the crop.

MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS.—The following ex pupils and ex teachers of Orangeville high and public schools have been successful in passing their examinations in the medical department of Toronto University: First year, A. W. Aiken; second year, A. Crichton, (honors); third year, J. H. Middlebro, (honors and scholarship), Henry Gear, (honors), J. J. Harper, (honors); M. B. examinations, M. Dunning, (honors), T. H. Henry, (honors), R. C. Griffith, (honors). Mr. Georgeff. Martin has passed the final examination for D D S. in Toronto University. He intends to practice at Toronto Junction.

WE'LL CELEBRATE.—A large number of citizens met in the council chamber on Tuesday evening to appoint committees and make arrangements to celebrate Dominion day this year on a larger scale than ever. The first business was to elect officers, and the following were chosen: J S. Youmans, honorary-president; H. Gillespie, president; W. Wallace, vice president; B McGuire, treasurer; T. H. Henry, secretary. Committees were appointed to look after the many branches of the celebration. A great many new attractions will be procured this year and the prospects of an extraordinary exhibition are very bright.

A GREAT WOOD MARKET.—Poet Laureate McLean, who acts in the capacity of woodmeasurer, sent in a laudatory report to the council about Orangeville's wood business. For the half year from November 1st to April 1st he measured 1796 loads of wood. Long wood (hard), 420 loads, short, 1159; long (soft), 178; short, 39; loads containing 1 cord or more, 494; largest load, 306 feet; smallest, 36 feet; greatest number of loads on market in one day, 38. The poet thought the wood by-law was a great scheme and people told him they were robbed before it was introduced. Since it got working properly they saved 25 cents a load.

A COSTLY LIBEL SUIT.—Among the few cases that came up for trial at the Peel assizes last week was one brought by W. J. McHugh, a C. P. R foreman, against Bracken Bros., millers, of Boston Mills. McHugh was formerly employed by the defendants, but left before his time was out. Bracken Bros. wrote a letter to the railway authorities informing them that McHugh had stolen some of the company's ties. McHugh entered a civil suit claiming damages for libel. The jury awarded him $35 and full costs, which amount to something like $300 or $350. Previous to the suit coming to trial the plaintiff offered to settle it by by each paying their own costs.

LICENSES AGAIN.—The Dufferin license commissioners met in the court house on Friday last and finished some business they left over from their last meeting. Licenses were granted to the American hotel and the Gordon house. The applications of Joe Edwards of the Lennox house, Ed. Lecson of the Globe hotel and Emma Oliver of the C. P. R. restaurant, the latter for a wine and beer license, were refused. The chairman voted against Lecson's application because he was opposed to the granting of more than six licenses in Orangeville. George Swain of the Grand Central hotel, Grand Valley, tried to get the commissioners to reopen his case, but it was no go. Jack Duff of Rands did not satisfy the commissioners he owned the land that he wanted a license for and he will not be permitted to hopefully dispose intoxicating liquor until he produces a lease or a deed.

WE ALL MISS COUPON.—"You'll never miss the water till the well runs dry" is an old and truthful saying, and it is strikingly illustrated to us in another way by the absence of the town bell. The disastrous fire of Friday night destroyed the tower and 2500-lb. "City of Orangeville" took a drop from the top of the tower to the bottom of the reservoir, a distance of seventy feet. There were many late breakfasts on Saturday morning, most were late to work, some worked overtime, all waiting for the bell to ring; but it will be many moons before "Joe Beswick" swings aloft again. The trustees of St. Mark's church very generously came to the rescue, and on Tuesday morning the church bell rang. It will ring at 7 a. m., 12 noon, 1 p. m. and 6 p. m., until the tower is rebuilt. In case of fire it will also be used as an alarm, a rope being placed conveniently on the outside. The ratepayers owe the trustees of St. Mark's church a debt of gratitude for the generous and gratuitous offer.

The Millionaire Ex-M. P. for Glengarry Passes Away in Nova Scotia.

CORNWALL, May 1.—P. Purcell of Summerstown, ex M. P. for Glengarry, died at Annapolis, N. S., this morning. The remains will be interred at Flanagan's Point, east of Cornwall, Tuesday at 2 p. m. Mr. Purcell's wealth is estimated at about $1,000,000.

Deceased was born in Glengarry May 1, 1833, and consequently was 58 years old the day of his death. He married Isabella, daughter of Angus McDonald of Glengarry. For years he has been a railway and canal contractor and constructed St. Peter's Canal, N. S., section 21 of the Intercolonial Railway, 250 miles of the C P. R. west from Port Arthur and several other important railway and canal works in Canada and the United States. He only served one term in parliament, retiring at the last general election.

This hamlet was the scene of great excitement on Wednesday last. Several rigs galloped through the village at full speed on their way to Mono Mills. After a good deal of detective work your correspondent learned that it was a wedding party from Coulterville. Later on we were informed that the happy couple was Mr. Joe Pierson and Miss Penaiton, eldest daughter of R. Penaiton, Esq. They spent their honeymoon at Mono Mills and when they returned in the evening the boys around Coulterville held a charivari there and then. The groom took the welcome up in the wrong way and proceeded to show his disgust by knocking four of the welcomers out. James M—sports two mourning peepers in consequence.

HIS BLUE-GOGGLED TORONTO WIFE.

Successful Disguise of an Angry Spouse on Her Husband's Track—Former-ly a Toronto Alderman.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 3.—In 1872 while employed as a clerk in a big whole sale establishment in Toronto, Fred McGiffon married young lady of that city, and for several years they lived together very happily. The fruit of their marriage was one girl, now 17 years of age and an invalid. McGiffon was a very popular man in the Canadian city and served two terms as a member of the municipal council. About five months ago Mrs. McGiffon accompanied her daughter to Florida. On not hearing from her husband she became frightened lest something had occurred, and returned with her daughter immediately. When she arrived at Toronto she found that he had disappeared, and for four months she could get no trace of him. About three weeks through a friend she discovered that he had gone to Detroit, Mich. Detectives were placed at work on the case, and it was soon found that McGiffon had married a young widow, his first love, and that she had disposed of all her property and that the two had come to Kansas City.

The woman whom McGiffon had married in Detroit was Mary Smith, and when they located in Kansas City he assumed the name of Smith.

By a ruse, McGiffon, alias Smith, was induced to go to an attorney's office where he was confronted with wife No 1. He was dumfounded and wept bitterly. McGiffon was committed in default of bail.

Mrs. McGiffon, the first, is a rather attractive woman of about forty. She has worn blue goggles while in Kansas City in order to disguise herself. She says that McGiffon left herself and daughter in very straitened circumstances.

INCENDIARISM!!

THE BELL, TOWER AND FIRE HALL BURNT.

The Engineer was Driven From his Post by the Flames.

STEAM BEES VERY, VERY SLOWLY!

STEPS TAKEN TO CATCH THE PERPETRATOR.

Loss Covered by Insurance—We Should Have a Better System of Fire Protection—Fire Flashes.

The last attempt to burn the waterworks buildings was more successful than the first.

The firebug's effort a few weeks ago was nipped in the bud, but a second trial resulted in the destruction of the bell, the hose tower and the wooden structure in which was stored the reel, the hook and ladder truck and a considerable quantity of wood and oil.

Fortunately for the safety of the town the flames did not reach the boiler, the engines or the pumps, and the reel, trucks and the major portion of the hose were saved, although at one time it looked as though the entire outfit was doomed.

It was about 10.30 on Friday night when the brazen tones of the big bell boomed forth what proved to be the last loud alarm of the wide-mouthed monster which has so frequently called firemen and citizens to the rescue of valuable buildings in the business portion of the town.

As has so frequently happened in Orangeville, the fire broke out but a few minutes after the firemen had concluded the business of a regular meeting. At the hour mentioned Mr. T. T. King, who, by an odd coincidence, discovered, in the nick of time, the previous attempt to fire the structure, was passing from the undertaking establishment of Messrs. Clark & Sons to John street when he was startled by an

from the rear of the waterworks that left no doubt in his mind that coal oil or some equally combustible material had been employed to make the pyrotechnic display a brilliant and successful one. He immediately ran to the bell-rope, but was able to give but a few strokes of the alarm when the flames forced him to retreat. The heat from burning pine and oil was so intense that in a very few moments forked flames flew to the top of the tower, and all that part of the town was illuminated as with a thousand eletric lights and excited citizens soon assembled in hundreds to witness the destruction of corporation property.

As luck would have it Capt. Charley King of the fire brigade and two firemen were seated in the engine room, in blissful ignorance of the proximity of the firebug, when the alarm was sounded, and in a short time hose was attached to the hydrants, the hook and ladder truck was got out and the firemen were ready for business. But just here a hitch occurred. There was little steam and less water. Some said the engineer was driven from his post by the flames, some said he was "rattled," and some said—well, at all events, the wooden portion of the structure was rapidly

GOING UP IN SMOKE.

A number of citizens formed a pail brigade and by strenuous efforts saved the building to the west of the works, occupied by Mr. George Beswick, others endeavored to prevent the spread of the fire to the building to the east, occupied by Mr. Clark, and still others said "Let her go, Gallagher!"

In course of time the services of Mr. Orange Jull and others were secured, and they took charge of the engines and run the pumps until the fire was got under control. By this time the big bell was in the soup, or rather in the tank, 70 feet below its former position, the reel and truck house was a the engine and boiler house was damaged so badly that a new roof will be required, and the portion of the building used as a dwelling by the engineer was unfit to shelter a woodshuck. The King building occupied by Undertaker Clark suffered severely. All the back portion was destroyed, nothing but the walls remaining. Half of the main roof will have to be replaced and the floors and ceilings throughout will have to be renewed. The loss on this building is $1200, with an insurance of $1000. Mr. Clark, who had but lately moved in, loses heavily through damage by water and removing of goods.

The total insurance on the water works is $5,000, $1,600 being on the reel house, hose, tower and bell. The latter weighed 2,600 pounds, and when it struck the flooring it smashed timbers 8 x 10 inches and almost buried itself in the earth at the bottom of the tank. It was so badly broken and cracked as to be a total loss.

FIRE FLASHES.

Who was it?

Mayor Walsh was early on the scene and worked hard to save the corporation property.

The new engineer and another man have been kept at the waterworks since the conflagration.

Some people say that there was no kindling wood in sight when the fire broke out. Whose fault was it?

Hundreds of people stood watching the burning tower until the big bell took its last plunge. It broke immense timber in its descent.

F. & W. Chairman Gillespie was in half-a-dozen places at once and his voice could be heard above the din and confusion that reigned supreme.

The big bell was roused from its position in the reservoir on Tuesday. It was rendered useless by its 70 foot fall, having been cracked in several places.

"Hang the scoundrel!" reached our reporter's ears more than once, and if the villain (not the scribe) was caught he would have received pretty rough treatment.

It said that 70 gallons of coal oil were thrown into the furnace during the fire on Friday night. A gentleman informs us that the fire in the boiler was drowned with coal oil.

We admit that our system of fire protection is a fraud of the first water and a disgrace to any town of this size, but that's no reason why people should stand by and crack jokes while valuable property is being destroyed.

Some leather's mean. Some workmen are mean. Some shoe sellers are mean, and how mean shoes are made and sold.

Six out of every ten pairs of shoes are shams—pasteboard stiffeners, "pancakes." Bits of useless leather are pressed into insoles, just as bits of useless wool are carded with long cotton and made into shoddy.

Never was a time when shoes looked so well and were so badly, until the shoeing of a whole family has come to be a serious task. There's no reason for mean shoes. Some shopkeepers see a reason for them in their cheapness, but if that's so, the meaner they're made, the better. (The wearer wouldn't tolerate that reason for a moment). The only room for them is the room they usurp, and the saving is a saving at the spigot to waste at the bung.

And the remedy?

There's a store where you can't buy shoddy shoes, because they don't sell them; where they have neither two prices nor two names for the same thing; where American kid doesn't pass for French, and machine-sewed doesn't masquerade as hand-sewed.

It's here. None but the best at the lowest prices, though best only means with what restrictions of price that're necessary.

For the men there's a good seamless Bal. for $1.75, and a better at $2 50, good enough to get married in. For the ladies here's some nice Dongola Shoes, Bals. and Button'd, at $2.75, the J. D. K. make (none better), as well as Toe Slippers at 85c., and Dong. Oxfords at $1.25, with childrens' shoes galore. There's no better for the money anywhere. We don't know how to sell "poor" shoes. More than that, we don't want to know.

You can get a Lady's fine Button Boot of us at 90c. a pair.

ORANGEVILLE, MAY 2, 1891.

THE railway bonus delegation will be heard at Ottawa on Thursday, the 21st inst.

NORTH Wellington election has been protested. Jim McMullen's friends have entered a counter-petition.

A PROTEST ENTERED.

On Saturday last a petition was filed at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, protesting the election of Mr. Andrew Semple, the gentleman declared elected for Centre Wellington. At the elections last March Mr. Semple, the Reform candidate, had a majority of 157 over Mr. W. H. Hunter, the Conservative. In order to get that large majority it is alleged Mr. Semple's agents used money freely in many parts of the riding. Mr. Hugh Ferguson of Orangeville is the petitioner and the usual charges of bribery by agents are preferred. A cross petition has been filed by the Reformers.

AN INCREASE OF SALARIES.

(World.)

The closing hours of all parliaments are marked with such a rush, fuss and hustle, as inaugurated earlier in the session would clear the slate before the new members would become familiarized with their surroundings so to spit under the desk without compunction, or ask a favor of one of the House pages without apologizing.

The last hours of the present Ontario Legislative session was very busy, but are celebrated by a tardy act of justice to Hon. Oliver Mowat and William Ralph Meredith.

The Ontario Government has certain cies at its door, that it shows no great anxiety to put to flight, but all agree that, while it permits fat feeders to expand even to obesity, it has never properly repaid the Premier for his services. An ordinary man may live in comfort on $5000 per year, but as a lawyer Oliver Mowat could many times multiply that sum. He has pursued politics at personal financial loss, though a couple of side provisions for relatives have the appearance of purposed recuperation. But it was a fit and proper thing for the Legislature to increase the Premier's salary to $7000.

No member of the Legislature and no outsider who cares to visit it while in session can come away without feeling that one of the very ablest and most useful men in the House—if not the ablest and most useful without except ion—is William Ralph Meredith. He is always present and always posted. Many times each session his advice is courteously tendered the Premier and gratefully accepted. His abilities all recognize, and his fairness and honest endeavors to promote legislation are proverbial.

He has too long employed his fine abilities for the slight recompense of the ordinary member, who is expected to vote and implored to attempt nothing else. As the motion adopted last night raising his salary to $2000 sets forth, there is not in the province two Houses of Parliament where one can ratify and reconsider the doings of the others.

On the leader of the Opposition very much depends, and $2000 is no fair reward for the conscientious hard labor of W. R. Meredith.

There was no fair basis for objection to the motions made and adopted, and the country will undoubtedly applaud the course of the Legislature Friday night.

The proposal to increase the salary of all members of the Assembly had little to recommend it and suffered deserved defeat. Half the members do nothing, and if value received by the province is to regulate the scale of rewards many of them should be forced to disgorge a salary received by them under false pretences.

Notice of the protest of Dr. Lauderkin's election in South Grey was published on Tuesday. Mr. W. E. Williams, of Durham, is the petitioner. Nearly every riding in the Dominion seems to have an election protest but North Wellington—Mr. Forest Representative.

the town council met last night in the council chamber on Monday night. As it was business commenced, but as the electric illuminator had not yet started it was almost too dark to proceed. The clerk had some trouble in reading the minutes in the dark, but when he got the lamp lighted everything proceeded as usual. As this meeting was a very important one, a large crowd of ratepayers thronged the hall.

The mayor read the following

ACCOUNTS:

Wm. McKinney, 60c., ordered to be paid; A. Hughson, $30, referred to Assessment committee; D. McDonald, $6.25, referred to T. P. committee.

WOULD LOCATE HERE.

Mr. A. B. Campbell of Lampton Mills communicated the fact to the council that he was anxious to start a woolen mill in Orangeville and asked that his building and plant be exempt from taxation for a term of ten years. Mr. Campbell was in town on Monday and took a look through the place. He was exceedingly well pleased with Orangeville and if his request was granted he would commence to manufacture woolen goods here. The mayor said Mr. Campbell was talking to him some time ago and he encouraged him to locate here. His worship thought it was a good thing and that Mr. Campbell meant business. Nearly all other manufacturers were after bonuses. Everybody was in favor of encouraging the project and a motion to that effect was adopted.

SUNDAY TRAINS.

C. P. R. Superintendent Tait replied to the clerk's letter about running trains on the Sabbath. Mr. Tait said his company tried to let its employes observe Sunday as they thought best, but it was necessary to run trains on Sunday. The C. P. R. had to compete with American roads where Sunday running was largely indulged in, and for numerous other reasons Sunday trains had to be run.

P. M. Pattullo wrote regarding the police court fines. A statement of his accounts, which was attached to the letter, amounted to $169 be paid for books, etc. The town was in his debt to the extent of $19. He would meet a committee of the council and arrange the matter.

THAT SPUR LINE.

The Owen Sound Stone Quarrying & Construction Co's letter, regarding the building of a spur line from the C. P. R. to the Mono quarries, was forwarded by Secretary Bailey of the Orangeville board of trade. A full report of the board of trade's meeting appeared in THE SUN's last issue. The mayor thought there were many legal obstacles in the way of complying with the company's request. Ald. Ketchum moved that a committee consisting of the mayor, reeve, Young, Gillespie and the mover be appointed to confer with the board of trade's committee. No person opposed the motion and it carried.

Reeve Lindsay handed in Town Treasurer Irwin's report for the month of April.

ENGINEER HARKIRS RESIGNS.

Chairman Gillespie read the F. & W. report. The report referred to the recent fire at the waterworks and asked power to engage a suitable place to keep the fire appliances until a new fire hall was erected. The report also stated that there was trouble among the firemen over the present captain, and asked power to reorganize the brigade. Engineer Harkies, who has been in charge of the waterworks for three years, tendered his resignation. He said he and his family lost all their clothing in the fire and asked some consideration at the hands of the council. The council went into committee of the whole on the report, Deputy-reeve Endscott in the chair. Each clause in the report was dealt with separately. The engineer's resignation was accepted and his salary for May was allowed. Applications for the position were received from James Babe and James Pickering, a young unmarried man. Mr. Babe took the floor and addressed the council. He was competent to take charge of the works, as he had twenty years' experience in running engines. The present salary ($250 per annum, houses free rent, oil and fuel) would not suit him; it would have to be increased $50. The building would have to be remodelled before he could take up his residence therein. Mr. Pickering came forward, blushing clean up to the roots of his hair. He had several recommendations from former employers and he would assume control at the old salary. He was at present employed in E. D. Moody's grist mill, but would throw up the job if he was appointed caretaker of the fire department. He got the call and went on duty shortly afterwards. Ald. Gillespie requested the mayor to state what he heard about the trouble in the brigade. His worship said the firemen seemed dissatisfied with the captain and they threatened to resign if he was kept on. Mayor Walsh also stated that he had taken what steps he thought best to ferret out the incendiary, but hoped the council would not ask him to make a public statement. The council rose and the report was adopted.

Ald. Adamson stated that since the last R. & B. report was submitted, $35.19½ had been expended in repairing streets.

R. & B. ESTIMATE.

Chairman Adamson of the R. & B. committee brought in the estimates for street work this year. The council went into committee of the whole and reported the following allowances: West Broadway, $220, the township of Mono to contribute $100; east Broadway, $40: West ward $72; North ward $40; East ward, $40; South ward, $368 50; sidewalk on east side of Mill street, $45; general repairs $200. A clause in the report provided $40 to gravel Mill street, but a special report will be submitted later on.

THE POETICAL WOODMEASURER.

Poet Laureate McLean, who has acted in the capacity of woodmeasurer, sent in his semi-annual report. He thought it was a great "boom" to consumers of wood. A motion re-engaging him was carried.

BORROWED $8000.

Reeve Lindsay introduced a bylaw to borrow $8000 to keep things running until the taxes are collected. The council then went into committee of the whole and passed the bylaw. The council then adjourned.

Mr. Forest merchants have agreed to close their stores at 6 o'clock during the summer months.

BORN, BOUND, BURIED.—There were registered at the town clerk's office during the month of April two births, five marriages and six deaths.

TOWNSHIP COUNCILS.—Mono council will meet at Mono Centre on Friday, May 29th. Amaranth council will meet at Laurel on May 30th, and East Garafraxa council will meet at Marsville on Saturday, May 30th.

COOL WEATHER.—The weather for the past several days has been very cool and many people had to fall back on their winter clothing. The beautiful snow flurried all day Tuesday and winter was with us for a short time.

NEARLY A BLAZE.—Between 6 and 7 o'clock on Monday evening "Doc" Barnhart, a clerk in Turner's drug store, discovered flames issuing from the engine room of the stone grist mill on Mill street. "Doc" called as loud as he could for help, which arrived in the nick of time. The blaze was extinguished before doing any serious damage.

SUNDAY SPORTSMEN.—Numerous complaints have reached THE SUN about town boys adjourning to a neighboring bush on Sundays and spend the day by shooting off revolvers and otherwise conduct themselves in an unseemly manner. One of the complainants says he will prosecute the kids (?) if they do not discontinue this unholy work.

DUFFERIN TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.—The Dufferin Teachers' Association will hold their next meeting in the high school building, Orangeville, on Thursday and Friday, June 11 and 12. It will be a monster gathering and every teacher in Dufferin is expected to be present. The musical and literary programme will be followed by a lecture on the "Success and Failure in Country Schools" by N. W. Campbell, Esq.

FISHERMAN'S LUCK.—The fishing season opened on Friday, and, of course, everybody had to go a-fishing. This season is similar to any other season, some having good catches and others having only stories of the big ones getting away. Several Torontonians were angling in this vicinity last week and were [illegible] Jack Duff of Banda did [illegible]

[illegible] parliament, but he did not want [illegible] severely dealt with; he only wanted to give other students warning to quit it then. P. M. Pattullo put "Mac" off this time by paying $1.

SOLD LIQUOR TO A BOY.—License-inspector Anderson laid an information against Hotelkeeper James Bone of Primrose for selling whiskey to Willie Allen, a boy under 16 years of age, on the 29th day of April last. The rum-seller appeared before P. M. Pattullo at Saturday's police court and pleaded guilty to the charge. The magistrate mitted him to the tune of $19 and costs, $17 15, in all. This should prove a warning to hotelkeepers who supply minors with liquor, as the next guilty person will not be so leniently dealt with.

BACK FROM MANITOBA.—Thomas R., son of Mr Thos. R. Reid of Amaranth, one of the young men who went to Manitoba about six weeks ago, returned on Monday. He reports wages from $20 to $22 a month during the summer season, with nothing to do during the winter. An immense quantity of wheat has been sown this spring, much of which is already getting green. He says that they were very high winds while he was there which blew the loose soil in clouds, filling his mouth, eyes and ears with dust. This made work very disagreeable while putting in the crop.

MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS.—The following ex pupils and ex teachers of Orangeville high and public schools have been successful in passing their examinations in the medical department of Toronto University: First year, A. W. Aikes; second year, A. Crichton, (honors); third year, J. H. Middlebro, (honors and scholarship), Henry Gear, (honors), J. J. Harper, (honors); M. B. examinations, M. Dunning, (honors), T. H. Henry, (honors), R. C. Griffith, (honors). Mr. Georgeo. Martin has passed the final examination for D. D. S. in Toronto University. He intends to practice at Toronto Junction.

WE'LL CELEBRATE.—A large number of citizens met in the council chamber on Tuesday evening to appoint committies and make arrangements to celebrate Dominion day this year on a larger scale than ever. The first business was to elect officers, and the following were chosen: J. S. Youmans, honorary-president; H. Gillespie, president; W. Wallace, vice president; B. McGuire, treasurer; T. H. Henry, secretary. Committes were appointed to look after the many branches of the celebration. A great many new attractions will be procured this year and the prospects of an extraordinary exhibition are very bright.

A GREAT WOOD MARKET.—Poet Laureate McLean, who acts in the capacity of woodmeasurer, read in a laudatory report to the council about Orangeville's wood business. For the half year from November 1st to April 1st he measured 1796 loads of wood. Long wood (hard), 420 loads, short, 1159; long (soft), 178; short, 39; loads containing 1 cord or more, 494; largest load, 306 feet; smallest, 36 feet; greatest number of loads on market in one day, 38. The poet thought the wood by-law was a great scheme and people told him they were robbed before it was introduced. Since it got working properly they saved 25 cents a load.

MIND YOUR P'S.—A western paper tells its readers to mind their "P's" in the following paragraph. "Persons who Patronize Papers should Pay Promptly, for the Pecuniary Prospects of the Press Possesses a Peculiar Power in Pushing forward Public Prosperity. If the Printer is Paid Promptly and his Pocket book kept Plethoric by Prompt Paying Patrons he can wield Pen to his Paper to Praise, his Paragraphs are more Pointed, he Paints his Pictures of Passing events in more Pleasing colors, and the Perusal of his Paper is a Pleasure to the People. Paste this Piece of Proverbial Philosophy in some Place where all Persons can Perceive it.

A COSTLY LIBEL SUIT.—Among the few cases that came up for trial at the Peel assizes last week was one brought by W. J. Mullugh, a C. P. R foreman, against Bracken Bros., millers, of Boston Mills. McHugh was formerly employed by the defendants, but left before his time was out. Bracken Bros. wrote a letter to the railway authorities informing them that McHugh had stolen some of the company's ties. McHugh entered a civil suit claiming damages for libel. The jury awarded him $35 and full costs, which amount to something like $300 or $350. Previous to the suit coming to trial the plaintiff offered to settle it by by each paying their own costs.

LICENSES AGAIN.—The Division license commissioners met in the court house on Friday last and finished some business they left over from their last meeting. Licenses were granted to the American hotel and the Gordon house. The applications of Joe Edwards of the Lennox house, Ed. Leeson of the Globe hotel and Emma Oliver of the C. P. R. restaurant, the latter for a wine and beer license, were refused. The chairman voted against Leeson's application because he was opposed to the granting of more than six licenses in Orangeville. George Swain of the Grand Central hotel, Grand Valley, tried to get the commissioners to reopen his case, but it was no go. Jack Duff of Banda did [illegible]

STEAM MOVES VERY, VERY SLOWLY!

STEPS TAKEN TO CATCH THE PERPETRATOR.

Loss Covered by Insurance—We Should Have a Better System of Fire Protection—Fire Flashes.

The last attempt to burn the waterworks buildings was more successful than the first.

The firebug's effort a few weeks ago was nipped in the bud, but a second trial resulted in the destruction of the bell, the boss tower and the wooden structure in which was stored the reel, the hook and ladder truck and a considerable quantity of wood and oil.

Fortunately for the safety of the town the flames did not reach the boiler, the engines or the pumps, and the reel, trucks and the major portion of the hose were saved, although at one time it looked as though the entire outfit was doomed.

It was about 10.30 on Friday night when the brazen tones of the big bell boomed forth what proved to be the last loud alarm of the wide-mouthed monster which has so frequently called firemen and citizens to the rescue of valuable buildings in the business portion of the town.

As has so frequently happened in Orangeville, the fire broke out but a few minutes after the firemen had concluded the business of a regular meeting. At the hour mentioned Mr. T. T. King, who, by an odd coincidence, discovered, in the nick of time, the previous attempt to fire the structure, was passing from the undertaking establishment of Messrs. Clark & Sons to John street when he was startled by an

from the rear of the waterworks that left no doubt in his mind that coal oil or some equally combustible material had been employed to make the pyrotechnic display a brilliant and successful one. He immediately ran to the bell rope, but was able to give but a few strokes of the alarm when the flames forced him to retreat. The heat from burning pine and oil was so intense that in a very few moments forked flames flew to the top of the tower, and all that part of the town was illuminated as with a thousand electric lights and excited citizens soon assembled in hundreds to witness the destruction of corporation property.

As luck would have it Capt. Charley King of the fire brigade and two fire men were seated in the engine room, in blissful ignorance of the proximity of the firebug, when the alarm was sounded, and in a short time hose was attached to the hydrants, the hook and ladder truck was got out and the firemen were ready for business. But just here a hitch occurred. There was little steam and less water. Some said the engineer was driven from his post by the flames, some said he was "rattled," and some said—well, at all events, the wooden portion of the structure was rapidly

GOING UP IN SMOKE.

A number of citizens formed a pail brigade and by strenuous efforts saved the building to the west of the works, occupied by Mr. George Beswick, others endeavored to prevent the spread of the fire to the building to the east, occupied by Mr. Clark, and still others said "Let her go, Gallagher!"

In course of time the services of Mr. Orange Jull and others were secured, and they took charge of the engines and run the pumps until the fire was got under control. By this time the big bell was in the soup, or rather in the tank, 70 feet below its former position, the reel and truck house was a the engine and boiler house was damaged so badly that a new roof will be required, and the portion of the building used as a dwelling by the engineer was unfit to shelter a woodchuck. The King building occupied by Undertaker Clark suffered severely. All the back portion was destroyed, nothing but the walls remaining. Half of the main roof will have to be replaced and the floors and ceilings throughout will have to be renewed. The loss on this building is $1200, with an insurance of $1000. Mr. Clark, who had but lately moved in, loses heavily through damage by water and removing of goods.

The total insurance on the waterworks is $5,000, $1 600 being on the reel house, hose, tower and bell. The latter weighed 2,600 pounds, and when it struck the flooring it smashed timbers 8 x 10 inches and almost buried itself in the earth at the bottom of the tank. It was so badly broken and cracked as to be a total loss.

FIRE FLASHES.

Who was it?

Mayor Walsh was early on the scene and worked hard to save the corporation property.

The new engineer and another man have been kept at the waterworks since the conflagration.

Some people say that there was no kindling wood in sight when the fire broke out. Whose fault was it?

Hundreds of people stood watching the burning tower until the big bell took its last plunge. It broke immense timber in its descent.

F. & W. Chairman Gillespie was in half-a-dozen places at once and his voice could be heard above the din and confusion that reigned supreme.

The big bell was roused from its position in the reservoir on Tuesday. It was rendered useless by its 70-foot fall, having been cracked in several places.

"Hang the scoundrel!" reached our reporter's ears more than once, and if the villain (not the scribe) was caught he would have received pretty rough treatment.

It said that 70 gallons of coal oil were thrown into the furnace during the fire on Friday night. A gentleman informs us that the fire in the boiler was drowned with coal oil.

We admit that our system of fire protection is a fraud of the first water and a disgrace to any town of this size, but that's no reason why people should stand by and crack jokes while valuable property is being destroyed.

PAT PURCELL DEAD.

The Millionaire Ex-M. P. for Glengarry Passes Away in Nova Scotia.

CORNWALL, May 1.—P. Purcell of Summerstown, ex M. P. for Glengarry, died at Annapolis, N. S., this morning. The remains will be interred at Fiana gan's Point, east of Cornwall, Tuesday at 2 p. m. Mr. Purcell's wealth is estimated at about $1,000,000.

Deceased was born in Glengarry May 1, 1833, and consequently was 58 years old the day of his death. He married Isabella, daughter of Angus McDonald of Glengarry. For years he has been a railway and canal contractor and constructed St. Peter's Canal, N. S., section 21 of the Intercolonial Railway, 250 miles of the C P. R. west from Port Arthur and several other important railway and canal works in Canada and the United States. He only served one term in parliament, retiring at the last general election.

BLOUNT.

Seeding is about over around here and tall wheat looks well.

Dick McKinnlese is rushing things for all he's worth for Bob. He expects to back fifty in the sweet by-and-by.

George Brookes and family, who removed here from Caledon a few weeks ago, have been sorely afflicted of late. George is laid up with a fractured leg, and Tom has been seriously ill from inflammation, but he is recovering. Jump on! Bob, and he'll get better.

This hamlet was the scene of great excitement on Wednesday last. Several rigs galloped through the village at full speed on their way to Mono Mills. After a good deal of detective work your correspondent learned that it was a wedding party from Coulterville. Later on we were informed that the happy couple was Mr. Joe Pierson and Miss Penalton, eldest daughter of R. Penalton, Esq. They spent their honeymoon at Mono Mills and when they returned in the evening the boys around Coulterville held a charivari there and then. The groom took the welcome up in the wrong way and proceeded to show his disgust by knocking four of the welcomers out. James M— sports two mourning posters in consequence.

HIS BLUE-GOGGLED TORONTO WIFE.

Successful Disguise of an Angry Spouse on Her Husband's Track—Formerly a Toronto Alderman.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 3.—In 1872 while employed as a clerk in a big whole sale establishment in Toronto, Fred McGiffon married young lady of that city, and for several years they lived together very happily. The fruit of their marriage was one girl, now 17 years of age and an invalid. McGiffon was a very popular man in the Canadian city and served two terms as a member of the municipal council. About five months ago Mrs. McGiffon accompanied her daughter to Florida. On not hearing from her husband she became frightened lest something had occurred, and returned with her daughter immediately. When she arrived at Toronto she found that he had disappeared, and for four months she could get no trace of him. About three weeks through a friend she discovered that he had gone to Detroit, Mich. Detectives were placed at work on the case, and it was soon found that McGiffon had married a young widow, his first love, and that she had disposed of all her property and that the two had come to Kansas City.

The woman whom McGiffon had married in Detroit was Mary Smith, and when they located in Kansas City he assumed the name of Smith.

By a ruse, McGiffon alias Smith, was induced to go to an attorney's office where he was confronted with wife No 1. He was dumfounded and wept bitterly. McGiffon was committed in default of bail.

Mrs. McGiffon, the first, is a rather attractive woman of about forty. She has worn blue goggles while in Kansas City in order to disguise herself. She says that McGiffon left herself and daughter in very straitened circumstances.

The maple sugar and bun social, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid in connection with the Methodist church was held in the Methodist parsonage on Wednesday evening last. Some leathers mean. Some workmen are mean. Some shoe sellers are mean. But how mean shoes are made and sold.

Six out of every [illegible] pairs of shoes are shams—pasteboard stock, "pancakes." Bits of useless leather are pressed [illegible] into insoles, just as bits of useless wool are carded with long cotton and made into shoddy.

Never was a time when shoes looked so well and were so badly, until the shoeing of a whole family has come to be a serious task. There's no reason for mean shoes. Some shopkeepers see a reason for them in their cheapness, but if that's so, the meaner they're made, the better. (The wearer wouldn't tolerate that reason for a moment). The only room for them is the room they usurp, and the saving is a saving at the spigot to waste at the bung.

And the remedy?

There's a store where you can't buy shoddy shoes, because they don't sell them; where they have neither two prices nor two names for the same thing; where American kid doesn't pass for French, and machine-sewed doesn't masquerade as hand-sewed.

It's here. None but the best at the lowest prices, though best only means with what restrictions of price that're necessary.

For the men there's a good seamless Bal. for $1.75, and a better at $2 50, good enough to get married in. For the ladies here's some nice Dongola Shoes, Bals. and Button'd, at $2.75, the J. D. K. make (none better), as well as Toe Slippers at 85c., and Dong. Oxfords at $1.25, with childrens' shoes galore. There's no better for the money anywhere. We don't know how to sell "poor" shoes. More than that, we don't want to know.

You can get a Lady's fine Button Boot of us at 90c. a pair.

CHARLESTON.

Mr. James Reeburn is about to remove to his farm on lot 22, centre road.

Mr. Joseph Killian has purchased Mr. James Reeburn's farm of 90 acres adjoining the village. We understand the price paid was $4650.

On Tuesday evening of last week the members of lodge No. 273, A. O. U. W., presented Mr. W. J. Dwier, postmaster workman, with a gold headed cane and an address previous to his removal from Charleston to Hillsburg. After the presentation had been made, those present were entertained to luncheon and a very pleasant time was spent. We all regret Mr. Dwier's departure, as he was courteous and obliging, and made an estimable resident.

Mr. Samuel Vogan, the new landlord of the Vogan house, and Mr. Dwier were unable to come to terms in the matter of the weigh-scales in which Mr. Dwier holds five shares. Consequently the late proprietor of the Vogan house nailed up the hostelry and kept possession, but on Saturday 8am took forcible means to get into the house and he is now running the hotel. Mr. Dwier holds a lease of the hotel until the 1st of June next, and the dispute may be turned into a gigantic law suit.

Mr. Jno. Burrell, proprietor of the Queen's hotel, is preparing to build a new shed in addition to the one already occupied. He is bound to be in the front ranks.

Keep the Works in good order.

NEWMAN, Ont., January 15, 1890.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time piece: frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but wait you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.

Yours faithfully,
H. F. ATWELL.

DEAR SIR,—For many years, I have been a firm believer in your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills." Not with a blind faith, but a confidence wrought by an actual personal experience of their value and merit. My business is such that I spend much of my time away from home, and I would not consider my travelling outfit complete without a box of Morse's Pills.

If the married man who wouldn't justify his cut with her family, and leave his son."

"I want a son, John," sobbed she, "not a son-in-law. The idea of parting with Eleanor kills me. How happy I should have been if things had gone as I wished them. Well, who knows? Events may even yet turn in a direction that I know would be the best for Eleanor's sake."

"I am bound to submit to Miss Maristowe's decision," said quiet John and his voice shook; "but if she had seen and returned my devotion, I would have sued for her willingly. As it is, I will try to make her a good brother, and I hope that neither she nor Hilton will never know the pain it costs me. You will keep my secret, Mrs. Maristowe?"

"Sacredly, John, will I keep it," she replied. "But do not despair. Eleanor has positively given up her engagement and given back her ring; and when the first shock and distress, which she naturally feels, are over you must pay us a visit. I shall hope everything then. You will be a good, kind son to me, John, I know."

The unhappy young man to whom she thus so unwisely spoke of hope, felt his heart stand still within him. Happiness came very close to him through her words; it was held from his clasp by only a single hair, and the sickness of fear that fell on him, lest all should be delusion and the slight thread turn again to a cable, made him reel as with a sudden faintness.

"Mrs. Maristowe," he said, "do not deceive yourself fully to me. I have borne disappointedly; I will not promise you that I can bear hope in the same tranquil manner. I may give way and do some wild thing, which will betray to all the world the misery that I now hide so well. This giving up rings, this quarrel you speak of will only be a renewal of love. I know Hilton better than you do; he is a proud man. He will never break off his engagement."

"Nevertheless, try to hope, John, for my sake," persisted Mrs. Maristowe.

"No," he replied, "I must try not to hope, if I wish to keep myself sane."

Consumption and Lung Difficulties.

Always arise from particles of corrupt matter deposited in the air cells, by impure blood. Purify that stream of life and it will very soon carry off and destroy the poisonous matter, and like a crystal river flowing through a desert, will bring with it and leave throughout the body the elements of fertility in its course, causes the before barren waste to bloom with flowers and fruit, so pure blood comes the founder to rejoice in strength and health, and bloom with unfading beauty. All Medicine Dealers sell Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

A DIVIDED HOUSEHOLD.

"A House divided against itself shall not stand" is a truth that parents should ponder with reference to the management of their children. You have no more acute or severe critics than your own children. If husband and wife do not agree, the very babe in her arms will be quick to discover the fact.

A group of little girls were playing on the sidewalk one bright summer day when one of them, seizing the hand of her friend hastily, ran around a corner "What did you do that for?" said the friend. "I saw papa coming, and he has forbidden me to play with Susie Jones." "But your mamma knew you were playing with her, she is sewing at the window, and could see you." "O, Mamma lets me do as I please."

How can a child with such home training respect either parent? She will fear her father, but she will not respect him because she sees that her mother does not feel enough respect for him to enforce his commands in his absence. She will not respect her mother because she feels in her childish heart that her mother is wrong, and knows that her father has a good reason for not wishing her to play with Susie Jones.

How often we hear a child exclaim, when forbidden by her mother to do something, "I'll ask Papa when he comes home," showing plainly that one parent does not uphold the authority of the other. At times a father will correct a child with more severity of expression than the fault warranted, and, painful as is such a spectacle, it is even more painful and more harmful to the child for the mother to interfere. Talk with each other privately, if needs be, in regard to your modes of correction, but let no word of your differences reach the child's [illegible]

[illegible] wife and mother [illegible] husband's course [illegible] her children a [illegible] "Mamma," [illegible] rebuke in other reproved [illegible] "Papa swears." [illegible] took her Bible, and [illegible] "Swear not at all" [illegible] the words of Christ; [illegible] follow him. Let us beg Papa not to swear either." Of course this implied a criticism of "Papa," but it was so gentle and so wise that it left no feeling of disregard in the boy's heart, but rather filled it with a sort of pitying tenderness toward the erring father.

By just so much as you find fault with each other in the presence of your children, you weaken each other's authority.

Poetry.

"THE BIG FISH THAT GOT AWAY."

When, in the halcyon days of old, I was a little tyke,
I used to fish in pickerel ponds for minnows and the like;
And, oh, the bitter sadness with which my soul was fraught,
When I rambled home at nightfall with the pony string I'd caught!
And, oh, the indignation and the vehmence I'd display,
When I claimed that all the biggest fish I'd caught had got away.

Sometimes it was the rusty hooks, sometimes the fragile line,
And many times the treacherous reeds would foil my just designs;
But whether hooks or lines or reeds were actually to blame
I kept right on at losing all the monsters just the same—
I never lost a little fish—yes, I am free to say
It always was the biggest fish I caught that got away.

And so it was, when later on, I felt ambition pass
From callow minnow days to nobler quest for pike and bass;
I found it quite convenient, when the bass-line wouldn't bite,
And I returned all bootless from the watery chase at night,
To feign a cheery aspect and recount in accents gay
How the biggest fish that I had caught had somehow got away.

And, really, fish looked bigger than they are before they're caught—
When, the pole is bent late a bow and the slender line is taut—
When a fellow feels his heart rise up like a doughnut in his throat,
And he hangs in a frenzy up and down the leaky boat.
Oh, you who've been a fishing will endorse me when I say
That it always is the biggest fish you catch that gets away.

'Tis even so in other things—yes, in our greedy eyes
The biggest boon is some illusive, never captured prize;
We angle for the honours and the sweets of human life—
Like fishermen we brave the seas that roll in endless strife;
And then at last when all is done and we are spent and gray,
We own the biggest fish we've caught are those that got away.

I would not have it otherwise; 'tis better thus should be Much bigger fish than I have caught a swimming in the sea;
For now some worthier one than I may angle for that game—
May by his arts entice, entrap and comprehend the same;
Which, having done, perchance he'll bless the man who's proudly say
That the biggest fish he ever caught were those that got away.

"It strikes me that Russian authors have a remarkably venerable and care-worn look." "Yes, but then look at the language they have to do their writing in."

Sappy—I'll give you two cents, Tommy, if you'll tell me what your sister said about me after my last call.

Tommy—No, I can't do it! I promised my Sunday school teacher I wouldn't use any strong language this week.

From the Pacific Coast.

WE quote from a letter recently received from Miss Eleanor Pope, Port Haney, B.C. "For sore throat, coughs, croup, bruises, etc., Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the best thing I have ever used."

"Well," said a lawyer, as he entered his condemned client's cell, "good news at last."

"A reprieve?" eagerly exclaimed the prisoner.

"No, not a reprieve, but your uncle has died and left you £500, and now you can meet your fate with the satisfying feeling that the noble efforts of your lawyer in your behalf will not go unrewarded."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Abscesses, Erysipelas, Piles.—Unvarying success attends all who treat these diseases according to the simple printed directions wrapped round each pot and box. They are invaluable to the young and timid, whose bashfulness sometimes endangers life. Though apparently local, diseases of this nature are essentially blood diseases, but a little attention, moderate perseverance and trifling expense will enable the most diffident to conduct any case to a happy issue without exposing secret infirmities to any one The Ointment checks the local inflammation and alleviates the throbbing pains. These directions also clearly point out when and how Holloway's Pills are to be taken, that their purifying and regulating powers may assist by adjusting and strengthening the constitution.

A DIVIDED HOUSEHOLD.

"A House divided against itself shall not stand" is a truth that parents should ponder with reference to the management of their children. You have no more acute or severe critic than your own children. If husband and wife do not agree, the very babe in her arms will be quick to discover the fact.

A group of little girls were playing on the sidewalk one bright summer day when one of them, seizing the hand of her friend hastily, ran around a corner. "What did you do that for?" said the friend. "I saw papa coming, and he has forbidden me to play with Susie Jones." "But your mamma knew you were playing with her, she is sewing at the window, and could see you." "O, Mamma lets me do as I please."

How can a child with such home training respect either parent? She will fear her father, but she will not respect him because she sees that her mother does not feel enough respect for him to enforce his commands in his absence. She will not respect her mother because she feels in her childish heart that her mother is wrong, and knows that her father has a good reason for not wishing her to play with Susie Jones.

How often we hear a child exclaim, when forbidden by her mother to do something, "I'll ask Papa when he comes home," showing plainly that one parent does not uphold the authority of the other. At times a father will correct a child with more severity of expression than the fault warranted, and, painful as is such a spectacle, it is even more painful and more harmful to the child for the mother to interfere. Talk with each other privately, if needs be, in regard to your modes of correction, but let no word of your differences reach the child's ear.

[illegible] wife and mother [illegible] husband's course [illegible] her children a [illegible] "Mamma," [illegible] rebuked [illegible] "Papa swears." [illegible] took her Bible, and [illegible] words of Christ; [illegible] follow him. Let us beg Papa not to swear either." Of course this implied a criticism of "Papa," but it was so gentle and so wise that it left no feeling of disregard in the boy's heart, but rather fired it with a sort of pitying tenderness toward the erring father.

By just so much as you find fault with each other in the presence of your children, you weaken each other's authority.

May offers specially favorable circumstances for driving catarrh out of the system, and every sufferer from this loathsome disease should use Nasal Balm for that purpose. It cures when all other remedies fail the directions are faithfully adhered to. A single bottle will convince you of its merit. Sold by all dealers.

The tramp never turns away from any door without getting something. If he gets nothing else, he gets out.

Directly and Indirectly.

Kidney complaint, dropsy and similar troubles depend directly on wrong action of the kidneys and indirectly on bad blood. Burdock Blood Bitters regulates the action of the kidneys and cleanses the blood from all impurities, in this way curing kidney complaint, dropsy, etc.

Clara (just engaged)—Ah, Emma, if I only knew how to make Edward happy! Emma (a student of human nature)—I'll tell you, my dear. Don't marry him.

SUNBEAMS.

"It strikes me that Russian authors have a remarkably venerable and care-worn look." "Yes, but then look at the language they have to do their writing in."

Sappy—I'll give you ten cents, Tommy, if you'll tell me what your sister said about me after my last call.

Tommy—No, I can't do it! I promised my Sunday school teacher I wouldn't use any strong language this week.

When you say a man has a clear field you mean that he has nothing in it. It is different, however, when you say he has a clear head.

Some people can trust God as long as they have plenty of money, but when the bank breaks their religion all goes with it.

A gentleman was asked:—"Why send money abroad when there is so much to be done at home?" The gentleman replied:—"I will give $5 for our poor at home if you will." "Oh, I didn't mean that."

Miss Sharp—"Your friend Wooden reminds me so much of the learned professions." Bullfinch—"Ah, he'll be glad to hear it; but in what way?" Miss Sharp—"Why, there's so much room at the top."

Scientific Caller—"I see it is proposed to use the Eiffel tower to arrest the rotation of the earth." Miss Du Sweet (who was in Paris)—"Indeed. I remember I felt very dizzy when I was on top of it, but I didn't know it was the earth going round."

Miss Downes—My brother, Upson, said he met you on the other side—just as you ran out of Berlin.

Mr. Rounds (sadly)—Yes; I remember very well. I remember your brother just as he ran out of cash.

Delegate—I hope to see the day when all shall be equal, and one man as good as another.

Pat—So do I, begorsh! and then I'll soon show Dennis McCarthy I'm a better man than he is.

From the Pacific Coast.

WE quote from a letter recently received from Miss Eleanor Pope, Fort Haney, B.C. "For sore throat, coughs, croup, bruises, etc., Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the best thing I have ever used."

"Well," said a lawyer, as he entered his condemned client's cell, "good news at last."

"A reprieve?" eagerly exclaimed the prisoner.

"No, not a reprieve, but your uncle has died and left you £500, and now you can meet your fate with the satisfying feeling that the noble efforts of your lawyer in your behalf will not go unrewarded."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS—Abscesses, Erysipelas, Piles.—Unvarying success attends all who treat these diseases according to the simple printed directions wrapped round each pot and box. They are invaluable to the young and timid, whose bashfulness sometimes endangers life. Though apparently local, diseases of this nature are essentially blood diseases, but a little attention, moderate perseverance and trifling expense will enable the most diffident to conduct any case to a happy issue without exposing secret infirmities to any one. The Ointment checks the local inflammation and alleviates the throbbing pains. These directions also clearly point out when and how Holloway's Pills are to be taken, that their purifying and regulating powers may assist by adjusting and strengthening the constitution.

"You certainly told me to embrace my privileges."

"Well, but I didn't tell you to embrace my daughter."

"No, but to embrace your daughter is a privilege."

Poetry.

THE OLD HOMESTEAD.

I'm sitting to-day in my mansion,
Made up of tower stone and plate glass,
Where the fashionable crowd fill their mansions
And beauty and pride daily pass,
But sometimes my heart turns in sadness,
From fashion and folly away,
And I long for the old gabled homestead
And the garret where I used to play.

The memory of fields and of clover,
Of the lake the orchard and the barn,
And everything I can remember
That's lovely around the old farm,
Steals into my heart like an echo
Of a song that seems distant away,
That I sang when at the old homestead,
In the garret where I used to play.

I wonder if husband will take me
This summer to see the old farm?
To just take a peep at the dear place
Where this little was wifey was born.
I'll just put my arms tight around him,
And beg in my most coaxing way,
To take me once more to the homestead,
And the garret where I used to play.

'Tis true that near by the old dwelling
Lie buried the treasures I love,
And dear ones I cherished so fondly
Have gone to their home up above.
Still I long once again to revisit
The wild woods and 'mong them to stray,
And roam once again through the homestead,
And the garret where I used to play.

I know I am grateful and happy
For this home of riches and ease,
But my heart holds many a memory
I would not exchange for all these.
And oft as I sit at my window,
As the crowd passes careless and gay,
My heart wanders back to the homestead
And the garret where I used to play.

A SILKEN FETTER.

THERE are some women to whom the agonies of passion are a play. A sealed book for ever to them is the hot, restless heart which they touch with a careless hand. Yet, strange to say, it is these cold tranquil women who like to excite emotion and to witness it. They have an intense pleasure in seeing the anguish they have never been able to feel. So it happened that Mrs. Maristowe enjoyed herself immensely. Her life had been so very fish-like and cold, and it was a new sensation to her to draw out this agony and ignorantly play with it

"Poor fellow," she said to herself complacently as she walked into the house, "if Eleanor and Hilton do make up their quarrel, I shouldn't be at all surprised if he were to shoot himself—not at all."

Meanwhile Eleanor had believed once more; and the lovers had kissed again and made it up with tears. And the news of the reconciliation and coming marriage came to John from his brother's lips. The scene was a summer house in the garden.

"Eleanor and I had a row, John," said he; "but it's all square now; and the upshot is, we are going to be married at once."

"I wish you joy," said John, in a quiet voice.

"Well, don't wish it like a fellow going to his own funeral," returned Sir Hilton, snappishly. "I am decedly put out as it is, John, old fellow. I believe nothing irritates a man like these quarrels among women. I have purchased my peace with Eleanor, but it is at a great cost."

"There's no cost too great for peace," said John abstractedly.

He was cleaning his pistols, and he drew the charge from one as he spoke, and let the bullet on the table; but his hand shook so nervously as he did so, that it rolled off, and fell on the floor. Sir Hilton stopped and picked it up.

"Where is it?" asked John, looking about.

"In my hand," replied Sir Hilton "Don't send your bullets rolling my way John, to dirt my fingers."

"Better in your hand than your heart," said John, in a dry tone. "You are a consummate coxcomb, Hilton, though you don't seem to know it. Here are two girls quarreling over you, apparently ready to poison each other, and yet you go on in your cool way making love to both, and ignoring the fact that you are embittering the lives of each, if you are doing no worse."

"I defy you to prove such an absurd accusation," said Sir Hilton, a little bitterly.

"It needs no proof," said John. "Demand the truth of your consciences, that's all I ask. And depend on it, Hilton, you are on dangerous ground. If you rouse the jealous rage of a girl like Olive, I will not answer for the consequences."

"Olive cares nothing for me," he replied. "She is making fierce love to young Vigo."

Sir Hilton's voice was still more bitter now. John looked up from his work and glanced at him; then he went on cleaning his pistols.

"Very well, then," said John. "Let me say she does not care for you, and that she has taken all your love making since she was ten years old to mean nothing; still, you will own that Eleanor cares for you, I suppose?"

"Yes," said Sir Hilton, "I believe Eleanor loves me truly."

A dusky flush covered John's face, and he looked up at his brother with bloodshot eyes.

"There is a thing you won't believe Hilton," he rejoined, "and that is, that you try my temper horribly at times. You have too much pride, too much conceit. Had you possessed eyes for anyone but yourself, you might have seen——"

John was about to say, "You might have seen that I loved Eleanor; "and, but for you, I might have won her;" but he checked himself, and, instead of making the confession that would have changed his fate, he said, "You might have seen that I have been merely tried lately. Here is Mrs. Maristowe making a confidant of me to confess she does not like you; here is Lady Trewavas always in a fume; here is Olive bringing her passionate complaints to me; and none of them think that I may have a little trouble of my own, which I hide as best I can. And here are you, taking all the fuss made over you as coldly as a sultan."

"You talk like a woman," said Sir Hilton, a little contemptuously. "I don't see why my simple acknowledgment that Eleanor loves me, should bring on my head such a tirade of reproaches. If Mrs. Maristowe hates me, and makes love to you, can I help it? If my respected grandmother bestows the housekeeper's keys on you, and delegates the scolding of servants to your eloquence, again can I help it? And lastly, if Olive sets her tears before you in a bowl, and requests you to drink them, am I to blame? Send her to young Vigo. As to your own troubles, John, I really cannot guess what they are. I know no younger son half so well off as yourself."

"I am no brawler," said John, his face as pale as ashes, "else I might cavil at the ill-bred insolence of your words. Whatever I may possess as a younger brother, was not given to me by you, that is certain."

"At all events," laughed Sir Hilton, "you get board and lodging at my expense."

The words had scarcely left his lips ere John sprang towards him pale with anger. His hands were clenched as if to strike, but suddenly they dropped by his side, and he started back trembling

"Why do you try me so hard, Hilton?" he said. "You know not what you are doing."

Sir Hilton had turned pale at John's sudden outburst of passion, and had prepared himself to fend off a blow, but he had no wish to quarrel with his brother.

"Upon my word, John," he cried, "I had no idea you were so testy. I thought you a good-tempered fellow. But here you are showing fight at a jest. Why, what's the matter, man? Are we both fools to-day?"

"Something like it," replied John, in a low voice. "But don't jest again about my stay at Trewavas. I am ready to leave to-morrow if you like."

Sir Hilton bit his lip, and an expression of deep vexation passed over his face.

"I don't quite deserve that, John, for a mere joke," he observed. "Let us be friends and brothers, as long as we can. You will leave the old roof soon enough, depend on that. I foresee that my mother-in-law elect intends to make a clean sweep of all my friends and relations."

"She is right," said John. "Of course I shall leave when you marry; When is it to be? I should like some notice, as I have arrangements to make."

"When is it to be?" echoed Sir Hilton. "Oh! the execution you mean. Well, that's appointed for the twenty first. What a pleasant dungeon Trewavas will be with you gone, and Olive banished."

"A dungeon, and Eleanor with you?" exclaimed John. "And what do you mean about Olive's being banished."

"It means," replied Sir Hilton, "that I was cowardly and unmanly enough to make my peace with Eleanor by consenting to deny the shelter of my roof to a girl who has no other home."

"You cannot intend that Olive shall quit Trewavas?" exclaimed John.

"It is not my wish," said Sir Hilton "It is my intended wife who does me the honor to suppose that I am too great a rascal to succor an adopted sister."

"Speak seriously, Hilton," said his brother; "this is a sudden business than you think. A girl like Olive cannot go out into the world alone."

"Seriously," was the reply. "Eleanor is not quite so unreasonable as that; she only insists on her finding another home. Bosvigo, perhaps, would do. But, no; she would object to that, as being too near Trewavas."

The careless bitter tone in which Sir Hilton spoke stung John to the heart. It was evident that the thought of his marriage brought no anticipations of Eden with it; and the gift of Eleanor's love, which seemed to John beyond price, beyond hope—a joy too glorious to dream of—was to him almost a mockery.

"Hilton, you are indefinable," said John, with extreme bitterness. "No one can understand you."

"I am speaking plainly enough," retorted his brother. "I am saying that Eleanor has refused to become my wife until I have acted the dastardly part of driving a friendless girl out of my house."

"If you feel it so much," said John, "why do you do it?"

"I have told you why," replied Sir Hilton. "The Maristowes make it a sine qua non."

"But Olive will be miserable," said John.

"So shall I—miserable as the devil," returned Sir Hilton, and he drew on the gravel with his cane a rough representation of that individual.

As Sir Hilton bent down in performing this absurd work of art, John regarded him with a searching glance, while the blood rushed to his face, and the fire of some great hope flashed in his eyes.

"Miserable?" he repeated; "miserable with Eleanor! Then give her up."

"Never!" exclaimed Sir Hilton, with sudden and startling energy—"never!"

"Why not?" persisted John.

"Because, if I don't marry Eleanor, I shall do worse," he replied—"I shall do something wild—mad—foolish! It is only getting married that can save me."

Again the blood surged to John's brow like a wave of fire.

"You are selfish," he said, in a low, trembling voice. "You marry the girl, then, only to save yourself from some supposed folly, and not because you love her. It is a rascally thing to do! Renounce her, Hilton, and yield her to a man who does love her."

"Renounce her!" said Sir Hilton "You talk folly, John. A man in my position cannot proclaim his marriage to all the world, and then at the last moment act like a scoundrel No; I tell you I must carry this thing through I am bound in honor to do it; and, setting aside my ill temper, my bachelor forebodings and discontent, I could not do better than marry Ellen Maristowe"

"Better for yourself," persisted his brother; "but how will it be for her?"

"You pay me a sad compliment, there, John," he answered. "I flatter myself it will be pretty comfortable for her. Do you want me to make protestations to you like a lover, or are you serious for a few moral observations and promises of amendment in order? In my experience I like I have generally seen that the man who makes the fewest promises is the best husband. Come and see us in our honeymoon, John, and judge."

"If you won't be serious, we had better drop the subject," said John.

"Bless the man, I am serious enough!" exclaimed Sir Hilton. "I am going to give myself a mother-in-law, and that thought sobers me. But, jesting apart, old fellow, you can make your mind easy about me and Eleanor. We shan't fight, neither shall we take life to be all honey and champagne. We shall fall into a humdrum existence quite readily, and soon be like a million other couples in this world, tolerably contented and reasonably happy."

"If I could not marry with higher thoughts than those," said John, "I would never take unto myself a wife."

"Oh, you my dear fellow," cried Sir Hilton, "you are all romance and sentiment. But these things don't suit me. Depend on it, Eleanor and I understand each other pretty well, and it is wise for us to marry. If we broke off, we should both do worse—at least, I know I should."

He sighed, and rose from his seat, saying—"I must go and take my commands. I don't know what Eleanor is going to do to-day. I have promised for a long time to row her to Trewavas Cliffs. I'll propose that, I think."

"Stay a moment," interposed John. "Have you told Olive that she must leave Trewavas before the twenty first?"

"No, that task is beyond me," replied Sir Hilton. "I am made to act like a brute, but I can't speak like one. Break it to her for me, John, if Lady Trewavas has not the courage."

"How do you think I can do it?" said John. "You know Olive's nature. She will be wild. There will be a fearful outbreak. You had better keep out of her way. She is capable of stabbing you."

"I wish she would," said Sir Hilton, gloomily. The thought of this cruel thing does not put me in a pleasant frame of mind for playing the lover to Eleanor. She has roused me more than she thinks by this selfish caprice."

"You are wrong," remarked John, earnestly, "and Eleanor is right. She and Olive cannot live under the same roof. If Olive was going to be your wife, would she permit Eleanor Maristowe to reside at Trewavas?"

"I suppose not," replied Sir Hilton, his face flushing deeply; "but that would be very different. Trewavas is not Eleanor's home."

"There is no real difference," retorted John, "except in your fancy. The truth is, you never anticipated parting with Olive; you did not expect that Eleanor would demand it. And now that you are called upon to choose between them, and renounce one of these girls forever, your mind is shaken"

The flush on Sir Hilton's face deepened, but he replied in a calm tone, "Naturally; Olive has been as a sister to us for eight years."

"Sister, or cousin, or sweetheart, what does it matter which you call her," said John, "since the fact remains that, if you marry, your wife will not permit her to remain near you?"

From beneath his drooping eyelids John looked furtively at his brother, to mark the effect of his words. Sir Hilton's face was stern and sad, and his voice trembled.

"It is useless to talk like this," he observed. "I have accepted the situation with all its pain, and Olive must do the same. I have chosen best for her and for myself, and she will yet find me a true brother and friend."

"No doubt," in a practical tone; "but where is she to go now?"

"She can go to London with the lady she was with last month," replied Sir Hilton. "Arrange it with my grandmother, John. And to day is the seventh; let her go on the fifteenth. The sooner the wrench is over the better."

"I don't know that it is quite fair to send Olive so far away," remarked John; "It may deprive her of a good chance of marriage. I am sure young Vigo is fond of her."

"Confound young Vigo!" exclaimed the baronet, fiercely. "His legs are long enough to take his foolish head to London if he wants to propose to Olive."

Sir Hilton rammed his hat on his head and strode down the walk, but in a moment he stopped and looked back.

"Good bye, John, he said kindly "I fancy I've been surly as a bear, and you, too, are not yourself to day. You are usually such a calm, quiet, old sobersides, and yet I do believe I was never so near having your brotherly fist in my countenance as I was five minutes ago for merely passing a jest. Don't talk again of leaving Trewavas, old fellow. You won't disturb my matrimonial bliss, I promise you. I suppose I shall not be more henpecked than other husbands; and even the meekest are allowed to keep their brothers, I fancy. You shall do the attentive sometimes for me, John—do you hear?"

"I hear you" said John, in his old, quiet voice. "Good bye."

THE HAPPY WOMAN.

One of the most successful women in society is women who knows absolutely nothing—that is, in the ordinary acceptance of the term—but whose nature is so nicely adapted to the needs and requirements of this life that she makes no blunders, and turns the tenor of life on one, says the New York Ledger. It is a matter for us to reflect upon, and it should incite us to help our children to cultivate that spirit of kindliness which would just as readily speak well of people as ill, if not to prefer to do so. We might teach our daughters that to listen patiently to the praise of others will not detract in the least from their charms. Those happy women who are capable of honest and hearty admiration for persons of their own sex are and always have been admired and lord, though without accomplishments or grace save this one of inborn charity and good will.

SPOKE ILL OF THEIR SISTER.

An exciting incident occurred on King street west, Toronto, Monday afternoon about four o'clock. A policeman was summoned to a room in the upstairs flat at 63 King street west to quell a disturbance there, but all was quiet when he arrived. It appears that there was a lively scramble inside, in which two young men, brothers, administered a sound thrashing to a third party. The particulars are difficult to obtain, but it is said that a doctor informed the brothers that one of the lodgers at No. 63 King street west had taken unwarrantable liberties in speaking of their sister, aspersing her character in series of reckless and unfounded assertions. They went their to punish him for his improprieties, and chastised him severely. The medical man is a suitor for the hand of the young lady whose character was traduced.

Bishop McIntyre, the venerable Catholic Bishop of Prince Edward Island, died on Thursday night of heart disease while on a visit to Bishop Cameron at Antigonish. Bishop McIntyre was over 70 years of age, and held rule the diocese of Prince Edward Island, of which province half the population are Roman Catholics, for over a third of a century. He was a Scotchman by birth, and wielded a great influence in the province. Last fall father McDonald was appointed coadjutor bishop.

A BILKEN FETTER.

THERE are some women to whom the agonies of passion are a play. A sealed book for ever to them is the hot, restless heart which they touch with a careless hand. Yet, strange to say, it is these cold tranquil women who like to excite emotion and to witness it. They have an intense pleasure in seeing the anguish they have never been able to feel. So it happened that Mrs. Maristowe enjoyed herself immensely. Her life had been so very fish-like and cold, and it was a new sensation to her to draw out this agony and ignorantly play with it.

"Poor fellow," she said to herself complacently as she walked into the house, "if Eleanor and Hilton do make up their quarrel, I shouldn't be at all surprised if he were to shoot himself—not at all."

Meanwhile Eleanor had believed once more; and the lovers had kissed again and made it up with tears. And the news of the reconciliation and coming marriage came to John from his brother's lips. The scene was a summer house in the garden.

"Eleanor and I had a row, John," said he; "but it's all square now; and the upshot is, we are going to be married at once."

"I wish you joy," said John, in a quiet voice.

"Well, don't wish it like a fellow going to his own funeral," returned Sir Hilton, snappishly. "I am deucedly put out as it is, John, old fellow. I believe nothing irritates a man like these quarrels among women. I have purchased my peace with Eleanor, but it is at a great cost."

"There's no cost too great for peace," said John abstractedly.

He was cleaning his pistols, and he drew the charge from one as he spoke, and let the bullet on the table; but his hand shook so nervously as he did so, that it rolled off, and fell on the floor. Sir Hilton stopped and picked it up.

"Where is it?" asked John, looking about.

"In my hand," replied Sir Hilton. "Don't send your bullets rolling my way John, to dirt my fingers."

"Better in your hand than your heart," said John, in a dry tone. "You are a consummate coxcomb, Hilton, though you don't seem to know it. Here are two girls quarreling over you, apparently ready to poison each other, and yet you go on in your cool way making love to both, and ignoring the fact that you are embittering the lives of each, if you are doing no worse."

"I defy you to prove such an absurd accusation," said Sir Hilton, a little bitterly.

"It needs no proof," said John. "Demand the truth of your conscience, that's all I ask. And depend on it, Hilton, you are on dangerous ground. If you rouse the jealous rage of a girl like Olive, I will not answer for the consequences."

"Olive cares nothing for me," he replied. "She is making fierce love to young Vigo."

Sir Hilton's voice was still more bitter now. John looked up from his work and glanced at him; then he went on cleaning his pistols.

"Very well, then," said John. "Let me say she does not care for you, and that she has taken all your love making since she was ten years old as mere boy's play. Do you remember the song that course distant song, That I sang them at the old homestead, In the garret where I used to play.

I wonder if husband will take me This summer to see the old farm? To just take a peep at the dear place Where this little wee wifey was born. I'll just put my arms tight around him, And beg in my most coaxing way, To take me once more to the homestead, And the garret where I used to play.

'Tis true that near by the old dwelling Lie buried the treasures I love, And dear ones I cherished so fondly Have gone to their home up above. Still I long once again to revisit The wild woods and 'mong them to stray, And room once again through the homestead, And the garret where I used to play.

I know I am grateful and happy For this home of riches and ease, But my heart holds many a memory I would not exchange for all these. And oft as I sit at my window, As the crowd passes careless and gay, My heart wanders back to the homestead And the garret where I used to play.

"I know I am grateful and happy For this home of riches and ease, But my heart holds many a memory I would not exchange for all these. And oft as I sit at my window, As the crowd passes careless and gay, My heart wanders back to the homestead And the garret where I used to play.

"Hilton, you are incorrigible," said John, with extreme bitterness. "No one can understand you."

"Why, John, I thought you knew that I loved Eleanor; and, but for you, I might have won her; but he checked himself, and, instead of making the confession that would have changed his fate, he said, "You might have seen that I have been nearly tried lately. Here is Mrs. Maristowe making a confidant of me to confess she does not like you; here is Lady Trewavas always in a flame; here is Olive bringing her passionate complaints to me; and none of them think that I may have a little trouble of my own, which I hide as best I can. And here are you, taking all the fuss made over you as coldly as a statue."

"You talk like a woman," said Sir Hilton, a little contemptuously. "I don't see why my simple acknowledgment that Eleanor loves me, should bring on my head such a tirade of reproaches. If Mrs. Maristowe hates me, and makes love to you, can I help it? If my respected grandmother bestows the housekeeper's keys on you, and delegates the scolding of servants to your eloquence, again can I help it? And lastly, if Olive sets her tears before you in a bowl, and requests you to drink them, am I to blame? Send her to young Vigo. As to your own troubles, John, I really cannot guess what they are. I know no younger son half so well off as yourself."

"I am no brawler," said John, his face as pale as ashes, "else I might cavil at the ill-bred insolence of your words. Whatever I may possess as a younger brother, was not given to me by you, that is certain."

"At all events," laughed Sir Hilton, "you get board and lodging at my expense."

The words had scarcely left his lips ere John sprang towards him pale with anger. His hands were clenched as if to strike, but suddenly they dropped by his side, and he started back trembling.

"Why do you try me so hard, Hilton?" he said. "You know not what you are doing."

Sir Hilton had turned pale at John's sudden outburst of passion, and had prepared himself to fend off a blow, but he had no wish to quarrel with his brother.

"Upon my word, John," he cried, "I had no idea you were so testy. I thought you a good-tempered fellow. But here you are showing fight at a jest. Why, what's the matter, man? Are we both fools to-day?"

"Something like it," replied John, in a low voice. "But don't jest again about my stay at Trewavas. I am ready to leave to-morrow if you like."

Sir Hilton bit his lip, and an expression of deep vexation passed over his face.

"I don't quite deserve that, John, for a mere joke," he observed. "Let us be friends and brothers, as long as we can. You will leave the old roof soon enough, depend on that. I foresee that my mother-in-law elect intends to make a clean sweep of all my friends and relations."

"She is right," said John. "Of course I shall leave when you marry. When is it to be? I should like some notice, as I have arrangements to make."

"When is it to be?" echoed Sir Hilton. "Oh! the execution you mean. Well, that's appointed for the twenty first. What a pleasant dungeon Trewavas will be with you gone, and Olive banished."

"A dungeon, and Eleanor with you?" exclaimed John. "And what do you mean about Olive's being banished."

"It means," replied Sir Hilton, "that I was cowardly and unmanly enough to make my peace with Eleanor by consenting to deny the shelter of my roof to a girl who has no other home."

"You cannot intend that Olive shall quit Trewavas?" exclaimed John.

"It is not my wish," said Sir Hilton. "It is my intended wife who does me the honor to suppose that I am too great a rascal to succor an adopted sister."

"Speak seriously, Hilton," said his brother; "this is a sadder business than you think. A girl like Olive cannot go out into the world alone."

"Scarcely," was the reply. "Eleanor is not quite so unreasonable as that; she only insists on her finding another home. Bosvigo, perhaps, would do. But, no; she would object to that, as being too near Trewavas."

The careless bitter tone in which Sir Hilton spoke stung John to the heart. It was evident that the thought of his marriage brought no anticipations of Eden with it; and the gift of Eleanor's love, which seemed to John beyond price, beyond hope—a joy too glorious to dream of—was to him almost a weariness.

"Hilton, you are incorrigible," said John, with extreme bitterness. "No one can understand you."

"Why, what have I done?" he asked, half-angrily.

"Nothing, I suppose, except that you have seen

ORANGEVILLE, MAY 14, 1891.

COMMISSIONER WALLACE HONORED.

His Staff of Enumerators Tender Him an Ovation.

Squire Wallace of Castleden, census commissioner for Cardwell, and his staff of enumerators met in the Commercial hotel here on Monday, the latter to return their books and the former to receive them. The commissioner complimented them for the successful manner in which they executed their work, after which a short time was spent in telling the funny experiences each enumerator had, and Mr Jas. Babe of Caledon was awarded the prize for meeting with the most amusing experience.

An impromptu meeting was then organized, Mr. R. Carson, of No. 3, Mono, in the chair. It was moved by James Woodland, seconded by G. H. Harshaw, "that we, the enumerators of this part of Cardwell, return to Squire Wallace of Castleden, commissioner of said county, a hearty vote of thanks for the very painstaking and courteous manner by which our intercourse has been characterized, and we hope the commissioner may be spared for several decades to take an active part in the politics of Cardwell, and when done he may be numbered amongst those who receive the welcome plaudit: "well done, my good and faithful servant, receive thy reward." The above motion was carried unanimously.

The commissioner, in replying, expressed the pleasure it afforded him in dealing with such an intelligent body of men as he had the honor to direct. He thanked the enumerators for the help they had given him during the progress of the work and also for the friendship they extended to him on this occasion. He hoped the friendship would last long after they were all too old to take any part in the politics of our country.

Several enumerators sang songs and appropriate speeches were delivered, the chief of which was delivered by Mr. G. H. Harshaw of Mono, after which the happy gathering dispersed.

The enumerators wish to thank the people for the kind manner in which they were received and for their willingness to answer all questions.

A dispatch from Halifax says: It is understood that Mr. Mills, Conservative member for Annapolis, will shortly introduce a resolution in Parliament at Ottawa declaring that the New England States should be invited to join the Maritime Provinces and become part of the Dominion.

It is interesting to observe and compare the occupations of our law-makers. The following table gives the callings of those who are elected from the province of Ontario, (1) in the Dominion parliament dissolved in February, (2) in the new Dominion parliament, and (3) in the Ontario legislature. The agitation in favor of more farmers and fewer professional men has clearly had an effect:

With deep regret we record the death of Abigail J. Vanwyck, daughter of the late Cornelius Vanwyck, which occurred on Tuesday the 5th instant, after a brief illness of only three days of inflammation of the lungs, at the early age of 18 years. She was of a light hearted and genial disposition and a general favorite of all with whom she came in contact. The funeral took place on Thursday and was largely attended. The family have the sympathy of the community in their sad bereavement.

A BAD OLD MAN.

Seventy-year-old David Vance Stuck for $1,700 for Seduction.

TEN LONG YEARS AS MAN AND WIFE.

THE HEARTLESS OLD WRETCH MADE A WILL, BUT LEFT THE DISGRACED GIRL AND FIVE CHILDREN UNPROVIDED FOR.

Probably the most important case tried at the Dufferin spring assizes was the combined actions of Richard and Ellen Jane Cook, father and daughter, against David Vance. The first action was brought to recover damages for the seduction of the former's daughter, and Miss Cook also put in a claim for six years' wages. All the parties connected with the case reside in Waterloo county, and if everything they swore is true one of the most disgusting cases ever heard of was brought to light. From the evidence it appears that in 1880 the girl, Ellen Jane Cook, then 18 years of age, went to keep house for the defendant, David Vance, aged 57.

And here's where the tale begins.

Vance enraged the girl as his housekeeper at so much a month, and he represented to Miss Cook that his wife was dead. His wife, it appears, was living at the time, but was separated from him, and four years later her death took place. Miss Cook had not been very long keeping house for Vance when he began taking improper liberties with her. In a very few months a child was born, and when plaintiff's father accused Vance with the paternity of the child he (Vance) informed him that they were married. The couple continued to live together as man and wife for ten years and as a result of their illicit intercourse five children were born, all of whom are living. For the first couple of years the girl appears to have been used pretty well, but latterly, as one of the witnesses said, she had to do all the house work, attend to the stock, which sometimes consisted of nine head, and take a man's place in the field when occasion required. For all this slavery the old brute did not pay her one cent, and when neighbors tried to persuade him to marry the girl he had ruined he told them, "If I married the girl I couldn't get as much work out of her as I do now."

A few months ago the old scoundrel took sick and expected to "shuffle off his mortal coil." He did not think Miss Cook was attending to him properly, so he made his will, but left nothing to her. As soon as she found that out, she and her five illegitimate children left Vance's house and went to her father's. Here she confessed everything to her father, and the effect it had on him can be imagined better than described.

The accused did not appear, nor did his witnesses, but his legal representative, Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, of Toronto, was present and made the best of a bad case. D. Guthrie, Q.C., M.P.P., of Guelph, conducted the case for the plaintiff in an able manner, and his address to the jury was characterized by a flow of oratory seldom heard in an Orangeville court-room. He brought his address to a close by appealing to the jury to bring in a verdict that would teach such designing old villians a lesson that they would not soon forget. After Mr. Johnson addressed the jury his lordship carefully reviewed the evidence and delivered his charge, which was favorable to the plaintiff. The jury retired and were out some time when they returned with a verdict of $950 for Richard Cook and $720 for Ellen Jane Cook, the latter sum being the amount of wages for six years at $10 a month.

The statute of limitation, which says that an action for seduction must be entered within six years from the time the offence took place, barred any action that was taken to recover damages for injuries sustained previous to the last six years.

The verdict meets with general approval around here.

FOUND GUILTY!

THE JURY SAYS HE SET FIRE TO HIS BARN.

John Kirkland, 72 years old, was on trial nearly all day yesterday, charged with arson. Last night the jury arrived at a verdict, and at 10 o'clock Kirkland was brought from his cell in jail to hear the foreman pronounce the words: "guilty of arson."

The prisoner took the verdict hard. He will be sentenced probably this morning, and if the sentence is for a long period the old man will die behind the bars.

Granat Bros.—For the past few days Mr. B Beaty has been running off a large number of Gourlays organs, buggies and pianos. Judging from the many sales of the Chatham-made vehicle, it is the popular rig. The following parties purchased rigs during the past week: Mr. Geo. FOOLED WITH THE ENUMERATOR.—The case of McArdle vs. Bell was tried on Saturday before Thos Hanbury J. P. D. C. McArdle, a Census Enumerator for part of Proton charged John Bell with refusing to give him the information called for by the census. Mr. Clark of Mt. Forest appeared for Mr. Bell and Mr. Lucas for Mr. McArdle. After hearing the evidence, the magistrate fined the defendant $5, which with the costs, amounted to $10.55, besides legal expenses.

THE ORANGE BATTALION.—Coming Ald. William Bell, ex Ald. Edward Barton and W. McSpaddon of Toronto, delegates of the Orange battalion, arrived in town on Saturday evening's train and made arrangements for a monster gathering in Orangeville on Monday, May 25th. The delegates were delighted with their stay in town and they say over 1000 members of the corps will grace the town with their presence. Every effort should be put forth to give them a loyal reception and nothing should be left undone to entertain the visitors while here.

AN EXCITING RUNAWAY.—Mr. T. Dawson had what may properly be called an exciting time at noon on Saturday. Mr. Dawson runs a farm in the South ward and on the day we speak of he was engaged in plowing. A young team was attached to the plow, and in a field near by was a colt. The latter cleared the fence at a bound and was soon between the horses on the plow. The team became frightened and a runaway was the result. Before going far, however, the plow, like the pilot of a locomotive, tossed the colt aside and the other horses continued the race. When they arrived at the fence one of them jumped over, and when the proprietor came along he found the horses on different sides of the fence, with the plow on top. No damage was done save the breaking of the lines.

BARN AND STOCK BURNT.—At 7 o'clock last Saturday morning the barn and stables of Richard Allen, reeve of Mono, lot 3, con. 6 were discovered to be on fire. R. Hurst, an employe of Mr. Allen, made the discovery and at once gave the alarm. The fire started in a straw stack near the barn and traveled with startling rapidity. It did not take many moments for it to spread to the barn, stable and four sheds, all of which were reduced to ashes. In the buildings were two colts worth $150, 5 hogs worth $50, 2 mowers, $100, 2 seed drills $90, a cutting-box $50, 3 plows $40, 2 boggies $100, a cutter $45, besides harness, a hay fork and 500 bushels of oats. Mr. Allen will be a heavy loser, his loss being estimated at over $2,000. He has an insurance of $1 600 on the property destroyed. How the fire started is a mystery, but some believe it was caused by a spark from a neighbor's chimney across the road.

ADMITS HIS GUILT!

THE EMIGRANT FORGER OF SHELBURNE ACKNOWLEDGES HIS CRIME.

Joseph Costigan, the young importation from Dr. Barnardo's London, Eng. home, who was charged with forging his employer's name to a note and receiving money thereon and the larceny of a revolver and other articles, pleaded guilty to the charges and threw himself on the mercy of the court. His lordship reserved sentence.

The prisoner appears to be somewhat a stupid fellow, and he says he did not know it was forging to sign another's name. He will probably be sentenced to day.

BLOUNT.

Miss Alice Farrow, of Toronto, is visiting at Mr. Thomas Allen's.

We would like to know the reason why A. A. doesn't like to work on the lower 100 since L. D. has quitted the stone house.

Mr. H. W. was seen going west last Sunday with his new spring suit and his bland Irish smile. Rumor says he is engaged with Mr. T. Allen for the season.

On Saturday last Henry Moffat started a fire in a field and it ran across the field into John Hewitt's bush and destroyed about 60 cords of wood that he had cut. From there it travelled to James Cullen's and burnt fences and 40 cords of wood. The houses of both these gentlemen had a narrow escape, and it took until Sunday afternoon to get the fire under control.

SUPERIOR COURT SITTING AT THE COURT—JUDGMENT IN ELIGIBILITY W. O. P. R. REVIEWED—GRAND JURY'S PRESENTMENT.

The spring assizes for the county of Dufferin opened in the court house here on Monday afternoon, his lordship Mr. Justice [illegible].

Both criminal and civil dockets were comparatively light.

The principal criminal cases are indictments against John Kirkland, who is charged with setting fire to his barn in the township of East Garafraxa for the purpose of getting the insurance. Last evening at 10 o'clock the jury had not returned a verdict and a report of this case is held over until next week. The other criminal case is against Wm. Elder for stealing timber off Mr. W. A. Cesar's farm in Mono. The grand jury found a true bill in this case and he will be tried to-day. Reports of the other cases appear in another column of this paper.

NO BILL.

In the case of Mrs. Fraser of Erin, charged with receiving turkeys known to be stolen, the grand jury found no bill and the woman was dismissed. The public hope this is the last to be heard of David Bland's turkeys.

DALY ET AL. V. HUNTER.

Joseph Daly and Benjamin Conner of this town purchased the farm on which Dufferin lake is situated from W. H. Hunter several months ago, and they in turn disposed of it to B. B. Oder, Q. C., of Toronto and others. It appears there was some dispute about the title, hence the action. A settlement was arrived at and the case will not be called.

ISLAND V. GRAY.

Dr. Island of Rosemont brought action against Samuel Gray for trespassing on the property on which Island's lake is situated, lot 4, con. 1, E H. S., Mono, and removing timber therefrom. It seems the plaintiff and the defendant made some sort of a bargain about the purchase of the property, but the agreement fell through. A satisfactory settlement was arrived at without appealing to the court, Gray agreeing to purchase the property. W. L. Walsh for plff.

TOLTON V. C. P. R.

This case came up for trial at the last assizes, but was adjourned. Readers of THE SUN will recall the details of the case. It appears the C.P.R. turned a stream out of its proper course so that it flooded plaintiff's property. The parties couldn't agree among themselves on a satisfactory settlement, so his lordship, Mr. Justice Street, tried the case without a jury. The case occupied the attention of the court until yesterday morning, when his lordship reserved judgment. Myers & Robb for plff; Dalton McCarthy for deft.

GRAND JURY'S REPORT.

May it please Your Lordship:

We, the grand jurors, respectfully beg to report that we congratulate the county on the apparent absence of crime, and we trust that it may long continue in a similar state.

There having been six cases brought before us for consideration, in four of which true bills were found; with regard to the other two, they were dismissed, the evidence not having been found sufficient to send the accused before you for trial.

The grand jury were put to some inconvenience in consequence of the insufficiency of the locks upon the doors of their room, and we would recommend that sufficient locks, with proper keys, be supplied therefor, and at the same time an increased number of chairs should be provided for the accommodation of those attending court, with respect to which some inconvenience has been found. We examined the jail and premises and found all departments therein in a proper state of cleanliness and order. There are there confined seventeen persons—eleven males and six females—of whom thirteen have been committed as vagrants, and being helpless through age and infirmities and having no other means of livelihood are supported at the expense of the county. Besides these, there are two females—one insane and the other a lunatic; while there is one male an idiot and the other for forgery.

On the investigation of the case of the Queen v. Elder, in which we found a true bill, your grand jurors regret that they did not admire the attitude of one of the witnesses for the crown, who seemed to be principally interested in the prosecution, as while occupying this position in relation to the case he also acted in court as a constable, and part of the time his duties being to take charge of their room and to call the different witnesses required to come before them. And while on this subject, we would approve in selecting constables to serve at the different courts of the county that the same men be not chosen all the time, but that this part of the work be distributed equally among the different constables throughout the county, and thus avoid the notion of partiality.

This being the first occasion on which your Lordship presided in our county, we gladly avail ourselves of the opportunity it affords us of congratulating you on your elevation to the bench, the arduous duties of which we have no doubt your Lordship will discharge with a degree of dignity and purity in keeping and associated with the names of so many of your illustrious predecessors, and as time rolls on we need scarcely say that we shall always feel a special pleasure at your Lordship's return to administer justice for the benefit of the people of the county of Dufferin.

We have to thank the different officials for their courtesy to us while in the performance of our duties.

G. RUTHERFORD, Foreman.

A most disgraceful scene was enacted in the Church of the Ascension, Hamilton, last Thursday, caused by the introduction of a surpliced choir by the rector, Rev. E. P. Crawford. The antiritualists extinguished the lights and created pandemonium with shouts, cat calls whistling, yells, the singing of secular songs, etc. The voices of the clergy and choir were drowned out and the service brought to an abrupt end. More trouble is anticipated between the two factions in the church.

[illegible] Hollinger Gets a Verdict for $800.

SHE HAD FOUR TOES AMPUTATED BY AN ENGINE, FOR WHICH SHE GETS $200 APIECE.

DALTON McCARTHY, Q.C., HANDLES THE CASE WELL FOR THE DEFENDANTS—CROWN ATTORNEY MYERS WORKS WELL FOR THE PLAINTIFF.

The first case called when the assizes opened on Monday afternoon was that of Hollinger v. the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. The plaintiff, Charlotte Hollinger, is a large-sized woman of probably 38 summers. She resides, with her husband, in the vicinity of the C.P.R. station and has occasion to cross the net work of tracks at the street crossing there. On the 7th of July last Mrs. Hollinger was crossing the tracks when the pardoner were shunting some cars. Just as the lady was crossing the engine was giving what is called a "flying shunt:" that is, the engine starts cars that go down one track while the engine goes down another. Mrs. Hollinger was passing and a number of moving flat cars so attracted her attention that she did not perceive the yard engine coming down the other track, and before she could make her escape she was struck by the tender and the engine ran over her left leg, lacerating the foot in a terrible manner. Four of her toes had to be amputated, and it was a long time before she could again get out of the house. The railway officials, it is said, offered to defray her medical expenses and give her $100. She refused the offer and at once entered an action against the company, claiming $5,000 damages.

A jury was soon chosen, and the plaintiff put three witnesses in the box. The principal point of the evidence was directed to showing that the engineer and firemen did not give any warning of their approach by sounding the bell or whistle, as they are lawfully required to do. The defence had seven witnesses in the stand, and they were all employees of the company. Dalton McCarthy, Q.C., was retained by the railway, and, as usual, displayed his great knowledge of the law. Elgin Myers, Q.C., conducted the plaintiff's case in a very skillful manner. Both counsel delivered masterly addresses to the jury, after which his lordship reviewed the evidence. He asked the jury to answer four questions, which were—Was the bell ringing before coming to the crossing? Was the engine going at a greater rate of speed than 6 miles an hour? Did the plaintiff exercise proper precaution when crossing the tracks? What damages should the plaintiff get, if any?

The jury answered the first question that the bell was ringing, but not for a great enough distance before coming to the crossing. To the second, they thought the engine was going at about 6 miles per hour. They answered the third question to the effect that the plaintiff did take proper precaution. And the fourth, they assessed the damages at $800.

The case lasted from Monday afternoon until 2.30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

PESTLE AND MORTAR.

DRUGGISTS FROM DUFFERIN AND ADJOINING COUNTIES MEET IN ORANGEVILLE.

Matters Pertaining to the Trade Discussed in Convention—Officers Elected—Two Sessions.

The representative druggists of Wellington, Halton, Peel and Dufferin assembled in convention here on Monday last. The council chamber was placed at their disposal, and at 11 a. m. Mayor Walsh, on behalf of the citizens, welcomed the visitors to Orangeville in a characteristically brief and pleasing speech. The following gentlemen were in attendance: Messrs Petrie and Smith, of Guelph; Jamieson, Colclough and Youmans, Mount Forest; Smith and Morrow, Elora; Forrester, Palmerston; McCallum, Milton; Kilgour, Arthur; Perry and Phillips, Fergus; Stevenson, Dodds and Turner, Orangeville.

The president, Mr. T. Stevenson, who was elected at the last annual meeting, held in Brampton, then took charge and after routine business was transacted an adjournment was taken until 2 p. m.

The election of officers for the current year resulted in the following gentlemen being chosen: Mr. Colclough, Mount Forest, president; Mr. Perry, Fergus, 1st vice president; Mr. McCallum, Milton, 2nd vice-president; Mr. Turner, Orangeville, 3rd vice president; Mr. Phillips, Fergus, secretary; Mr. Smith, Elora, treasurer. Mr. Petrie, of Guelph, was put in nomination for member of the council of the Ontario College of Pharmacy. Mr. Petrie was a member of the council last year, and his actions throughout that somewhat trying time were fully endorsed by the convention, and later on a resolution thanking him for the fearless stand he had taken when the interests of the college were in jeopardy was unanimously passed. He will undoubtedly again be elected to the council.

During the afternoon session matters directly concerning the drug trade were taken up and discussed in a friendly and instructive manner. The subjects of debate were of such a technical character that they would be of little interest to the general public, and a fuller report of the proceedings can be found in the Pharmaceutical Journal.

The delegates were entertained at dinner by the local druggists, and they each and all expressed themselves as pleased with their reception, and some of them were quite surprised to find Orangeville such a bright-looking and business like town.

The next convention will be held in Guelph on the second Monday in May, 1892, but another meeting may take place next fall subject to the call of the president, who will also decide upon the date and place of meeting.

Orangeville, May 1, 1891.

Orangeville, May 6th.

Some leather's mean. Some workmen are mean. Some shoe sellers are mean. That's how mean shoes get made and sold.

Six out of every ten pairs of shoes are shams—pasted stock, "pancakes." Bits of useless leather are pressed and made into insoles, just as bits of useless wool are carded with long cotton and made into shoddy.

Never was a time when shoes looked so well and were so badly, until the shoeing of a whole family has come to be a serious task. There's no reason for mean shoes. Some shopkeepers see a reason for them in their cheapness, but if that's so, the meaner they're made, the better. (The wearer wouldn't tolerate that reason for a moment). The only room for them is the room they usurp, and the saving is a saving at the spigot to waste at the bung.

And the remedy?

There's a store where you can't buy shoddy shoes, because they don't sell them; where they have neither two prices nor two names for the same thing; where American kid doesn't pass for French, and machine-sewed doesn't masquerade as hand-sewed.

It's here. None but the best at the lowest prices, though best only means with what restrictions of price that're necessary.

For the men there's a good seamless Bal. for $1.75, and a better at $2 50, good enough to get married in. For the ladies here's some nice Dongola Shoes, Bals. and Button'd, at $2.75, the J. D. K. make (none better), as well as Too Slippers at 85c., and Dong. Oxfords at $1.25, with childrens' shoes galore. There's no better for the money anywhere. We don't know how to sell "poor" shoes. More than that, we don't want to know.

You can get a Lady's fine Button Boot of us at 90c. a pair.

The Mayor telegraphed early this day for assistance to Barrie, the nearest town, 24 miles northeast of here, but the engine was not of repair. The Toronto fire brigade promptly answered the call for help and assisted the local department in extinguishing the flames. The town presents a desolate appearance, telephone, telegraph and electric wires being strewn all over the town, together with a large quantity of debris. The principal buildings destroyed were the postoffice, the Bank of Commerce, Oddfellows' Hall, O'Brien's and Nolan's hotel the Queens hotel, the large brick block owned by T. M. ### The Staff of Enumerators Feasted and Toasted.

Squire Wallace of Castlederg, census commissioner for Cardwell, and his staff of enumerators met in the Commercial hotel here on Monday, the latter to return their books and the former to receive them. The commissioner complimented them for the successful manner in which they executed their work, after which a short time was spent in telling the funny experience each enumerator had, and Mr Jas. Babe of Caledon was awarded the prize for meeting with the most amusing experience.

An impromptu meeting was then organized, Mr. R. Carson, of No. 3, Mono, in the chair. It was moved by James Woodland, seconded by G. H. Harshaw "that we, the enumerators of this part of Cardwell, return to Squire Wallace of Castlederg, commissioner of said county, a hearty vote of thanks for the very painstaking and courteous manner by which our intercourse has been characterized, and we hope the commissioner may be spared for several decades to take an active part in the politics of Cardwell, and when done he may be numbered amongst those who receive the welcome plaudit: "well done, my good and faithful servant, receive thy reward." The above motion was carried unanimously.

The commissioner, in replying, expressed the pleasure it afforded him in dealing with such an intelligent body of men as he had the honor to direct. He thanked the enumerators for the help they had given him during the progress of the work and also for the friendship they extended to him on this occasion. He hoped the friendship would last long after they were all too old to take any part in the politics of our country.

Several enumerators sang songs and appropriate speeches were delivered, the chief of which was delivered by Mr. G. H. Harshaw of Mono, after which the happy gathering dispersed.

The enumerators wish to thank the people for the kind manner in which they were received and for their willingness to answer all questions.

A dispatch from Halifax says: It is understood that Mr. Mills, Conservative member for Annapolis, will shortly introduce a resolution in Parliament at Ottawa declaring that the New England States should be invited to join the Maritime Provinces and become part of the Dominion.

It is interesting to observe and compare the occupations of our law-makers. The following table gives the callings of those who are elected from the province of Ontario, (1) in the Dominion parliament dissolved in February, (2) in the new Dominion parliament, and (3) in the Ontario legislature. The agitation in favor of more farmers and fewer professional men has clearly had an effect:

SHELBURNE NEWS.

Probably the most important case tried at the Dufferin spring assizes was the combined actions of Richard and Ellen Jane Cook, father and daughter, against David Vance. The first action was brought to recover damages for the seduction of the former's daughter, and Miss Cook also put in a claim for six years' wages. All the parties connected with the suit reside in Waterloo county, and if everything they swore is true one of the most disgusting cases ever heard of was brought to light. From the evidence it appears that in 1886 the girl, Ellen Jane Cook, then 16 years of age, went to keep house for the defendant, David Vance, aged 57.

And here's where the tale begins.

Vance enticed the girl as his housekeeper at so much a month, and he represented to Miss Cook that his wife was dead. His wife, it appears, was living at the time, but was separated from him, and four years later her death took place. Miss Cook had not been very long keeping house for Vance when he began taking improper liberties with her. In a very few months a child was born, and when plaintiff's father accused Vance with the paternity of the child he (Vance) informed him that they were married. The couple continued to live together as man and wife for ten years and as a result of their illicit intercourse five children were born, all of whom are living. For the first couple of years the girl appears to have been used pretty well, but latterly, as one of the witnesses said, she had to do all the house work, attend to the stock, which sometimes consisted of nine head, and take a man's place in the field when occasion required. For all this slavery the old brute did not pay her one cent, and when neighbors tried to persuade him to marry the girl he had ruined he told them, "If I married the girl I couldn't get as much work out of her as I do now."

A few months ago the old scoundrel took sick and expected to "shuffle off his mortal coil." He did not think Miss Cook was attending to him properly, so he made his will, but left nothing to her. As soon as she found that out, she and her five illegitimate children left Vance's house and went to her father's. Here she confessed everything to her father, and the effect it had on him can be imagined better than described.

The accused did not appear, nor did his witnesses, but his legal representative, Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, of Toronto, was present and made the best of a bad case. D. Guthrie, Q.C., M.P.P., of Guelph, conducted the case for the plaintiff in an able manner, and his address to the jury was characterized by a flow of oratory seldom heard in an Orangeville court-room. He brought his address to a close by appealing to the jury to bring in a verdict that would teach such designing old villians a lesson that they would not soon forget. After Mr. Johnson addressed the jury his lordship carefully reviewed the evidence and delivered his charge, which was favorable to the plaintiff. The jury retired and were out some time when they returned with a verdict of $930 for Richard Cook and $720 for Ellen Jane Cook, the latter sum being the amount of wages for six years at $10 a month.

The statute of limitation, which says that an action for seduction must be entered within six years from the time the offence took place, barred any action that was taken to recover damages for injuries sustained previous to the last six years.

The verdict meets with general approval around here.

FOUND GUILTY!

THE JURY SAYS HE SET FIRE TO HIS BARN.

John Kirkland, 72 years old, was on trial nearly all day yesterday, charged with arson. Last night the jury arrived at a verdict, and at 10 o'clock Kirkland was brought from his cell in jail to hear the foreman pronounce the words: "guilty of arson."

The prisoner took the verdict hard. He will be sentenced probably this morning, and if the sentence is for a long period the old man will die behind the bars.

FOOLED WITH THE EXONERATOR.—The case of McArdle vs. Bell was tried on Saturday before Thos Hunbury J. P. D. C. McArdle, a Cosens Exonerator for part of Proton, charged John Bell with refusing to give him the information called for by the cosens. Mr. Clark of Mt. The delegates were delighted with their stay in town and they say over 1000 members of the corps will grace the town with their presence. Every effort should be put forth to give them a loyal reception and nothing should be left undone to entertain the visitors while here.

AN EXCITING RUNAWAY.—Mr. T. Dawson had what may properly be called an exciting time at noon on Saturday. Mr. Dawson rans a farm in the South ward and on the day we speak of he was engaged in plowing. A young team was attached to the plow, and in a field near by was a colt. The latter cleared the fence at a bound and was soon between the horses on the plow. The team became frightened and a runaway was the result. Before going far, however, the plow, like the pilot of a locomotive, tossed the colt aside and the other horses continued the race. When they arrived at the fence one of them jumped over, and when the proprietor came along he found the horses on different sides of the fence, with the plow on top. No damage was done save the breaking of the lines.

BARN AND STOCK BURNT.—At 7 o'clock last Saturday morning the barn and stables of Richard Allen, reeve of Mono, lot 3, con. 6 were discovered to be on fire. R. Hurst, an employe of Mr. Allen, made the discovery and at once gave the alarm. The fire started in a straw stack near the barn and travelled with startling rapidity. It did not take many moments for it to spread to the barn, stable and four sheds, all of which were reduced to ashes. In the buildings were two colts worth $150, 5 hogs worth $50, 2 mowers, $100, 2 acre drills $90, a cutting-box $50, 3 plows $40, 2 buggies $100, a cutter $45, besides harness, a hay fork and 500 bushels of oats. Mr. Allen will be a heavy loser, his loss being estimated at over $2,000. He has an insurance of $1 600 on the property destroyed. How the fire started is a mystery, but some believe it was caused by a spark from a neighbor's chimney across the road.

NORTHWESTERN SCHEDULE.—Delegates from the different lacrosse clubs that compose the northwestern district met in the Queen's hotel here on Friday afternoon and arranged the schedule of games for the season. ### ADMITS HIS GUILT!

THE EMIGRANT FORGER OF SHELBURNE ACKNOWLEDGES HIS CRIME.

Joseph Costigen, the young importation from Dr. Barnardo's London, Eng. home, who was charged with forging his employer's name to a note and receiving money thereon and the larceny of a revolver and other articles, pleaded guilty to the charges and threw himself on the mercy of the court. His lordship reserved sentence.

The prisoner appears to be somewhat a stupid fellow, and he says he did not know it was forging to sign another's name. He will probably be sentenced to day.

BLOUNT.

Miss Alice Farrow, of Toronto, is visiting at Mr. Thomas Allen's.

We would like to know the reason why A. A. doesn't like to work on the lower 100 since L. D. has quitted the stone house.

Mr. H. W. was seen going west last Sunday with his new spring suit and his bland Irish smile. Rumor says he is engaged with Mr. T. Allen for the season.

On Saturday last Henry Moffat started a fire in a field and it ran across the field into John Hewitt's bush and destroyed about 60 cords of wood that he had cut. From there it travelled to James Cullen's and burnt fences and 40 cords of wood. The houses of both these gentlemen had a narrow escape, and it took until Sunday afternoon to get the fire under control.

Footed with the Exonerator.—The case of McArdle vs. Bell was tried on Saturday before Thos Hunbury J. P. D. C. McArdle, a Cosens Exonerator for part of Proton, charged John Bell with refusing to give him the information called for by the cosens. Mr. Clark of Mt. Forest appeared for Mr. Bell and Mr. Lucas for Mr. McArdle. After hearing the evidence, the magistrate fined the defendant $5, which with the costs, amounted to $10.55, besides legal expenses.

THE ORANGE BATTALION.—Colonel Ald. William Bell, ex Ald. Edward Barton and W. McSpadden of Toronto, delegates of the Orange battalion, arrived in town on Saturday evening's train and made arrangements for a monster gathering in Orangeville on Monday, May 25th. The delegates were delighted with their stay in town and they say over 1000 members of the corps will grace the town with their presence. Every effort should be put forth to give them a loyal reception and nothing should be left undone to entertain the visitors while here.

AN EXCITING RUNAWAY.—Mr. T. Dawson had what may properly be called an exciting time at noon on Saturday. Mr. Dawson rans a farm in the South ward and on the day we speak of he was engaged in plowing. A young team was attached to the plow, and in a field near by was a colt. The latter cleared the fence at a bound and was soon between the horses on the plow. The team became frightened and a runaway was the result. Before going far, however, the plow, like the pilot of a locomotive, tossed the colt aside and the other horses continued the race. ### BLOUNT.

Miss Alice Farrow, of Toronto, is visiting at Mr. Thomas Allen's.

We would like to know the reason why A. A. doesn't like to work on the lower 100 since L. D. has quitted the stone house.

Mr. H. W. was seen going west last Sunday with his new spring suit and his bland Irish smile. Rumor says he is engaged with Mr. T. Allen for the season.

On Saturday last Henry Moffat started a fire in a field and it ran across the field into John Hewitt's bush and destroyed about 60 cords of wood that he had cut. From there it travelled to James Cullen's and burnt fences and 40 cords of wood. The houses of both these gentlemen had a narrow escape, and it took until Sunday afternoon to get the fire under control.

[illegible] Kirkland, who is charged with murdering her in his house in the township of East Garafraxa for the purpose of getting the insurance, came on at 10 o'clock the jury had not returned a verdict and a report of this case is held over until next week. The other criminal case is against Wm. Elder for stealing timber off Mr. W. A. Cosens farm in Mono. The grand jury found a true bill in this case and he will be tried to-day. Reports of the other cases appear in another column of this paper.

NO BILL.

In the case of Mrs. Fraser of Erin, charged with receiving turkeys known to be stolen, the grand jury found no bill and the woman was dismissed. The public hope this is the last to be heard of David Bland's turkeys.

DALY AT AL. V. HUNTER.

Joseph Daly and Benjamin Conner of this town purchased the farm on which Dufferin lake is situated from W. H. Hunter several months ago, and they in turn disposed of it to B. B. Oder, Q.C., of Toronto and others. It appears there was some dispute about the title, hence the action. A settlement was arrived at and the case will not be called.

ISLAND V. GRAY.

Dr. Island of Rosemont brought action against Samuel Gray for trespassing on the property on which Islands' lake is situated, lot 4, con. 1, E.H.S., Mono, and removing timber therefrom. It seems the plaintiff and the defendant made some sort of a bargain about the purchase of the property, but the agreement fell through. A satisfactory settlement was arrived at without appealing to the court, Gray agreeing to purchase the property. W. L. Walsh for plff.

TOLTON V. C. P. R.

This case came up for trial at the last assizes, but was adjourned. Readers of THE SUN will recall the details of the case. It appears the C.P.R. turned a stream out of its proper course so that it flooded plaintiff's property. The parties couldn't agree among themselves on a satisfactory settlement, so his lordship, Mr. Justice Street, tried the case without a jury. The case occupied the attention of the court until yesterday morning, when his lordship reserved judgment. Myers & Robb for plff; Dalton McCarthy for deft.

GRAND JURY'S REPORT.

May it please Your Lordship:

We, the grand jurors, respectfully beg to report that we congratulate the county on the apparent absence of crime, and we trust that it may long continue in a similar state.

There having been six cases brought before us for consideration, in four of which true bills were found; with regard to the other two, they were dismissed, the evidence not having been found sufficient to send the accused before you for trial.

The grand jury were put to some inconveniences in consequence of the insufficiency of the locks upon the doors of their room, and we would recommend that sufficient locks, with proper keys, be supplied therefor, and at the same time an increased number of chairs should be provided for the accommodation of those attending court, with respect to which some inconvenience has been found. We examined the jail and premises and found all departments therein in a proper state of cleanliness and order. There are there confined seventeen persons—eleven males and six females—of whom thirteen have been committed as vagrants, and being helpless through age and infirmities and having no other means of livelihood are supported at the expense of the county. Besides these, there are two females—one insane and the other a lunatic; while there is one male an idiot and the other for forgery.

On the investigation of the case of the Queen v. Elder, in which we found a true bill, your grand jurors regret that they did not admire the attitude of one of the witnesses for the crown, who seemed to be principally interested in the prosecution, as while occupying this position in relation to the case he also acted in court as a constable, and part of the time his duties being to take charge of their room and to call the different witnesses required to come before them. And while on this subject, we would approve in selecting constables to serve at the different courts of the county that the same men be not chosen all the time, but that this part of the work be distributed equally among the different constables throughout the county, and thus avoid the notion of partiality.

This being the first occasion on which your Lordship presided in our county, we gladly avail ourselves of the opportunity it affords us of congratulating you on your elevation to the bench, the arduous duties of which we have no doubt your Lordship will discharge with a degree of dignity and purity in keeping and associated with the names of so many of your illustrious predecessors, and as time rolls on we need scarcely say that we shall always feel a special pleasure at your Lordship's return to administer justice for the benefit of the people of the county of Dufferin.

We have to thank the different officials for their courtesy to us while in the performance of our duties.

G. RUTHERFORD, Foreman.

A most disgraceful scene was enacted in the Church of the Ascension, Hamilton, last Thursday, caused by the introduction of a surpliced choir by the rector, Rev. E. P. Crawford. The antiritualists extinguished the lights and created pandemonium with shouts, cat calls whistling, yells, the singing of secular songs, etc. The voices of the clergy and choir were drowned out and the service brought to an abrupt end. More trouble is anticipated between the two factions in the church.

Overworked, broken down, prematurely aged men or those suffering from excesses or indiscretions will find a certain cure in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They supply the material necessary to enrich the blood, build up the nerves and restore the shattered system. Never fail. Sold by all dealers, or sent on receipt of price—50c. per box, or five boxes for $2—by addressing The Dr. Williams Med. Co., Brockville, Ont.

Allston Almost Completely Destroyed.

A FIRE WHICH RAGED FOR FIVE HOURS AND LEFT DESOLATION IN ITS PATH—DESTRUCTION OF HALLS, BANKS AND HOTELS CONSUMED.

ALLISTON, May 8.—What at day break this morning was a thriving village of 1,500 inhabitants on the Boyne river, in Simcoe county, is now a smouldering mass of ruins, a fire which originated in the stables of the Queen's hotel, and which quickly spread in all directions, having almost completely destroyed the village. When the flames were subdued after five hours' stubborn fighting there were six blocks of buildings, together with four hotels, a bank, a foundry and a number of dwellings had been destroyed. Mayor telegraphed early in the morning for assistance to Barrie, the county town 24 miles northeast of here, but the wire was out of repair. The Collingwood brigade promptly answered the call and for help and assisted the local department in extinguishing the flames. The town presents a desolate appearance, telephone, telegraph and electric light poles being strewn all over the street, together with a large quantity of goods, etc. The principal buildings destroyed were the postoffice, the Bank of Hamilton, Oddfellows' Hall, O'Brien's, Marrison's and Nolan's hotel the Revere house, the large brick block owned by T. M. Brown, the Market house and town and fire halls, the skating rink, the two brick block occupied by M. J. Doyle tailor, Aitkin & Sons' iron foundry, Langaway's grocery, vacant store belonging to William Mawhinny, Goddard's furniture store, McMylor's furniture store, W. Bavair's barber shop, J. C. Hart's general store, G. S. Edmund's jewelry store, Miss Graham's fancy goods, J. J. Armstrong's harness shop, P. D. Kelly & Sons' hardware store and offices, to which telegraph and express offices were situated, and house occupied by two tenants adjoining, frame store unoccupied, property of P. D. Kelly, Mrs. Carmichael's temperance hotel, William Jenkins' grocery, McKinney's boarding house, J. G. Sutherland's dental office, houses occupied by [illegible] and W. S. Wallace. [illegible] side of Victoria street were [illegible] R. Henderson [illegible] to the east, [illegible] Foster's [illegible] O. Mc[illegible]'s fancy [illegible] McCarthy, Pepper & McCarthy [illegible], Fanjoy's photograph gallery, [illegible] Low & Co's drygoods store, [illegible] Goodfellow's Division Court office, Mrs. Crawford's confectionery store, Badger's drygoods store, Mrs. Hurst's drygoods store, Thomas Evans' jewelry store, Burk & Graham's banking office, Fisher & Bell's law offices, I. McMahon's drug store, Hutchinson & Sons' drygoods store, W. B. Clifton's tinshop, H. W. Wright's grocery, Dr. Bell's surgery and residence and J. C. Hart's barns to the east. A. Kinsey's furniture store, T. H. Hoyes' boot and shoe store, James Allen's blacksmith shop and residence, T. L. Clifton's grocery, William Dennis' butcher shop, Christopher Donnelly's liquor store, K. McRae's tailor shop.

Later information increases the extent of the loss in this town by reason of Friday's disastrous fire. There is not a grocery or dry goods store left in the place; whole squares were burnt to the ground. The loss is estimated at from $400,000 to $500,000. About 90 families are homeless, nearly all of whom escaped with but the clothes on their backs, and many of whom are in actual want and in great distress. Contributions from those charitably disposed sent to Mr. N. M. Livingstone, manager of the Bank of Hamilton will be gratefully received.

MONO CENTRE.

Miss Jennie Maguire is visiting in Orangeville.

Owing to the excellence of the weather seeding will soon be a thing of the past. Several of our yeomen are seen to smile knowingly as they remind their tardy neighbor that they have finished a eding.

R. Turnbull, our popular merchant, has received a large spring stock and is making some attractive decorations in his store. Mr. Turnbull runs a first class general store, and deserves the large patronage which he receives.

Robert Holmes is making preparations for building stonework under his barn during the coming summer. Robert intends doing the building himself and as he has proven himself to be some what of a genius, we may expect a first class job.

Robert Kidney and Wm. Jackson, two of our enterprising young men, have gone to Owen Sound to sail aboard one of the C. P. R. steamers plying between that place and Port Arthur. Later—Rumor says that these two young men have returned. What has caused the reaction in their minds in favor of home? Can it be possible that the reverend estimation of a sister in one and the undying adoration of a lover in the other could have brought about the result? Time, which reveals almost everything, will no doubt in due time reveal the truth, therefore our comments for the present are at an end.

As we write the question arises—"Why cannot Mono Centre be a summer resort?" It is true it has all natural advantages for such, and still we lack one thing, and that is an enterprising man to push the scheme. We are surrounded on all sides with the most beautiful scenery, far superior to that of many places of note we could mention. Our valleys, ravines, precipices, caves, etc., furnish abundant food for the eye of a lover of nature, while our brooks abound in trout, and our woods in game, to satisfy the ambition of the angler and sportsman. To crown, as it were, all these and situated in the centre of attractions, we have Turnbull's Lake sparkling like a gem in its native element, which would afford excellent facilities for boating and camping. Taken altogether, we know of no place where the wearied mechanic, merchant or business man could find sweeter or more healthful [illegible] cases of the Mono [illegible]

[illegible] st stock of Ladies' and Children's Oxford Ties and Slippers [illegible] MacAdam's. He has the most [illegible] fine Boots outside of Toronto.

[illegible] on, Friday, a small boy named Harry Ruinn was committed for trial on a charge of stealing his schoolteacher's watch at Winona. The watch was found in his possession.

CHILD DESERTION.

[illegible] Near Fergus—a Suspicious-looking Couple Traced to the Neighborhood of Orangeville.

On Friday of last week a middle-aged man and a young woman entered a Fergus store and secured a basket and a quantity of flannel. Shortly thereafter they drove out of that town and when near the "Russin" house left the basket by the road side, where it could not very well escape observation. The first traveller passing by, who was a driver for Beatty, with headquarters at Fergus, examined the "find" and had in his arms a nice, bright child about eight days old, which he could claim for his own if so inclined. On reporting the matter to the Fergus authorities a constable started out to overtake if possible, the heartless pair, who, by the way, were unknown in that section. The officer traced the fugitives as far as Vanatter, and then lost the trail. He came on to Orangeville that night, but so far his search has been fruitless. Our own chief believes he saw a couple answering the description passing through here on Friday night, but up to date nothing farther has come to light.

BOWLING GREEN.

Mr. J. A. Bennett has returned home from Muskoka. Jim looks hale and hearty.

Mr. Thos. Hunter sustained a severe loss last week by the death of a valuable horse. The animal died of inflammation, which is so common among horses around here of late.

There was not a great quantity of sap this season and sugar making was unprofitable.

Nearly all the farmers about here have their crops in, and seeding is almost finished.

Our blacksmith is pounding away from daylight till dark. The smith is the man who makes the money.

Mr. Driver, census enumerator, has about completed his duties. It did not take him long to get through.

Some of our juveniles are getting pretty bold of late, especially on Sunday evening. The Willies are the boldest. Are they Rob.? What do you think Johnny? Has she gone back on you Jim?

SHELBURNE.

The Rev. G. G. McRobbie was inducted into the pastoral charge of the Shelburne Presbyterian congregation in Knox church yesterday afternoon.

One of the vacant stores in the Economist block has been fitted up as a reading room and library for the Mechanics' Institute, and the books and periodicals have been moved there. No necessity now for climbing stairs.

Dr. Norton is having the electric light put in his new residence on Owen Sound street. The Doctor will have, when completed, one of the handsomest residences in this part of the Province, with all the modern appointments.

Mr. J. M. Brimmell, town, has been going around with a pretty sore hand this week. He was cleaning oil off his hands one day last week with a piece of paper on which was fastened a needle, which entered deep into the palm of the hand and broke off.

Another fishing club has secured Hurtable's mill pond at Hornings Mills for a term of years. Messrs. Ed. Thompson, Chas. A. Gamon and John Witter, of Shelburne, and James Curry, Thomas Allison and Wm. Pinkerton, of Toronto, are the principal men in the club. Messrs. Witter and Thompson caught 58 lbs. of trout on May 1st in about 4½ hours.

One hundred and ten thousand speckled trout fry arrived in Shelburne on Tuesday from the hatchery at Newcastle in charge of Superintendent Wilmott. Fifty thousand were for the Brewster Lake Fishing Club; forty five thousand were for the Hornings Mills Fishing and Game Co. (Limited), the owners of the Hornings Mills Lake, and fifteen thousand for the Shelburne Angling Club, the owners of Mulmur Lake.

Mrs. Fraser, wife of Donald Fraser, of Melancthon, died on Sunday last. The deceased was 73 years of age, and had been a resident of Melancthon for 33 years. The deceased leaves a husband and seven children to mourn her loss. Five daughters are married and the two sons are unmarried. Mrs. Fraser was a sister of the late Andrew Melville, proprietor of the Nottawa Village Mills, and for many years senior partner of the of Melville, Fair & Co., of Collingwood. The deceased was highly respected by everyone who knew her. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon.

TWO SHODDY PEDDLERS NABBED.—On Saturday, the 9th inst., one of our leading merchants telegraphed Constable Hubbard to see if D. E. Wisner and H. M. Roberts had a peddler's license for the county, and if not to take out papers for their capture. Hubbard made search in the treasurer's office, and finding that no such license had been issued prepared himself with a warrant issued by the police magistrate, and after following the parties through the sinuous byways of Melancthon, overtook Wisner about 10 p.m. and carried him before Colwell Graham, J.P., who heard the case and fined the prisoner $10 and costs. The same parties were run down in Orangeville on the Monday following, and being brought before the police magistrate were allowed to depart in peace on condition that they take out a license, which they did, paying $50 into the county treasury. The zeal of Hubbard is commendable, the county being $50 the better of his efforts. There are only three licenses issued for the county, and there are yet several other shoddy and tea peddlers operating in this section to engage the attention of Constable Hubbard.

WHO KINDLED THE FIRE?

Leamington Hotelkeepers Propose to Sue a Preacher

LEAMINGTON, May 5.—The residents of this place are divided over the local option by law, which was carried here not long ago.

Ed. Luck, an hotel keeper, entered a motion to have the by law quashed, and Chief Justice Galt ruled that the local option law was beyond the powers of the Local Legislature. Last week the Presbyterian church was burned down, and on Sunday Rev. Mr. Watson, of the Presbyterian church, preached a sermon in the Methodist church, and took for his text, "Who kindled the fire?"

Luck claims that during the sermon he said that Ed. Luck, Wm. Ryan, John Wigley and Alf. Huffman kindled the fire in God's church, but not in the building, and declared that it is now the impression that he, along with other hotel keepers, set the church on fire. He says he will commence suit against Rev. Mr. Watson.

DECKER'S DOUBLE PLAY.

Seen Fired of His wife and Then Good for Another's Affections.

PHILADELPHIA, May 8.—Baseball Player Harry Decker, formerly of Toronto, will appear in a new role at the June term of court, when he must answer as respondent in a divorce suit by his wife, Angeline. Detectives found Decker living at the Tremont House, New Haven, and with him and registered as his wife was Mrs. Jessie McCartney. This information was communicated to Mrs. Decker and to Mrs. McCartney's husband, Henry McCartney of No. 319 Spruce-street, and prompted the diverse suits which they have brought.

Mrs. McCartney, who will have the uncenviable distinction of being both respondent and co respondent at the same term of court, was Miss Jessie Dancer, and married McCartney last August, three months afterwards transferring her affections to Decker. There is abundant evidence of the guilt of these two. Mrs. McCartney, who is only about 21 years old, is said to have aspirations for a stage life. Decker was married in Iowa in 1885 and lived happily with his wife until he entered upon his career as an expert baseball player and "masher." Mrs. Decker, a pretty brunet, who is supporting herself by working as a cashier in a Market street store, is also said to be desirous of becoming an actress. She made her first appearance before an audience on a West Philadelphia stage the other night and was received with marked favor.

THE WOMAN WAS DEAD.

HAMILTON, May 4.—A very strange affair occurred yesterday. About 3 o'clock two men arrived at the asylum with a woman named Mrs. Mary Bradley from Trafalgar township, county of Halton. One of the men was a county constable from Palermo and the other was the woman's brother, named King. The woman was sitting between the two men. When they arrived at the asylum and went to take the woman out of the rig it was discovered that she was dead. The men then started back to Palermo with the body unopposed, still lying in the bottom of the rig. The men stated that the woman was all right when they left King's place, and they did not know she was dead until they arrived at the asylum. She had been living at her brother's place and was out of her mind.

GRAND VALLEY.

Thomas Bird and family have removed to Orangeville.

Mr. Thos. Loney left yesterday evening for the North West.

Willie M. Fawcett, a son of Mr. Joe Fawcett, nearly 12 years of age, died of pneumonia at the home of his parents, Hillsdale, Dakota, on April 17th. Deceased was a nephew of Mrs. W. J. McPherson of this village.

Miss S. M. Buchanan received a slight stroke of paralysis about two weeks ago, seemed to be getting worse and was taken to Toronto on Monday week and placed under the care of Drs. Reeve and Graham for treatment.

Owing to the dry weather the river has got too low to float the logs down to the village. Mr. Johnston of Waldemar and Mr Philips of this place both have drives somewhere up the river stuck fast. Unless a good deal of rain falls soon they will likely stick for some time. Mr. Johnston's logs have got as far as Graham's saw mill on the 6th line. Hadn't the owner better employ the Graham firm to cut them up rather than let them rot?

NEW YORK, May 3.—After two weeks of unparalleled suffering the Rev. Dr. George W. Bothwell died at the Brooklyn hospital tonight. The accident which resulted in his death was the inhaling of a cork into the bronchial tube. He had removed a cork from a bottle and was holding it in his teeth. The antics of a child amused him and he commenced to laugh when the cork slipped down his throat. Several surgical operations and all that medical aid could do failed to relieve the sufferer.

A L'Original despatch says: A startling discovery was made yesterday by Mr Cameron, the jailer here. In the cell of the condemned murderer Larocque was found a blade of a penknife, sharpened to an edge as sharp as a razor's which was concealed under the mattress of his bed. Although Larocque has been most well behaved since his conviction, it is plain that he has had suicide in his thoughts, and that he intended using the knife blade with which to end his life. The blade was taken away and Larocque left with no means of self destruction. He eats heartily and sleeps well, and seems little disturbed by the prospects of his approaching death on the scaffold. He has not as yet spoken any word of confession that he is guilty of the terrible crime for which he has been sentenced to be hanged.

George Forbes, a wealthy young farmer living near Waterdown, committed suicide Saturday morning by drowning. His body was found in a shallow millpond near his house. It was lying in three feet of water. Forbes was suffering from the effects of a severe illness which afflicted him last year and resulted in the formation of a clot of blood on the brain. Recently he had complained of severe pains in the head and was suffering from melancholia. He leaves a widow and three children.

There is a young lady, the daughter of a wealthy farmer of Mornington, who has not slept without medicine for two years. She has not closed her eyes in sleep for several months. It is a most remarkable case and puzzles the skill of the medical men, who is of Stratford.

In the case of Miss Livingstone of Simcoe, Ont., who was awarded $5,000 damages by a Buffalo jury for breach of promise, a motion for a new trial has been made at the instance of the defendant Knox on the ground that the sum is excessive.

If you want money at the lowest rate of interest call on F. Irwin, over Eodacott Bro's store, Orangeville.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Whilst the inhabitants of our great cities suffer from the effects of overcrowding and all its attendant evils, both physical and moral, the more talented and energetic emigrant will in his own turn be thinking seriously of his new home from want of ready skill and great medical resources of his native land always at command. The best advice a friend can give is for him to take supply at therapeutic known remedies as part of his outfit, for by attention to these easily understood and yet simple directions which accompany each box and bottle he will never be at fault when taken ill or under any adverse sanitary conditions of life.

Positively closes May 20th, 1891, (15 days thereafter being allowed for letters to reach us from distant points.)

1st Prize ..... $1,000 in Gold
2nd " ..... $500 in Gold
3rd " ..... $1,000 Gent's Pianos

making a total of 625 prizes, the value of which will aggregate $5,000. This Grand Word-Making Competition is open to everybody, everywhere, subject to the following conditions. The words must be constructed from the two words, "The Agriculturist," and must be only such as may be found in Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, and in the body of the book, none of the supplements to be used. The words must be written in ink on one side of the paper only, and numbered in rotation, 1, 2, 3 and so on to the end of the list, for facilitating a speedy adjudication of the competition. The competitor sending in the largest number of words will be awarded first prize, and so on to the extent of merit. Each list as it is received at the office of the "Canadian Agriculturist" will be numbered, and if two or more lists contain the same number, the first received will be awarded the first prize, the next second and so on. Therefore the benefit of sending in early will evidently be seen. Each list must be accompanied by $1 for 6 months subscription to the "Canadian Agriculturist." One person can send in one or more lists, accompanying each list with $1 for which the paper will be sent to any address for six months. The best family paper in Canada. It is by no means a new paper, but has been established upwards of twenty years, and each year grows in the estimation of the subscribers. It contains no trashy, highly colored fiction, but has information worth ten times its price to any intelligent citizen in the land. It is neatly printed on fine paper, and each year's issue is a valuable book of reference. Send 25 cents for a specimen copy. Address, THE CANADIAN AGRICULTURIST, Peterborough, Ontario.

ALERTS WANTED.—The object of the publisher of the "Canadian Agriculturist" in giving away these large amounts in cash, is to extend the circulation of the paper, and a number of agents are required in every locality, to whom liberal pay will be offered. Send three cent stamp for particulars as to obtaining cases, etc. Address, THE CANADIAN AGRICULTURIST, Peterborough, Ontario.

Later information increases the extent of the loss in this town by reason of Friday's disastrous fire. There is not a grocery or dry goods store left in the place; whole squares were burnt to the ground. The loss is estimated at from $400,000 to $500,000. About 900 families are homeless, nearly all of whom escaped with but the clothes on their backs, and many of whom are in actual want and in great distress. Contributions from those charitably disposed sent to Mr. N. M. Livingstone, manager of the Bank of Hamilton will be gratefully received.

MONO CENTRE.

Miss Jennie Maguire is visiting in Orangeville.

Owing to the excellence of the weather seeding will soon be a thing of the past. Several of our yeomen are seen to smile knowingly as they remind their tardy neighbor that they have finished seeding.

R. Turnbull, our popular merchant, has received a large spring stock and is making some attractive decorations in his store. Mr. Turnbull runs a first class general store, and deserves the large patronage which he receives.

Robert Holmes is making preparations for building stonework under his barn during the coming summer. Robert intends doing the building himself and as he has proven himself to be some what of a genius, we may expect a first class job.

Robert Kidney and Wm. Jackson, two of our enterprising young men, have gone to Owen Sound to sail aboard one of the C. P. R. steamers plying between that place and Port Arthur. Later—Rumor says that these two young men have returned. What has caused the reaction in their minds in favor of home? Can it be possible that the reverend estimation of a sister in one and the undying adoration of a lover in the other could have brought about the result? Time, which reveals almost everything will no doubt in due time reveal the truth, therefore our comments for the present are at an end.

As we write the question arises—"Why cannot Mono Centre be a summer resort?" It is true it has all natural advantages for such and still we lack one thing, and that is an enterprising man to push the scheme. We are surrounded on all sides with the most beautiful scenery, far superior to that of many places of note we could mention. Our valleys, ravines, precipices, caves, etc., furnish abundant food for the eye of a lover of nature, while our brooks abound in trout, and our woods in game, to satisfy the ambition of the angler and sportsman. To crown, as it were, all these and situated in the centre of attractions, we have Turnbull's Lake sparkling like a gem in its native element, which would afford excellent facilities for boating and camping. Taken altogether, we know of no place where the wearied mechanic, merchant or business man could find sweeter or more healthful [illegible] cases of the Mono

[illegible] at stock of Ladies' and Children's, Oxford Ties and Slippers [illegible] Adam's. He has the most [illegible] fine Boots outside of Toronto.

[illegible] on, Friday, a small boy named Harry Rumo was committed for trial on a charge of stealing his schoolteacher's watch at Winona. The watch was found in his possession.

Our blacksmith is pounding away from daylight till dark. The smith is the man who makes the money.

Mr. Driver, census enumerator, has about completed his duties. It did not take him long to get through.

Some of our juveniles are getting pretty bold of late, especially on Sunday evening. The Willies are the boldest. Are they Bob? What do you think Johnny? Has she gone back on you Jim?

SHELBURNE.

The Rev. G. G. McRobbie was inducted into the pastoral charge of the Shelburne Presbyterian congregation in Knox church yesterday afternoon.

One of the vacant stores in the Economist block has been fitted up as a reading room and library for the Mechanics' Institute, and the books and periodicals have been moved there. No necessity now for climbing stairs.

Dr. Norton is having the electric light put in his new residence on Owen Sound street. The Doctor will have, when completed, one of the handsomest residences in this part of the Province, with all the modern appointments.

Mr. J. M. Brammell, town, has been going around with a pretty sore hand this week. He was cleaning oil off his hands one day last week with a piece of paper on which was fastened a needle, which entered deep into the palm of the hand and broke off.

Another fishing club has secured Huxtable's mill pond at Hornings Mills for a term of years. Messrs. Eli Thompson, Chas. A. Gamon and John Witter, of Shelburne, and James Curry, Thomas Allison and Wm. Pinkerton, of Toronto are the principal men in the club. Messrs. Witter and Thompson caught 58 lbs. of trout on May 1st in about 4½ hours.

One hundred and ten thousand speckled trout fry arrived in Shelburne on Tuesday from the hatchery at Newcastle in charge of Superintendent Wilmott. Fifty thousand were for the Brewster Lake Fishing Club; forty five thousand were for the Hornings Mills Fishing and Game Co. (Limited), the owners of the Hornings Mills Lake, and fifteen thousand for the Shelburne Angling Club, the owners of Mulmur Lake.

Mrs. Fraser, wife of Donald Fraser, of Melancthon, died on Sunday last. The deceased was 73 years of age, and had been a resident of Melancthon for 33 years. The deceased leaves a husband and seven children to mourn her loss. Five daughters are married, and the two sons are unmarried. Mrs. Fraser was a sister of the late Andrew Melville, proprietor of the Nottawa Village Mills, and for many years senior partner of the of Melville, Fair & Co., of Collingwood. The deceased was highly respected by everyone who knew her. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon.

TWO SHODDY PEDDLERS NABBED.—On Saturday, the 9th inst., one of our leading merchants telegraphed Constable Hubbard to see if D. E. Wisner and H. M. Roberts had a pedder's license for the county, and if not to take out papers for their capture. Hubbard made search in the treasurer's office, and finding that no such license had been issued prepared himself with a warrant issued by the police magistrate, and after following the parties through the sinuous byways of Melancthon, overtook Wisner about 10 p.m. and carried him before Colwell Graham, J.P., who heard the case and fined the prisoner $10 and costs. The same parties were run down in Orangeville on the Monday following, and being brought before the police magistrate were allowed to depart in peace on condition that they take out a license, which they did, paying $50 into the county treasury. The zeal of Hubbard is commendable, the county being $50 the better of his efforts. There are only three licenses issued for the county, and there are yet several other shoddy and tea peddlers operating in this section to engage the attention of Constable Hubbard.

WHO KINDLED THE FIRE?

Leamington Hotelkeepers Propose to Sue a Preacher

LEAMINGTON, May 5.—The residents of this place are divided over the local option by law, which was carried here not long ago.

El Luck, an hotel keeper, entered a motion to have the by law quashed, and Chief Justice Galt ruled that the local option law was beyond the powers of the Local Legislature. Last week the Presbyterian church was burned down, and on Sunday Rev. Mr. Watson, of the Presbyterian church, preached a sermon in the Methodist church, and took for his text, "Who kindled the fire?"

Luck claims that during the sermon he said that Ed. Luck, Wm. Ryan, John Wigley and Alf. Huffman kindled the fire in God's church, but not in the building, and declared that it is now the impression that he, along with other hotel keepers, set the church on fire. He says he will commence suit against Rev. Mr. Watson.

was the woman's brother, named King. The woman was sitting between the two men. When they arrived at the asylum and went to take the woman out of the rig it was discovered that she was dead. The men then started back to Palermo with the body unconfined, still lying in the bottom of the rig. The men stated that the woman was all right when they left King's place, and they did not know she was dead until they arrived at the asylum. She had been living at her brother's place and was out of her mind.

GRAND VALLEY.

(Delay.)

Thomas Bird and family have removed to Orangeville.

Mr. Thos. Looney left yesterday evening for the North West.

Willie M. Fawcett, a son of Mr. Jos Fawcett, nearly 12 years of age, died of pneumonia at the home of his parents, Hillsdale, Dakota, on April 17th. Deceased was a nephew of Mrs. W. J. McPherson of this village.

Miss S. M. Buchanan received a slight stroke of paralysis about two weeks ago, seemed to be getting worse and was taken to Toronto on Monday week and placed under the care of Drs. Reeve and Graham for treatment.

Owing to the dry weather the river has got too low to float the logs down to the village. Mr. Johnston of Waldemar and Mr Phillips of this place both have drives somewhere up the river stuck fast. Unless a good deal of rain falls soon they will likely stick for some time. Mr. Johnston's logs have got as far as Graham's saw mill on the 6th line. Hadn't the owner better employ the Graham firm to cut them up rather than let them rot?

NEW YORK, May 3.—After two weeks of unparalleled suffering the Rev. Dr. George W. Bothwell died at the Brooklyn hospital tonight. The accident which resulted in his death was the inhaling of a cork into the bronchial tube. He had removed a cork from a bottle and was holding it in his teeth. The antics of a child amused him and he commenced to laugh when the cork slipped down his throat. Several surgical operations and all that medical aid could do failed to relieve the sufferer.

A L'Original despatch says: A startling discovery was made yesterday by Mr. Cameron, the jailor here. In the cell of the condemned murderer Larocque was found a blade of a penknife, sharpened to an edge as sharp as a razor's which was concealed under the mattress of his bed. Although Larocque has been most well behaved since his conviction, it is plain that he has had suicide in his thoughts, and that he intended using the knife blade with which to end his life. The blade was taken away and Larocque left with no means of self destruction. He eats heartily and sleeps well, and seems little disturbed by the prospects of his approaching death on the scaffold. He has not as yet spoken any word of confession that he is guilty of the terrible crime for which he has been sentenced to be hanged.

George Forbes, a wealthy young farmer living near Waterdown, committed suicide Saturday morning by drowning. His body was found in a shallow millpond near his house. It was lying in three feet of water. Forbes was suffering from the effects of a severe illness which afflicted him last year and resulted in the formation of a clot of blood on the brain. Recently he had complained of severe pains in the head and was suffering from melancholia. He leaves a widow and three children.

There is a young lady, the daughter of a wealthy farmer of Mornington, who has not slept without medicine for two years. She has not closed her eyes in sleep for several months. It is a most remarkable case and puzzles the skill of the medical man, who is of Stratford.

In the case of Miss Livingstone of Simcoe, Ont., who was awarded $5,000 damages by a Buffalo jury for breach of promise, a motion for a new trial has been made at the instance of the defendant Knox on the ground that the sum is excessive.

If you want money at the lowest rate of interest call on F. Irwin, over Endacott Bro's store, Orangeville.

I TOLD YOU SO.

If you're an angel who cannot err the pale,
And after the bow-wows, O,
Find men are fallible with all it implies—
Remember my telling you so.

If you try to outshine your neighbors in style,
And live on the money you owe,
And end in the poorhouse soon after awhile—
Remember my telling you so.

If by blowing and bragging you try to impress
The world with your consequence, O,
And show you are nothing—or possibly less—
Remember my telling you so.

If you think to make people imagine you're wise
By talking of things you don't know,
And prove you're the fool they you cannot disguise—
Remember my telling you so.

If you go into business minus the cash
That makes the mare properly go,

Mr. T. H. Ferris, of Horning's Mills, is president of the Collingwood Collegiate football club, and Mr. Robert McGhee, of the same place, is president of the Baseball club. The Hornings Mills boys appear to be coming to the front.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

May-day was generally observed by the working men throughout the world.

A firebug set fire to a butcher shop at Colborne the day last week.

There is only one inmate in the Brampton jail.

The new Presbyterian church at Boston will be opened on the 24th of May.

A large store building at Fergus, formerly used as a tannery, toppled into the Grand river one day last week.

Ten-year old Egerton Gratton of Toronto township was kicked by a horse the other day, which broke his jaw bone in three places and knocked out his teeth.

The Brampton foundry dispute is mixed up worse than ever, and the town will form to foreclose the mortgage it holds on the business.

At the Brampton assizes last week an amusing case was disposed of. John Kay, 17 years old, was charged with outraging Maggie Connor, aged 18. Both are from Dr. Barnardo's home, London Eng. The jury acquitted the boy.

No sooner do the robin and other spring birds come than they are ruthlessly attacked by the catapult brigade. Large boys and small, too, have their death dealing apparatus in order, and many of them spend their spare time in killing the birds. This sort of thing cannot longer be tolerated.—Alliston Herald.

Prince Bismarck, to all persons who on April 1 went to Friedrichsruhe to congratulate him upon the anniversary of his birth, gave his photograph bearing the inscription, "Bismarck, 1 April, '91." For this purpose hundreds of photographs were necessary. They show the Prince clad in civilian's clothes.

Owen Sound rejoices in the fact that the Patterson house has been declared by a majority vote of the commercial travellers of the Dominion to be the best conducted hotel in Canada. The Patterson house took 226 votes; the Benson house, Lindsay, 223, and the remaining 22 houses from 37 to 1.

David Sanderson, of the 4th con. of Howick, has a cow which gave birth a few days ago to a calf with two heads, one on each end, six legs, in three pairs, and two tails. The tails are attached to the side of the body just about the two centre legs. This is one of the strangest cases ever reported in the township.

An infant of Jas. Irvine has been deserted by him and left on the corporation of this village. The council took the matter up at its last meeting and the reeve was authorized to secure admittance and send the child to the House of Industry. We understand Irvine is working at Credit Forks. He should be compelled to support his child.—Erin Advocate.

We understand that Mr. William B. [illegible] district attorney for the United States, has completed his investigation with regard to the Italian lynching affair in New Orleans. His report has been forwarded by mail, but Mr. Grant will not indicate the nature of his report. It is now stated that the grand jury have concluded their investigations and will probably report this week.

The Peel farmer is right up to the times. The number of sulky harrows, cultivators and combination cultivators and seeders which have gone out of town this week is extraordinary. Every one of the machines has a spring seat perched up behind, and it looks very much as if the boys had been buying the implements this season. It surely can not be that the old fellows are getting too stiff in the joints to let them have to sit down on the job. When one thinks of how the old chaps raised at the sulky plows when they were young, it is hard to believe they would go hankering in a seat. It must be the boys who want these gimcrack machines.—Brampton Banner.

Severe Cold Cured.

Dr[illegible]as—My mother was attacked with a very severe cold and cough. She received to the [illegible] Pectoral Balsam, and on [illegible] found it did her more good than any other medicine she ever tried.

MRS. KENNEDY,
Hamilton, Ont.

[illegible] married with the driver of the hotel bus. On Christmas Day, 1888, the pair eloped and made for Chicago, where, it is alleged, they have since been living as man and wife. Besides her husband, Mrs. [illegible]sworth left seven children, the oldest of whom was a girl 15 years and the youngest but 1 year old.

Prescott claims a population of 721.

Messrs. Gilchrist & Kent, of Orangeville, open out a chicken bankrupt stock in Thomas' old stand next week.

On Thursday last, Peter, son of Mr. Samuel McT[illegible], Lot 27, Con. 2, N. E. Melancthon, received a kick from a horse, breaking his thigh. Dr. B. states says the boy is doing well.

On Monday the thermometer stood at 72 in the shade and on Tuesday morning two degrees below freezing, with a slight flurry of snow.

Mr. T. H. Ferris, of Hawkins Mills, is president of the Collingwood Collegiate Football club, and Mr. Robert Mellhee, of the same place, is president of the Baseball club. The Hawkins Mills boys appear to be coming to the front.

We understand that steps have been taken to have a farmers' grist mill established at Black Bank. We think this is a very wise action, as it is about 7 miles from here to the nearest grist mill. We trust this action may have the unanimous support of the farmers in this community.

Mr. Wm. Thraker, Lot 30, Con. 4, Amaranth, on Tuesday forenoon brought into this office a duck egg of massive proportions. In circumference, the long way, it measures 9 inches; and the short way 7 inches, and weighs 5 ounces. It is the product of a duck said to be of the Hillburg variety.

At the last meeting of the council the following resolution was carried. That it is expedient that this council take immediate action as to the drainage of Main street, and that the reeve be hereby authorized to obtain competent legal advice as to the proper course to be taken.

An exchange relates that a young gentleman happening to sit at church in a pew adjoining one in which sat a young lady for whom he conceived a sudden and violent passion, was desirous of entering into a courtship on the spot, but the place not suiting a formal declaration the exigency of the case suggested the following plan. He politely handed his fair neighbor a Bible (open) with a pin stuck in the following text, Second Epistle of St. John, verse 5: "And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another." She returned it, pointing to the second chapter of Ruth, verse 10: "Then she fell on her face, and bowed herself to the ground, and said unto him, 'Why have I found grace in thine eyes that thou shouldest take knowledge of me, seeing I am a stranger?'" He returned the book pointing to the 13th verse of the Third Epistle of John: "I had many things to write. I will not with pen and ink write unto thee, but I trust I shall shortly see thee, and we shall speak face." From the above interview a marriage took place the ensuing week, it is stated, but in our opinion the whole story was made up in the newspaper office, after a hard struggle with a Bible and a concordance.

Maria Connolly, a former resident of St. Catharines, but who has lately been living with relatives near Reynoldsville, died this morning of lockjaw after intense suffering at the age of 60 years. About a week ago Mrs. Connolly while out in the yard, stepped on a rusty nail, which penetrated her foot. Nothing was thought of the matter until the foot began to swell, when medical aid was useless.

He should be compelled to support his child.—Fergus Advocate.

We understand that Mr. William B. Grant, district attorney for the United States, has completed his investigation with regard to the Italian lynching affair in New Orleans. His report has been forwarded by mail, but Mr. Grant will not indicate the nature of his report. It is a certain fact that the grand jury have completed their investigations and will probably report this week.

The Peel farmer is right up to the times. The number of sulky harrows or cultivators and combination cultivators and seeders which have gone out of town this week is extraordinary. Every one of the machines has a spring seat perched up behind, and it looks very much as if the boys had been buying the implements this season. It surely can not be mere coincidence that all who are getting so stiff in the joints that they have to sit down on the job. When one thinks of how the old chaps raved at the sulky plows, they can only think that it is a little strange that they would go harrowing in a seat. It must be the boys who want these gimcrack machines.—Brampton Banner.

Severe Cold Cured.

Dear Sirs—About three weeks ago I was attacked with a very severe cold and cough. I then received from your agent a Pectoral Balsam and on using it found it did her more good than any other medicine she ever tried.

MRS. KENNEDY,
Hamilton, Ont.

Married with the driver of the hotel bus. On Christmas Day, 1888, the pair eloped and made for Chicago, where, it is alleged, they have since been living as man and wife. Besides her husband, Mrs. Lawson left seven children, the oldest of whom was a girl 15 years and the youngest but 1 year old.

Greenore claims a population of 721.

We understand that steps have been taken to have a farmers' grist mill established at Black Bank. We think it is a very wise notion, as it is about 7 miles from here to the nearest grist mill. We trust this notion may have the unanimous support of the farmers in this community.

Mr. Wm. Thacker, Lot 29, Con. 4, Amaranth, on Tuesday forenoon brought into this office a duck egg of massive proportions. In circumference, the long way, it measures 9 inches; and the short way 7 inches, and weighs 3 ounces. It is the product of a duck said to be of the Hillberg variety.

At the last meeting of the council the following resolution was carried. That it is expedient that this council take immediate action as to the drainage of Main street, and that the reeve be hereby authorized to obtain competent legal advice as to the proper course to be taken.

An exchange relates that a young gentleman happening to sit at church in a pew adjoining one in which sat a young lady for whom he conceived a sudden and violent passion, was desirous of entering into a spiritship on the spot, but the place not suiting a formal declaration the exigency of the case suggested the following plan. He politely handed his fair neighbor a Bible (open) with a pin stuck in the following text, Second Epistle of St. John: "A new commandment I write unto thee, which thing is true in him and in you, because the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth. He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now. I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another." She returned it, pointing to the second chapter of Ruth, verse 10: "Then she fell on her face, and bowed herself to the ground, and said unto him, 'Why have I found grace in thine eyes that thou shouldest take knowledge of me, seeing I am a stranger?'" He returned the book pointing to the 13th verse of the Third Epistle of John: I had many things to write. I will not with pen and ink write unto thee, but I trust I shall shortly see thee, and we shall speak face." From the above interview a marriage took place the ensuing week, it is stated, but in our opinion the whole story was made up in the newspaper office, after a hard struggle with a Bible and a concordance.

Maria Connolly, a former resident of St. Catharines, but who has lately been living with relatives near Reynoldsville, died this morning of lockjaw after intense suffering at the age of 60 years. About a week ago Mrs. Connolly while out in the yard, stepped on a rusty nail, which penetrated her foot. Nothing was thought of the matter until the foot began to swell, when medical aid was useless.

THE REAL MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Who was it taught my wife to bake
A loaf of bread or fancy cake,
And spoil her clothes make?
My mother-in-law.

Who was it, when my wife was ill,
Bestowed upon her care and skill,
And noised it in a dozen bills?
My mother-in-law.

Who then my little ones prepared
Each morn for school, who for them cared,
And all their little sorrows shared?
My mother-in law.

Who was it, when their prayers were said,
Be sturdily tucked them into bed,
And, till they slept, beside them stayed?
My mother-in law.

Who of my clothing then took care,
Who overlooked my underwear,
And kept each garment in repair?
My mother-in-law.

Who offer me herald has lent
To buy the coal and pay the rent?
Who's gladly see me president?
My mother-in-law.

A loving grandmother is she,
A generous friend she's been to me,
Forever honored let her be,
My mother-in-law.

OLIVE VARCOE

—OR—

TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER V. (CONTINUED)

A SILKEN FETTER.

Sir Hilton went off with a forced laugh; and John, taking up his pistol again, looked after him.

"There goes a madman," he said, "mad and blind; and yet, if all the thoughts of my wretched brain were told to the world, judge and jury would say that I am the lunatic."

He sat down on the rustic seat, and rested his head on his hands.

"He does not love her," he resumed, "and yet he will make her his wife! How can I bear it?—and so soon! There is no time now for hope. Heaven help me! this misery is too great for me to bear. Is there no way for me to end it save one?"

John took up his pistol with an unsteady hand, then laid it down again.

"No," he murmured, "better to suffer and live. But they are all so selfishly blind. It is only Olive who sees the struggle that kills me. I have striven now in every way to shake Hilton's resolve. I only beat against a wall. I will speak to Eleanor herself. This cruel, wicked marriage shall not be; so help me Heaven!"

Thus the day wore slowly on—a long summer day of sultry heat and no voice within the house had found courage to tell Olive that her pleasant life at Trewavas was over.

Sir Hilton sedulously avoided her; Mrs Maristowe and Eleanor scarcely spoke to her; Lady Trewavas, irritable and fussy, being in reality grieved by the painful necessity her, rasped the unhappy girl's nerves by keeping her by her side, employed in those household occupations which always fretted Olive, because they seemed to be demanded of her as a right.

The table was piled with new bed linen and glaring curtains, all hot and heavy in the flaming window, upon which the sun's rays poured down fiercely.

"Dear me, my lady," said the housekeeper, "you'll be tired to death. Me and Miss Oliver can finish marking these few things quite well."

"No, no," returned Mrs. Trewavas "I'll see it done myself. Olive, what are you about? All this fine linen must be marked with Eleanor's and Hilton's initials jointly."

A flash of scorn shot from Olive's eyes, and she flung down the pen.

"I am as hot as fire," she said "Aunt, if you don't let me out into the woods and scream I shall go mad."

"Olive, I won't have you talk in that wild way," she said. "And see! you have spilt the ink on this new table cloth. What provoking carelessness! And you positively have not written Eleanor's name on it now!"

Stifling with rage, Olive took up the pen again; but her soul revolted against this duty, and her fingers refused to bend to their hated task. She flung both pen and ink into the grate.

"I don't see why I should mark the bridal outfit!" she cried: "let Miss Eleanor Maristowe come and do it herself."

"Olive," said her aunt, "you are a wicked, ungrateful girl. How dare you speak in that way?"

"Dear me, Miss Olive, you shouldn't go on so; you shouldn't indeed," said the old housekeeper; "and my lady so flurried with the wedding coming so soon and unexpected! In a fortnight isn't it, my lady?—and down here, too. That's very odd of Miss Maristowe to have the wedding at Trewavas. Most young ladies hold very much to being married from home."

Olive heard, and her heart beat with passionate grief and indignation. This, then, was the end of the lover's quarrel, and it was only a mean trick of Eleanor's in order to make sure of being Lady Trewavas.

"Good of Miss Maristowe!" she said in an accent of scorn. "There's no good in her, there's nothing in her but a little milk and water prettiness. I hate her. If she really marries Hilton and comes here to live, there'll be a battle royal between her and me every day."

Lady Trewavas was greatly incensed by this speech, the more especially as it was made in the presence of the housekeeper.

"Olive," she exclaimed, angrily, "I will make no remark on the bad taste, the utter want of lady like feeling, in your wicked words. I will merely state that you are mistaken. There will be no unseemly quarrels between you and my son's wife, because you will not inhabit Trewavas with her. Hilton spoke to me last night, and expressed to me his and her wish that you should leave. You are to go to London on the fifteenth."

Olive stood like a statute of unused grief, and heard this. She was bewildered. She seemed struck by some crushing lightning. Pale as death, her lips moved, but uttered no sound.

Leave Trewavas!—leave the fragrant hills, the shady woods, the pleasant paths where her childish feet had trod dear, leave the clear sky, the music and the freshness of the sea, and all the familiar places loved in girlhood—go there for that dull gigantic prison, London!—leave them, and never see Hilton's face, nor good kindly John's, nor hear a living word again from either! Oh, it was too cruel! it was better to die than to suffer thus! And Hilton had banished her—it was Hilton's command that drove her forth!

At this moment, looking through the flaming window, she saw the sunny sea below, and the pleasant beach, and Eleanor standing dressed in the freshest blue, with Sir Hilton by her side, bending over her lover-like, while two men launched a little boat and adjusted sailing gear.

Like one possessed with a fierce torture, Olive lifted her hand against them, and uttered rapid, burning words—words long remembered at Trewavas—words that seemed unearthly, falling from a young girl's lips. Then she fled from the room and from the house, and with swift steps ran through the garden to the beach. Here she seized Sir Hilton by the arm, and breathless told him she hated him.

"You are a cold, cruel man," she cried; "a worldly, calculating man! I scorn you!" She waved the two servants away with her hand, and then she went on like a torrent. "While it pleased your boyish fancy to make love to me, you did it; but now, grown a man, you marry to please the world. You make a fitting match; respectable selfishness, and insane beauty and wealth, are suited to each other. I despise you both; I despise the sort of cold conventional content in which you'll live. You deny me a home beneath your roof! I am come to tell you I do not need it. You dare issue your commands to me that I am to stay here until the fifteenth—that I am to go to London. I will do neither. By what right do you presume to dictate a residence to me? I will quit your mean, uncharitable hearth to-morrow. I will accept nothing from you. I will sell all I possess to pay you for the bread I have eaten of yours, these eight years past. I will not be insulted by your charity, or dictated to by your insolence. And as for you, Miss Maristowe," she continued, turning fiercely on the trembling girl, who clung to her lover's arm, "you are a feeble piece of feminine spite indeed! I recognize you in this. 'Tis your malice raises my cousin's hand to strike me. But I tell you, if you marry Hilton, you will be to him no more than a straw floating down the wind. As his wife you will live to be so miserable, that I should be doing you a mercy if I killed you."

Her flaming cheeks, her flashing eyes spoke a stronger language than her words, and Sir Hilton stood mute and astonished before her, his pale face, and his eyes abashed, seeking the ground; then, flinging his arm from her, she wrung her hands together, as though cleansing them of his touch, and fled up the shingly beach towards the garden.

"I am faint—I am ill," said Eleanor, in a low voice. "Take me in—I cannot go boating now."

Biting his lip, Sir Hilton beckoned the men, who stood aside out of his hearing, and bade them wait for his return; then very gently, and with a kinder, more tender touch than generally fell from his hand, he aided the uncertain steps of his affianced wife, as she went languidly up the beach. She wept as she went, and her hand upon his arm trembled.

In the garden, on the path where Olive's fierce steps had fled before them, Sir Hilton lingered, and coming to a great oak with a rustic seat beneath it, he placed Eleanor there tenderly, and sat down by her side.

"Eleanor, said he, "forgive me. I would not for worlds have exposed you to Olive's temper, but I could not guess such an outbreak possible. I did not know she would take leaving Trewavas so much to heart."

"Leaving Trewavas!" repeated Eleanor, in tearful indignation; "it is not that alone which excites her fury. She wanted to be mistress of Trewavas. She is jealous; she hates me because you love me—because I am to be your wife. I am afraid of her, Hilton, I am indeed."

"My dear love," he said, "be comforted. She will not hurt you; and believe me, Eleanor, I never said one serious word of love to the poor girl in all my life. I never thought of her as my wife; she is mad to be jealous."

"My mother thinks you have flirted a great deal with Miss Varcoe," said Eleanor.

"Your mother is not my friend," rejoined Sir Hilton; "and when we are married, Eleanor, I will take care she shall not poison my wife's mind against me."

"You will never part me from my mother!" cried Eleanor.

"You part me from my brother and sister," replied Sir Hilton, "and you must not wonder, Nellie, if I ask you a little in return."

"But my mother?" she expostulated. "No, you are not in earnest, Hilton."

"We will not talk of it now," he answered. "Are you better?"

"Yes. But why should John go?" said Eleanor, uneasily.

"Perhaps because you flirted with him before you accepted me," replied Sir Hilton, a little carelessly.

"I never flirted with him!" she cried eagerly.

"Call it by another name if you will, Eleanor," said Sir Hilton, "At all events, you were very friendly with him," he added.

It was Eleanor's turn to be embarrassed.

"I did not know I was so friendly with him," she said. "But my mother accused me of it too. The truth is, I always took John's part, or walked with What lover could be other than pleased with such a speech as this? He turned and thanked her with kisses.

"Poor John!" he said with a light laugh. "I fear both he and Olive bring a grievous bill against me, Eleanor."

"It was true, as John had said, that I wanted to hide that—that I liked you, Hilton."

Sir Hilton was something of a coxcomb and yet every man suffering a woman's flattery has something of a coxcomb air about him, whether he will or no. Moreover, Sir Hilton's nature was not deeply stirred by his love for Eleanor.

It floated lightly on the surface of his heart and he was content to drift on with it into the safe haven of marriage. Satisfied with her fitness for the position of his wife, pleased with the appliance of the world, and flattered with her love, her wealth, and her beauty, he would not ask himself what by beneath the careless, happy respectability of his life.

Then Olive's outburst of fury on the beach drew nearer to Eleanor with a feeling of self congratulation that he had resented some humiliation, unexamined, which would have drawn him into a vortex of fancied happiness, and, perchance repentance.

"I am not a man to create a fool's paradise for myself," he said, within his thoughts. "Life is nothing without its respectabilities, its comforts, its tranquillity, and honor. I have chosen well in taking the safe side—the side friends, relations, and my own consciences approve."

And so, in his careless contentment and ignorance, he laughed when he said "Poor John!" coupling his and Olive's names together as agreeing for a trifle.

"Olive is fierce indeed," said Eleanor. "She is a terrible girl, and it is true that I am afraid of her."

"She does not mean half she says," replied Sir Hilton; "and I am so used to her, I think nothing of these storms."

"They would kill me," continued Eleanor. "I should die of terror."

"Eleanor, until this sad outbreak of Olive's just now, I really thought you unkind in demanding her expulsion from Trewavas," said Sir Hilton; "but I now see you are right. You cannot, must not be exposed, as my wife, to Olive's fits of temper. I am grieved for her, because I know she loves Trewavas, but her departure is her own fault. We will give her a hundred or two a-year, my love, and find her a home with some nice old lady. Are you rested? Shall I take you home, or will you change your mind and try the boat?"

"I am so nervous," she said, pleadingly. "I should be afraid now on the sea. Come home with me, for if I see Olive without you, I shall be terror stricken."

It amused Sir Hilton that anyone should be afraid of that tiny little mite, Olive, and he laughed as he gave Eleanor his arm.

"I fear I must go to the Cliffs," he said, "as you know we promised to meet Damerel there; and he will wait for us; but, coming home, could you not manage to meet me somewhere on the sands, and we will have a walk together?"

"Can you put in at the lover's seat?" asked Eleanor.

"Yes," was the reply. "Can you be there at five o'clock?"

"I'll be there," responded Eleanor; "and who ever comes first must wait for the other."

"Agreed," said Sir Hilton.

They were close upon the house now, but lilacs and syringas and fragrant roses hid them from sight, and Eleanor did not resist as Sir Hilton drew her to his side and gave her a parting kiss.

In another moment they were in the large cool drawing room, where sat Mrs. Maristowe and Lady Trewavas, both of them with a look of consternation on their countenances.

"Thank Heaven, you are safe, my love!" exclaimed Mrs. Maristowe. "The violence of that dreadful girl alarmed me for you. We have had such a scene here with her!"

"Could nothing be done to restrain Olive from such folly?" said Sir Hilton, looking much vexed. "If she has to leave Trewavas, cannot she bear her grief like a woman, and not like a passionate child? She ought to know that we all feel this parting as a painful necessity."

"I am very glad you are come in, my dear Eleanor," said Mrs. Maristowe, putting her handkerchief to her eyes. "I consider you are much safer with me than with Sir Hilton. It is my opinion he cannot protect you from the dangerous hatred of this girl"

"There's nothing to fear from Olive's childishness," interposed Lady Trewavas, hastily, evidently fearing the effect of this speech on Sir Hilton. "And, at all events, Eleanor will not meet her again to-day; for John, who is the only person who can manage her, has persuaded her to go to her room and lie down; and, thinking she might be disturbed, he locked her door, and here's the key."

Lady Trewavas held it up, and gave Sir Hilton a look, as though entreating him to restrain himself

"Well, Eleanor," said he, laughing, "since the tigress of the family is locked up, I shall expect you punctually at five at the Lovers' seat. Take care of the poor little fury, grandmother."

With a smile he kissed her hand, and ran down the lawn towards the beach.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The gem of all the architectural jewels is to be erected on the World's Columbian Exposition grounds was finished—in design—last week. This is the administration building. It will be more than a palace and it will add lustre to the notable reputation of the architect, Richard M. Hunt of the American Institute of Architects. The great building will cost $850,000. It is in the form of four pavilions 84 feet square, one at each of the four angles of the square of the plan, and connected by a great central dome, 120 feet in diameter, and 250 feet high. In the center of each facade is a recess, 32 feet wide, within which is a grand entrance to the building. The whole structure covers a space 250 feet square. It is a beautiful and dignified specimen of architecture, befitting its position among the many fine structures over which it will preside. Its general design is in the style of the French renaissance, carried out in the academic manner of Ecole des Beaux Arts. The first great story is in the Doric order, and of heroic proportions, surmounted by a lofty balustrade. At the angles of each pavilion the piers are crowned with sculpture. Externally, the design may be divided, in its height, with three principal stages. The first stage, corresponds in height with the buildings grouped about it, which are about 65 feet high. The second stage of the same height, is a continuation of the central rotunda, 175 feet square, surrounded on all sides by an open colonnade, 20 feet wide and 60 high, with columns four feet in diameter. This colonnade is reached by elevators. The third stage consists of the base of the great dome, 30 feet in height, and the dome itself, rising in graceful lines, richly ornamented with moulded ribs and sculptured panels. This dome will be gilded and will assert itself grandly at the end of the long vista which opens up in every direction. The four great entrances, one on each side of the building, will be 50 feet wide and 50 high, deeply recessed. On each side of these entrances will be placed groups of sculptures, of emblematic character. The interior features will rival in beauty the exterior. Between every one of the grand entrances is a hall, 30 feet square, provided with broad circular stairways and swift running elevators. The interior of the dome is octagonal in form, the first story being composed of eight enormous arched openings. Above the arches is a frieze, 27 feet in width, the panels filled with tablets, borne by figures carved in relief. The interior of the dome rises 200 feet from the floor, and an opening 50 feet square admits a flow of light. The under side of the dome is enriched with panels filled with sculpture and immense paintings, representing the arts and sciences. In size this rotunda will rival if not surpass the most celebrated domes of like character in the world. In the four corner pavilions, which are four stories high, will be the offices of the administration, the fire and police departments board and committee rooms, postoffice, bank, restaurant etc.

COWS IN THE ALPS.

The cows in the Alps are generally very large and fine, of a dark mouse color, growing white at the muzzle. Each one has a name, and a bell around her neck, and as the herdes dust be with them all day, they are so accustomed to being with humankind that that they really seem to have human intelligence. Several mornings, when staying in the homes of the mountaineers, I have got up at daybreak to see them milk and care for their herds, and as I saw how gently they handled them, and the trustful way the cows would lay their heads against the keepers, as if trying in their dumb way to express their affection, it added to my regard for the sturdy fellows, who looked as if they might be as rough as bears

One cow, who leads the herd, has a much larger bell than the others, and as she starts off the rest follow along the narrow path up the mountain side, the different bells tinkling like chimes in the early morning air and forming a very romantic pastoral scene.

HINTS FOR YOUNG LADIES.

Do be natural; a poor diamond is better than a good imitation.

Do try to be accurate, not only for your own sake, but for the sake of your sex; the incapacity of the female mind for accuracy is a standard argument against the equality of the sexes.

Do observe; the faculty of observation, well cultivated, makes practical men and women.

Do try to be sensible; it is not a particular sign of superiority to talk like a fool.

Do be ready in time for church; if you do not respect yourself sufficiently to be punctual, respect the feelings of other people.

Do avoid causes of irritation in your family circle; reflect that home is the place in which to be agreeable.

Do be reticent; the world at large has no interest in your private affairs.

Do cultivate the habit of listening to others; it will make you an invaluable member of society, to say nothing of the advantages it will be to you when you marry; every man likes to talk about himself; a good listener makes a delightful wife.

Do be contented; "martyrs" are detestable; a cheerful, happy spirit is infectious; you can carry it about with you like a sunny

OLIVE VARCOE
—OR—
TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER V. (CONTINUED)

A BITTER FATHER.

Sir Hilton went off with a forced laugh; and John, taking up his pistol again, looked after him.

"There goes a madman," he said, "mad and blind; and yet, if all the thoughts of my wretched brain were told to the world, judge and jury would say that I am the lunatic."

He sat down on the rustic seat, and rested his head on his hands.

"He does not love her," he resumed, "and yet he will make her his wife! How can I bear it?—and so soon! There is no time now for hope. Heaven help me! this misery is too great for me to bear. Is there no way for me to end it save one?"

John took up his pistol with an unsteady hand, then laid it down again.

"No," he murmured, "better to suffer and live. But they are all so selfishly blind. It is only Olive who sees the struggle that kills me. I have striven now in every way to shake Hilton's resolve. I only beat against a wall. I will speak to Eleanor herself. This cruel, wicked marriage shall not be; so help me Heaven!"

Thus the day wore slowly on—a long summer day of sultry heat, and no voice within the house had found courage to tell Olive that her pleasant life at Trewavas was over.

Sir Hilton sedulously avoided her; Mrs. Maristowe and Eleanor scarcely spoke to her; Lady Trewavas, irritable and fussy, being in reality grieved by the painful necessity her, rasped the unhappy girl's nerves by keeping her by her side, employed in those household occupations which always fretted Olive, because they seemed to be demanded of her as a right.

The table was piled with new bed linen and glaring curtains, all hot and heavy in the flaming window, upon which the sun's rays poured down fiercely.

"Dear me, my lady," said the housekeeper, you'll be tired to death. Miss and Miss Oliver can finish marking these few things quite well."

"No, no," returned Mrs. Trewavas "I'll see it done myself. Olive, what are you about? All this fine new linen must be marked with Eleanor's and Hilton's initials jointly."

A flash of scorn shot from Olive's eyes, and she flung down the pen.

"I am as hot as fire," she said "Aunt, if you don't let me out into the woods and scream I shall go mad."

"Olive, I won't have you talk in that wild way," she said. "And see! you have spilt the ink on this new table cloth. What provoking carelessness! And you positively have not written Eleanor's name on it now!"

Stifling with rage, Olive took up the pen again; but her soul rebelled against this duty, and her fingers refused to bend to their hated task. She flung both pen and ink into the grate.

"I don't see why I should mark the bridal outfit!" she cried: "let Miss Eleanor Maristowe come and do it herself."

"Olive," said her aunt, "you are a wicked, ungrateful girl. How dare you speak in that way?"

"Dear me, Miss Olive, you shouldn't go on so; you shouldn't indeed," said the old housekeeper; "and my lady so flurried with the wedding coming so soon and unexpected! In a fortnight isn't it, my lady?—and down here, too. That's very odd of Miss Maristowe to have the wedding at Trewavas. Most young ladies hold very much to being married from home."

Olive heard, and her heart beat with passionate grief and indignation. This, then, was the end of the lover's quarrel, and it was only a mean trick of Eleanor's in order to make sure of being Lady Trewavas.

"Good of Miss Maristowe!" she said in an accent of scorn. "There's no good in her, there's nothing in her but a little milk and water prettiness. I hate her. If she really marries Hilton and comes here to live, there'll be a battle royal between her and me every day."

Lady Trewavas was greatly incensed by this speech, the more especially as it was made in the presence of the housekeeper.

"Olive," she exclaimed, angrily, "I will make no remark on the bad taste, the utter want of lady like feeling, in your wicked words. I will merely state that you are mistaken. There will be no unseemly quarrels between you and my son's wife, because you will not inhabit Trewavas with her. Hilton from the room and from the house, and with swift steps ran through the garden to the beach. Here she seized Sir Hilton by the arm, and breathless told him she hated him.

"You are a cold, cruel man," she cried; "a worldly, calculating man! I scorn you!" She waved the two servants away with her hand, and then she went on like a torrent. "While it pleased your boyish fancy to make love to me, you did it; but now, grown a man, you marry to please the world. You make a fitting match; respectable selfishness and insane beauty and wealth, are suited to each other. I despise you both; I despise the sort of cold conventional content in which you'll live. You deny me a home beneath your roof! I am come to tell you I do not need it. You dare issue your commands to me that I am to stay here until the fifteenth—that I am to go to London. I will do neither. By what right do you presume to dictate a residence to me? I will quit your mean, uncharitable hearth to-morrow. I will accept nothing from you. I will sell all I possess to pay you for the bread I have eaten of yours, these eight years past. I will not be insulted by your charity, or dictated to by your insolence. And as for you, Miss Maristowe," she continued, turning fiercely on the trembling girl, who clung to her lover's arm, "you are a feeble piece of feminine spite indeed! I recognize you in this. 'Tis your malice raises my cousin's hand to strike me. But I tell you, if you marry Hilton, you will be to him no more than a straw floating down the wind. As his wife you will live to be so miserable, that I should be doing you a mercy if I killed you."

Her flaming cheeks, her flashing eyes spoke a stronger language than her words, and Sir Hilton stood mute and astonished before her, his pale face, and his eyes abashed, seeking the ground; then, flinging his arm from her, she wrung her hands together, as though cleansing them of his touch, and fled up the shingly beach towards the garden.

"I am faint—I am ill," said Eleanor, in a low voice. "Take me in—I cannot go boating now."

Biting his lip, Sir Hilton beckoned the men, who stood aside out of his hearing, and bade them wait for his return; then very gently, and with a kinder, more tender touch than generally fell from his hand, he aided the uncertain steps of his affianced wife, as she went languidly up the beach. She wept as she went, and her hand upon his arm trembled.

In the garden, on the path where Olive's fierce steps had fled before them, Sir Hilton lingered, and coming to a great oak with a rustic seat beneath it, he placed Eleanor there tenderly, and sat down by her side.

"Eleanor, said he, "forgive me. I would not for worlds have exposed you to Olive's temper, but I could not guess such an outbreak possible. I did not know she would take leaving Trewavas so much to heart."

"Leaving Trewavas!" repeated Eleanor, in tearful indignation; "it is not that alone which excites her fury. She wanted to be Mistress of Trewavas. She is jealous; she hates me because you love me—because I am to be your wife. I am afraid of her, Hilton, I am indeed."

"My dear love," he said, "be comforted. She will not hurt you; and believe me, Eleanor, I never said one serious word of love to the poor girl in all my life. I never thought of her as my wife; she is mad to be jealous."

"My mother thinks you have flirted a great deal with Miss Varcoe," said Eleanor.

"Your mother is not my friend," rejoined Sir Hilton; "and when we are married, Eleanor, I will take care she shall not poison my wife's mind against me."

"You will never part me from my mother!" cried Eleanor.

"You part me from my brother and sister," replied Sir Hilton, "and you must not wonder, Nellie, if I ask you a little in return."

"But my mother?" she expostulated. "No, you are not in earnest, Hilton."

"We will not talk of it now," he answered. "Are you better?"

"Yes. But why should John go?" said Eleanor, uneasily.

"Perhaps because you flirted with him before you accepted me," replied Sir Hilton, a little carelessly.

"I never flirted with him!" she cried eagerly.

"Call it by another name if you will, Eleanor," said Sir Hilton. "At all events, you were very friendly with him," he added.

It was Eleanor's turn to be embarrassed.

"I did not know I was so friendly with him," she said. "But my mother accused me of it too. The truth is, I always took John's arm, or walked with him tranquillity, and honor. I have endeavored well in taking the safe side—the side friends, relations, and my own conscience approve."

And so, in his careless contentment and ignorance, he laughed when he said "Poor John!" coupling his and Olive's names together as aggrieved for a trifle.

"Olive is fierce indeed," said Eleanor. "She is a terrible girl, and it is true that I am afraid of her."

"She does not mean half she says," replied Sir Hilton; "and I am so used to her, I think nothing of these storms."

"They would kill me," continued Eleanor. "I should die of terror."

"Eleanor, until this sad outbreak of Olive's just now, I really thought you unkind in demanding her expulsion from Trewavas," said Sir Hilton; "but I now see you are right. You cannot, must not be exposed, as my wife, to Olive's fits of temper. I am grieved for her, because I know she loves Trewavas, but her departure is her own fault. We will give her a hundred or two a-year, my love, and find her a home with some nice old lady. Are you vested? Shall I take you home, or will you change your mind and try the boat?"

"I am so nervous," she said, pleadingly. "I should be afraid now on the sea. Come home with me, for if I see Olive without you, I shall be terror stricken."

It amused Sir Hilton that anyone should be afraid of that tiny little mite, Olive, and he laughed as he gave Eleanor his arm.

"I fear I must go to the Cliffs," he said, "as you know we promised to meet Damerel there; and he will wait for us, but, coming home, could you not manage to meet me somewhere on the sands, and we will have a walk together?"

"Can you put in at the lover's seat?" asked Eleanor.

"Yes," was the reply. "Can you be there at five o'clock?"

"I'll be there," responded Eleanor; "and who ever comes first must wait for the other."

"Agreed," said Sir Hilton.

They were close upon the house now, but lilacs and syringas and fragrant roses hid them from sight, and Eleanor did not resist as Sir Hilton drew her to his side and gave her a parting kiss.

In another moment they were in the large oval drawing room, where sat Mrs. Maristowe and Lady Trewavas, both of them with a look of consternation on their countenances.

"Thank Heaven, you are safe, my love!" exclaimed Mrs. Maristowe. "The violence of that dreadful girl alarmed me for you. We have had such a scene here with her!"

"Could nothing be done to restrain Olive from such folly?" said Sir Hilton, looking much vexed. "It also has to leave Trewavas, cannot she bear her grief like a woman, and not like a passionate child? She ought to know that we all feel this parting as a painful necessity."

"I am very glad you are come in, my dear Eleanor," said Mrs. Maristowe, putting her handkerchief to her eyes. "I consider you are much safer with me than with Sir Hilton. It is my opinion he cannot protect you from the dangerous hatred of this girl"

"There's nothing to fear from Olive's childishness," interposed Lady Trewavas, hastily, evidently fearing the effect of this speech on Sir Hilton. "And, at all events, Eleanor will not meet her again to-day; for John, who is the only person who can manage her, has persuaded her to go to her room and lie down; and, thinking she might be disturbed, he locked her door, and here's the key."

Lady Trewavas held it up, and gave Sir Hilton a look, as though entreating him to restrain himself

"Well, Eleanor," said he, laughing, "since the tigress of the family is locked up, I shall expect you punctually at five at the Lovers' seat. Take care of the poor little fury, grandmother."

With a smile he kissed her hand, and ran down the lawn towards the beach.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS for the blood
BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS for the blood

The large stone dwelling of John Johnston, sr., and the barn of John Johnston, jr., and Robert Johnston were destroyed by fire on Tuesday morning of last week. The loss is very heavy, as there was little or no insurance. Incendiarism was the cause.

COWS IN THE ALPS.

The cows in the Alps are generally very large and fine, of a dark mouse color, growing white at the muzzle. Each one has a name, and a bell around her neck, and as the herdes feast be with them all day, they are so accustomed to being with humankind that that they really seem to have human intelligence. Several mornings, when staying in the homes of the mountaineers, I have got up at daybreak to see them milk and care for their herds, and as I saw how gently they handled them, and the trustful way the cows would lay their heads against the keepers, as if trying in their dumb way to express their affection, it added to my regard for the sturdy fellows, who looked as if they might be as rough as bears.

One cow, who leads the herd, has a much larger bell than the others, and as she starts off the rest follow along the narrow path up the mountain side, the different bells tinkling like chimes in the early morning air and forming a very romantic pastoral scene.

HINTS FOR YOUNG LADIES.

Do be natural; a poor diamond is better than a good imitation.

Do try to be accurate, not only for your own sake, but for the sake of your sex; the incapacity of the female mind for accuracy is a standard argument against the equality of the sexes.

Do observe; the faculty of observation, well cultivated, makes practical men and women.

Do try to be sensible; it is not a particular sign of superiority to talk like a fool.

Do be ready in time for church; if you do not respect yourself sufficiently to be punctual, respect the feelings of other people.

Do avoid causes of irritation in your family circle; reflect that home is the place in which to be agreeable.

Do be reticent; the world at large has no interest in your private affairs.

Do cultivate the habit of listening to others; it will make you an invaluable member of society, to say nothing of the advantages it will be to you when you marry; every man likes to talk about himself; a good listener makes a delightful wife.

Do be contented; "martyrs" are detestable; a cheerful, happy spirit is infectious; you can carry it about with you like a sunny atmosphere.

Do avoid whispering, it is as bad as giggling; both are to be condemned; there is no excuse for either one of them. If you have anything to say, say it; if you have not, do hold your tongue altogether; silence is golden.

Do be truthful; do avoid exaggeration; if you mean a mile say a mile, not a mile and a half; if you mean one, say one, and not a dozen.

Do, sometimes at least, allow your mother to know better than you do; she was educated before you were born.

Sentenced to 3 Years at Kingston.

The Judge Charges Against the Prisoner—Circumstantial Evidence Convicts Him.

The trial of John Kirkland, charged with arson, was concluded at the assizes Wednesday evening of last week, when the jury brought in a verdict of "guilty, with a recommendation of mercy." When the foreman of the jury announced the verdict Kirkland asked the attending constable to bring him a glass of water, which he gulped down in an excited manner.

Crown Prosecutor Myers had an array of witnesses, while the defence didn't produce a solitary one. The judge's charge was dead against the prisoner, and this accounted for the rapid manner in which the jury arrived at its conclusion. ### EDITORIAL NOTES.

It is reported that Sir John Macdonald will visit England after the session. At all events, he will not summer at Rivière du Loup, as he has rented his residence there to Judge Gwynne, of the Supreme court.

DELEGATES from all parts of Ontario are at Ottawa to-day to urge the government to refund the whole or part of the amount of bonuses granted to railways years ago. Mr. W. L. Walsh, mayor of Orangeville, is chairman of the deputation, and we sincerely hope success will crown the deputation's efforts.

IT must not be very pleasant to Sir Richard Cartwright and other Reform leaders to hear Grit journals admit that Canada is doing business at the old stand without the help of the great American republic. Last week's Harriston Tribune (Grit) says: The McKinley bill does not seem to strike terror to the hearts of our business men so far as eggs go, for nearly every man you meet is buying eggs. We have one wholesale dealer who visits the neighboring towns and villages and handles vast quantities, then we have about 40 men who buy and ship direct to Toronto, and these persons continue to ignore the McKinley bill by paying 10 cents a dozen, and Harriston is a Grit town too. There is something wrong about this.

AGES OF SOME POLITICIANS.

While the parties are talking of their "Grand Old Men" it is interesting to look into the ages of various statesmen. Sir John Macdonald, who is seventy-six, is a year younger than Sir Adam Archibald, who sat for Colchester in the last Parliament. He is Mr. Mowat's senior by only five years, and Mr. Mowat, at seventy one, is a year older than Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Donald Smith. These two knights have the advantage of Mr. Mackenzie by one year and Mr. Mackenzie is a year older than Mr. Mackenzie Bowell. Mr. Bowell is a year older than Mr. Peter Mitchell and Mr. A. C. Jones, and these two gentlemen are two years older than Sir Hector Langevin. Mr. McGreevy is sixty-four, a year younger than Sir Hector, and of the same age as Mr. Colby, who is a year older than Mr. Carling. Mr. Charlton is the junior of Mr. Carling by one year, and Mr. Mills is sixty. Sir Richard Cartwright, Mr. Dewdney and Mr. Costigan are fifty-six, while Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Haggart are fifty-five. Mr. Cook first saw the world during the troubles of 1837, and is consequently fifty four. Mr. Patterson, of Brant, is fifty-two, Mr. Chapleau is fifty one, and Mr. Laurier fifty. Mr. Curran is forty nine, Sir Adolphe Caron forty-eight, Sir John Thompson forty seven, Mr. L. H. Davies, of Prince Edward Island, forty-six, and Mr. Foster forty four. Mr. C. H. Tupper, the Minister of Marine, is the juvenile of politics. He is but thirty six. Mr. Tupper was a baby in his arms when his father was first elected to the Nova Scotia Legislature.

GHOULS AT THEIR WORK.

CORNWALL, May 15.—The body of the late Mr. P. Purcell, ex M P for Glengarry and millionaire contractor, has been taken from its resting place. As a man named Loney was passing the burying ground at Flanagan's point in a row boat about noon to-day he noticed that the grave of the late Mr Purcell had been disturbed. He rowed to the shore and found the lid of the coffin on the ground beside the grave and the body gone. He immediately gave the alarm. Word reached here about 2 o'clock and Mr. John Purcell, brother of the deceased, immediately drove down to the Point and found that the ghouls had removed all the earth from the grave, tore the top off the rough box and removed the lid from the coffin. This they threw to one side and dragged the body from the grave to the river, where their boat was evidently anchored. A narrow footprint, about a number eight, is the only clue left. A boat was found floating down the river near the Point this morning on which was painted the name "Ellen." Detectives in Montreal were immediately wired for and will arrive to-night to work up the case. The body was interred on the 5th inst., and it is the general impression that the "snatchers" expect a large reward for its return. A strict watch had been kept on the grave until last night, when all fears of a removal of the corpse were lulled. On Wednesday night two men entered the graveyard and were in the act of approaching the grave when the guard called a halt, saying, "Leave immediately, or I will shoot." They at once withdrew.

While splitting wood James Homer, Newmarket, raised a blister on his hand. No attention was paid to it dull a day or two after, when his hand commenced to swell and the swelling continued to the elbow. A doctor was called in, and after treating it for two days pronounced it a case of blood poisoning. Just a week after splitting the wood Mr. Homer was a corpse.

A TRAIN WRECKED.

Terrible Railway Accident at Churchville.

THREE MEN KILLED — TWO MAIMED FOR LIFE.

A Way Freight Ditched on the Credit Valley—Driver Johnson and Fireman Ferguson Ride to Their Death.

AN UNKNOWN MAN KILLED — TWO BRAKEMEN SERIOUSLY INJURED —AN AWFUL CRASH.

Railway accidents are of daily, almost hourly, occurrence, but it is only when they happen near home that we fully realize their awfulness. A thrill of horror and regret ran through this town yesterday morning when the news reached here that the way-freight on the Orangeville branch of the C. P. R. between here and West Toronto Junction had been ditched and that the driver and fireman, a stranger and probably others had lost their lives in the wreck.

The train was in charge of Conductor Wm. Rooks, and Driver Robert Johnson and Fireman James Ferguson were on the engine. It was between 7 and 8 p.m. and on the down run that the terrible crash took place. When a short distance below Churchville and while running at a fair rate of speed on a down grade the engine struck a bow which was lying on the track, and in an instant the train machine left the rail, toppled over and buried beneath it the engineer and his mate. Johnson met instant death, while Ferguson lingered about half an hour before his spirit winged its flight. Riding on the engine at the time of the accident was a stranger, who, it seems, had missed the regular train and was taking this means of reaching home. He, too, was instantly killed.

After striking the obstruction the locomotive ran several hundred yards on the ties before turning over, but when it did leave the road it drew several cars over the embankment. Wm. P. Little, one of the brakemen, was riding next to a flat car loaded with stone, and when the engine left the track he was thrown off, a number of the great stones falling on him and crushing his right foot. W. G. White, another brakeman, was on top of a box car. He was thrown forward and received a number of ugly cuts on the left leg and several bruises on other parts of the body. These two men were sent to Toronto on the 9.30 train and immediately taken to the hospital, where it was found necessary to amputate Little's leg. White is in a very precarious condition, but it is thought that he will recover. The brakemen say effective brakes were applied, except the one on the flat car, but the steep grade made it almost impossible to stop the train.

"Bob" Johnson, the engineer, was one one of the best known drivers on the road. He belonged to a family of railroaders, having two brothers on the C.P.R. and one a driver on the Trunk. He worked at the railway business from his boyhood up, and his sudden death created great excitement among his many friends along the line. His wife, who was a daughter of James Keyes, died some time ago. He leaves one child, who is living with friends in Orangeville. He was about 28 years of age.

James Ferguson, the fireman, was 27 years old and was a native of Orangeville, being the second son of Mr. James Ferguson, painter. He was an exemplary young man and was steadily working his way up in the confidence of the railway authorities. His parents have the heartfelt sympathy of every one in this section, where the family is well and favorably known.

W. G. White, the injured brakeman, lives at West Toronto Junction and is 25 years of age. He has been employed on the road for about three years. Little, the other brakeman, has only been on the road two weeks and is 21 years old. He was raised in the township of Mono, his home being near the village of Rosemont. Rumor has it that Little died in the hospital yesterday, but up to the hour of going to press the report has not been verified.

The bodies of Johnson and Ferguson were brought to Orangeville on Wednesday evening's train, and were met at the station by hundreds of sympathizing citizens. The funerals will take place this afternoon.

WILL BOYCOTT US.

Altonites Take Offence at our Visitors.

To the Editor of The Sun.

SIR,—We, the people of Alton, are naturally good and mad at the citizens of your town for getting up a counter attraction for the Queen's birthday. You have your big day on the 1st of July, and, of course, we all go to Orangeville then, but this year it will be quite different, and for a very good reason. Here we have gone to the trouble and expense of getting up a good programme for the 24th, confidently counting upon the support of your citizens, at least that portion of them who do not prefer Shelburne, Grand Valley or some other of the adjacent burgs, and what do we find? Why, off go a few more or less prominent townsmen and make arrangements with the Scarlet Corps of uniformed Orangemen of Toronto to visit your town on that day, thus virtually killing Alton's celebration, for what village could hope to compete with you in the face of 1,200 or 1,500 richly uniformed and splendidly drilled "Rising Sons of William?" We feel that we have not been fairly dealt with, and in the present temper of our people it is just possible we may get up a counter demonstration to your Dominion day celebration. Yours, etc., AJAX.

[Ajax is laboring under a misapprehension of facts, and as a somewhat similar wail reaches us from Shelburne, we will just state for the benefit of the jealous ones that the first our citizens knew of the proposed visit of Toronto Orangemen was when a committee came here to arrange for the reception of their brethren. We would be shamps, Ajax, to refuse to receive the visitors, and we would be "base ingrates" should we fail to receive them right royally. As for the 1st of July, we are arranging such a programme of attractions that you will be unable to stay away even though the bottom should drop clean out of your little town. We will expect you here on both occasions, and also on the 13th of June, when a thousand Sons of Ireland will be up from the city.—ED.]

Henderson, pastor of St. Mark's church tied the silken knot in the presence of a few friends of the contracting parties at the residence of the bride's mother, Wellington street. THE SUN extends its greetings.

PLEASANT EVENT.—A very pleasant event took place at the residence of Mr Alex. Struthers, Owen Sound, on Wednesday, the 13th inst., when his third eldest daughter, Miss Alexandria, was married to Mr. Frederick J. King, of the furniture firm of F. J. King & Co., of Orangeville. The happy couple received the congratulations of a large circle of friends and left by the evening train for Niagara Falls. We wish them a pleasant honeymoon.

IMPORTANT ANNIVERSARIES.—Few persons perhaps are aware of the fact that next year is one of very significant celebrations. It is the twenty-fifth anniversary of Canadian confederation; the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of responsible government; the one hundredth anniversary of the assembly of the first parliament of Upper and Lower Canada; the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Montreal, and the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus.

WAS IT INCENDIARISM?—Between 5 and 6 o'clock Sunday evening smoke was seen issuing from Mr. T. N. Williamson's stable, just east of the post-office. Fortunately the blaze was extinguished in time to prevent another conflagration, for had it got properly started nothing would have stopped the flames. Whether the fire was the work of an incendiary or an accident will probably remain a mystery. The fact that no coal oil was used and the early hour at which the fire started point to it as being the result of an accident. The police, however, are keeping a stricter watch than usual.

UP AND OUT. LEFT OUT.—Rebates have been provided for transportation of the press from Collingwood, and Durham, as well as Wiarton, Meaford, Dundalk, Thornbury, Hanover and Markdale. Gentlemen of the press will be gladly welcomed at the Sun office, where full information may be obtained re budget, etc.—Owen Sound Sun. The Orangeville press representatives seem to have been overlooked, according to the above, but we invite the Owen Sound editors to pay Orangeville a visit on July 1st.

A WARNING TO LOAFERS.—The following advertisement has been put in the Berlin papers and signed by the mayor of that town:—Warning.—Boys, young men or any person found standing on the street corner or along the side walk on Sunday evening or any other evening or during the day and passing remarks at passers by or insulting ladies or any citizens, will be severely dealt with hereafter. No standing around on streets or street corners will be allowed, except under lawful privileges and under unavoidable circumstances; and to further the object, it might be well for parents to induce their children to attend church and ministers advise parents accordingly.

THE ARTHUR MAN KICKS!—Township councils display an economy amounting to niggardliness when they incorporate their lists of poundkeepers, fence-viewers, pathmasters, etc., dates of court of revision and other meetings, in the reports of minutes of meetings which are published free by the local press. Such matter is paid for at space and should be paid for as such. We presume if the law would allow it the voters' lists would be tacked on to the minutes and printed gratis. What printing is paid for is in many instances done at starvation rates, and the councils should not expect too much for nothing even from printers, who are proverbially a wealthy as well as a generous class.—Arthur Enterprise.

SAD DEATH.—Entered into rest Sunday, May 10th, Hannah J., youngest daughter of Mrs. Squire, Erin. Miss Speirs' illness had been brief, and the announcement of her sudden death at the early age of 22 is deeply deplored by the whole community. Of retiring, gentle and unselfish disposition, Miss Speirs was a general favorite, and will be much missed from the home and church circles, where she proved herself a devoted member. The people of Erin again extend their deep sympathy to the grief stricken mother and sisters in these severe and repeated trials, this being the third member of the family in fourteen months. Miss Speirs resided in Orangeville for some time, being employed in the tailor shop of W. J. Johnston, late of this town.

"ENTERPRISING" CITIZENS.—Orangeville can boast of having more than her share of enterprising merchants and hotelkeepers, but some are too "enterprising for anything. Two or three weeks ago a Toronto fakir made one of his periodical visits to Orangeville soliciting orders for printing billheads, letterheads, envelopes, etc., and, as usual, took a number of orders which should have been given to the local papers. There are three printing offices in this town capable of doing all the work in this particular line that the merchants and others want, and the work is done just as well and just as cheap as any city office can execute it. A newspaper does more than any other institution to advance the interests of a town, and the merchant who sends his printing to foreign offices is doing the very thing which he would be the first to object to were we to import our groceries, drygoods, etc.

A NEW FIRE HALL.

Will Ask for Tenders for Its Construction.

The F. & W. Committee to Purchase Supplies—Action on the Quarry Spur-Line Deferred.

The witnesses of this handsome corporation met for the transaction of municipal business at 7:30 o'clock on Monday night, but it was after 8 o'clock before all the members arrived. When Ald. Adamson, the last member to call around, dropped in the business was well under way.

Mayor Walsh was on the throne and Reeve Lindsay, Deputy reeve Endacott, Ald. Fiddis, Young, Green, Gillespie, Ketchum, Youmans, Osborne and Adamson found seats around the "green (?) table."

ACCOUNTS.

from J. J. Hubbard, $3; W. Fromlin, 75c.; R. Parkin, $5; D. G. Lamont, $80; H. Haley, $31; J. Graham, $34; R. W. Kidney, $1.63, were found correct and ordered to be paid; H. N. Young & Bros., $18.20, was referred to the F. & W. committee.

A communication from P. S. Inspector Gordon was read, asking that the town hall be placed at the disposal of the Dufferin Teachers' Association, which meets here on the 11th and 12th of June. The council very properly complied with his request.

Another communication asking the free use of the town hall was received from J. S. Leighton. The Orange battalion, which comes here on the 25th, will utilize it for dancing, etc.

DAMAGES.

Hugh Haley, per communication, drew the attention of the council to the state of affairs on his property. The flood of last June carried away a portion of his lot and later on the council built a breakwater. The latter was damaged some time ago, and the town has not repaired it. Now Mr. Haley asks that it be repaired forthwith and that the council pay him $60 damages. The R. & B. will effect a settlement.

NO MONEY TO INVEST.

Several communications were received from sewer pipe and waterworks companies and were tabled. But the most amusing communication was from a firm offering the town a safe investment for its money—as if this town had any surplus cash! The communication was hustled under the table in quick order.

WE WANT WATERWORKS.

The city of Belleville wants to sell off its stock of fire engines, and asked us to purchase one, but as the town don't want anything in that line the epistle was dropped on the table.

MORE SUPPLIES.

Chairman Gillespie brought in the report of the F. & W. committee and the council went into committee of the whole. After being slightly amended the report was adopted. It recommended the purchase of 250 feet of rubber hose at $1.15 per foot, 1 siamese coupling at $10, 1 play pipe at $17, 2 nozzles at $2.50, 1 controling nozzle at $10, ½ doz. hose straps at $9, 3 axes at $6, and the payment of a number of accounts. Previous to the adoption of the report Mr. Fair, an agent of the rubber company, addressed the council as to the quality of his goods.

R. AND B. MATTERS.

Ald. Adamson read two reports of the R. & B. committee. The first gave Contractor Armstrong power to run a drain along Mill street to the creek, and the second recommended that the tenders of Mr. U. Penalton for cedar scantling at $10 per M. and D. McDonald, for pine plank at $14 per M. be accepted. The reports were adopted.

NO SPUR-LINE YET.

Ald. Ketchum, chairman of the special committee appointed to enquire into the quarry spur line business, reported that action be deferred until the C. P.R. authorities are consulted. Adopted.

A NEW FIRE HALL.

Deputy reeve Endacott, chairman of the T. P. committee, read a report which stated that the insurance on the waterworks buildings had been paid by the companies. The amounts allowed were: Waterworks building and engine house, $610; engines, $20; hose, $285; bell tower, $447, bell $700, and the old bell. A sketch of a new building was submitted. It is proposed to tear the present building down and erect a more modern edifice. The committee was instructed to get plans and specifications prepared and call for tenders. The cost is estimated at $2,500.

SHELBURNE.

(Free Press and Economist.)

On Saturday last Mr. Bracken, of the 4th line, Amaranth, had his barn destroyed by fire, catching from a bush fire near by. We have not received particulars as to loss.

One night last week the frame barn and stables belonging to D. McCoy, on the back line of Melancthon, were destroyed by fire, together with a threshing machine and other articles. The house, a log building and unoccupied, was also burned. The buildings and contents were insured.

About three o'clock Saturday after noon the log dwelling house belonging to John Hurlburt, lot 14, con. 5, S.W., Melancthon, was found to be on fire. The men were away from home at the time, and only a very small portion of the contents of the house were saved. The log barn and stables were also consumed, together with one cow, four calves, some pigs, about forty hens, and all the farming implements. Mr. Hurlburt's loss is a very serious one to him, as he had very little insurance.

Subscriptions are being raised among the business men and property owners on Main street for the purpose of raising funds to employ a night watchman. We understand that John Anderson, who has charge of the electric lighting, is to be the person selected for the work, having offered to patrol the streets from 11 p.m. (at which hour the lights are extinguished) until daylight, nightly, for the term of five months, for the sum of $75. The idea is a good one, and we hope to see it carried out. We have been informed since the above was written that Mr. Anderson commenced making his rounds on Tuesday night.

Exercise of the muscles is necessary for the proper development of the human system, but unfortunately carrying water, cutting wood, working in the garden, or running family errands is not half as popular with the average boy just now as carrying a big bamboo pole around the country on fishing expeditions.

KIRKLAND A CONVICT

Sentenced to 3 Years at Kingston.

The Judge Charges Against the Prisoner—Circumstantial Evidence Convicts Him.

The trial of John Kirkland, charged with arson, was concluded at the assizes on Wednesday evening of last week, when the jury brought in a verdict of "guilty, with a recommendation of mercy." When the foreman of the jury announced the verdict Kirkland asked the attending constable to bring him a glass of water, which he gulped down in an excited manner.

Crown Prosecutor Myers had an array of witnesses, while the defence didn't produce a solitary one. The judge's charge was dead against the prisoner, and this accounted for the rapid manner in which the jury arrived at its conclusion. When the grand jury was inquiring into the case twelve voted against finding a true bill and thirteen for.

On Thursday morning his lordship Mr. Justice Street sentenced the prisoner to three years in the provincial penitentiary at Kingston, and he will probably be taken there next week. A great deal of sympathy is expressed for Kirkland on account of his age, as he has already passed the allotted three score and ten years.

CARDWELL.

One of our estimable young men, who resides on a corner farm near here, has kicked of his bachelor shoes and joined the benedict club. A fair lady from Blount is the other partner in the transaction. Full particulars next week.

The celebrated Cardwell exponents of football, the Rangers, have revived, and the club is reorganized for the season of '91, when they intend to make a record for themselves. The following officials are in charge: W. E Hall, honorary president; Hugh Bracken, honorary vice-president; Joseph Leighton, president; Wm Jackson, 1st vice-president; Edward Jenkins, 2nd vice president; John Leighton, 3rd vice president; Wm. George Jenkins, secretary; John McMaster, treasurer; John Lundy, captain; Wesley Smith, Robert Neil, George Leighton, jr., executive committee. The Rangers will play the first match this year at Mono Centre against the club of that place. The club is open for challenges.

CAMILLA.

Mr. Joseph Howard spent last week at Dundalk visiting his sister, Mrs. T. Lahings.

Business is remarkably dull around Camilla, and I send you this to let you know that we are alive and kicking.

A new firm will soon open out here, as one of our prominent business men is about taking in a "partner." The firm's name will be made known shortly.

Mr. Ritchie has again returned to Camilla, and is making his headquarters at Hotel Morrison, it being the most convenient place for his many patrons.

It is something wonderful the renovation that is going on at Camilla. There is hardly a house that has not been painted and fixed up by that tres pressible artist, Joy Honesty and Liberty Lewis.

SALEM.

Mr. Wm. Woodland of the 2nd line met with a serious loss a few days ago by the death of a 3 year old colt valued at $125.

Mr. James Woodland has completed his portion of the census taking business and has settled down to farming again.

Boating is a favorite pastime in this vicinity. Sam Island, who frequently indulges in this recreation in the evenings, has been repairing his boat and erecting sails thereon. Sam finds that his whole attention is required for other matters which will not permit him to use the oars.

Contractor Bob has been negotiating with Sir Richard de Faloon for the past few weeks with a view of forming a partnership to control the stone and mortar business. A later despatch says that the negotiations have resulted satisfactorily and their shingle has been hung out. A lot of contracts are expected.

In a previous issue of THE SUN a Salem correspondent made some reference to the detective being engaged by Bill Norsworth to secure for himself the position of an undisputed suitor for the hand of a third line belle. All we have to say now is to credit the detective with wonderful ability and sharpness as the baby lovers can now roam the verdant meadows and beautiful groves in the sight of his once formidable rival without fear of molestation.

BORN WHITE, DIED BLACK.

NEW YORK, May 18.—Harry Welch, a white man, whose skin had turned black, and whose case had been watched with the greatest interest by the physicians at the Presbyterian Hospital, where he has been since May 6, died at that institution yesterday.

About the first of the present year Welch began to have severe intermittent pains in his stomach, and several physicians to whom he applied could give him no relief. Then he commenced to feel constantly languid and to assume a bilious look. In January his skin turned yellow, as though from jaundice. This continued until Welch might easily have been mistaken for a quadroon. Six weeks later he had the appearance of a mulatto.

His case was diagnosed by doctors as hypertrophic cirrhosis, or liver disease. He entered the hospital May 6 and after that continued to grow darker in color. When he died yesterday his entire skin was black. His two little girls, who arrived at the hospital yesterday with their grandmother one hour after their father's death, are remarkably pretty children and as white as the offspring of any white people. The dead man's little sons are as white as their sisters.

The disease of which Welch died was seated in the gall duct, which connects the gall bladder with the liver, which in turn is supplied with the bile necessary for digestion. The gall duct is very small, and in passing through the duct the gall stone sometimes tears the walls of the duct, causing great pain. In Welch's case the physicians say the gall stone became lodged in the duct, and the bile not being able to flow through the duct, was forced through the system, producing jaundice and changing the color [illegible]

Some leather's mean. Some workmen are mean. Some shoe-sellers are mean. That's how mean shoes get made and sold.

Six out of every ten pairs of shoes are shams—pasted stock, "pancakes." Bits of useless leather are pressed and made into insoles, just as bits of useless wool are carded with long cotton and made into shoddy.

Never was a time when shoes looked so well and were so badly, until the shoeing of a whole family has come to be a serious task. There's no reason for mean shoes. Some shopkeepers see a reason for them in their cheapness, but if that's so, the meaner they're made, the better. (The wearer wouldn't tolerate that reason for a moment). The only room for them is the room they usurp, and the saving is a saving at the spigot to waste at the bung.

And the remedy?

There's a store where you can't buy shoddy shoes, because they don't sell them; where they have neither two prices nor two names for the same thing; where American kid doesn't pass for French, and machine sewed doesn't masquerade as hand-sewed.

It's here. None but the best at the lowest prices, though best only means with what restrictions of price that're necessary.

For the men there's a good seamless Bal. for $1.75, and a better at $2.50 good enough to get married in. For the ladies here's some nice Dongola Shoes, Bals. and Button'd, at $2.75, the J. D. K. make (none better), as well as Toe Slippers at 85c., and Dong. Oxfords at $1.25, with childrens' shoes galore. There's no better for the money anywhere. We don't know how to sell "poor" shoes. More than that, we don't want to know.

You can get a Lady's fine Button Boot of us at 90c. a pair.

GRAND VALLEY.

(Star.)

Mr. John King lost a valuable young horse on Saturday. Cause, a heating in the stable.

Although the McKinley bill has not driven us out of the egg trade of Waldemar. That town's enterprising dealer, Mr. Johnston, has contracted to supply a firm this season, and is paying 14 cents a dozen this week.

At the station Wednesday on the arrival of the 11 o'clock train, Rev. Mr. Hill's horse, which was attached to a buggy, took fright, and breaking loose ran into collision with the 'bus, damaging the 'bus, the buggy, and breaking the harness to pieces got clear from the rig and ran to the village. No lives lost.

AFFAIRS IN ALLISTON.

Alliston's business street will not have a very prepossessing appearance this summer. Make-shift stores are the order of the day. The main street is being lined with anything in the shape of buildings that will answer for the storing of goods. The fire limit bylaw has been declared a dead letter for the term of one year. It is safe to say that within a year or two the town will be built upon a superior style. The relief fund is growing rapidly, still considerable distress prevails notwithstanding there is plenty of work. The telegraph and express offices were opened for business Saturday and it will be but a few days till nearly all the merchants are again doing business.

Consumption and Lung Difficulties.

Always arise from particles of corrupt matter deposited in the air cells, by impure blood. Purify that stream of life and it will very soon carry off and destroy the poisonous matter, and like a crystal river flowing through a desert, will bring with it and leave throughout that lonely the elements of fertility in its course, causes the before barren waste to bloom with flowers and fruit, so pure blood causes the frame to rejoice in strength and health, and bloom with unfading beauty All Medicine Dealers sell Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

CAUGHT A BABY ON HIS HOOK

GARAFRAXA, May 17.—While J. Carpenter, and W. C. Spray were fishing off the dock at the old woolen mill the former's hook caught on something very heavy, and on landing it it was found to be a parcel securely tied, attached to which was a large stone. The parcel had two wrappers of paper, and inside, wrapped in linen some time. I had to sell my produce in that way and pay $3 a barrel for salt, $4 a pound for tea, 12½ cents for molasses sugar, 20 cents a yard for calico, and other things in proportion. We may not be as well off as we should be, but it is our own fault. We get double the price for what we sell, and that in cash, and what we buy we get at about half the price we paid in good old free trade times. The modern times are good enough for me."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It is reported that Sir. John Macdonald will visit England after the session. At all events, he will not summer at Rideau Lodge, as he has rented his residence there to Judge Gwynne, of the Supreme court.

DELEGATES from all parts of Ontario are at Ottawa to-day to urge the government to refund the whole or part of the amount of bonuses granted to railways years ago. Mr. W. L. Walsh, mayor of Orangeville, is chairman of the deputation, and we sincerely hope success will crown the deputation's efforts.

IT must not be very pleasant to Sir Richard Cartwright and other Reform leaders to hear Grit journals admit that Canada is doing business at the old stand without the help of the great American republic. Last week's Harriston Tribune (Grit) says: The McKinley bill does not seem to strike terror to the hearts of our business men so far as eggs go, for nearly every man you meet is buying eggs. We have one wholesale dealer who visits the neighboring towns and villages and handles vast quantities, then we have about 40 men who buy and ship direct to Toronto, and these persons continue to ignore the McKinley bill by paying 10 cents a dozen, and Harriston is a Grit town too. There is something wrong about this.

AGES OF SOME POLITICIANS.

While the parties are talking of their "Grand Old Men" it is interesting to look into the ages of various statesmen. Sir John Macdonald, who is seventy-six, is a year younger than Sir Adam Archibald, who sat for Colchester in the last Parliament. He is Mr. Mowat's senior by only five years, and Mr. Mowat, at seventy one, is a year older than Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Donald Smith. These two knights have the advantage of Mr. Mackenzie by one year, and Mr. Mackenzie is a year older than Mr. Mackenzie Bowell. Mr. Bowell is a year older than Mr. Peter Mitchell and Mr. A. C. Jones, and these two gentlemen are two years older than Sir Hector Langevin. Mr. McGreevy is sixty-four, a year younger than Sir Hector, and of the same age as Mr. Colby, who is a year older than Mr. Carling. Mr Charlton is the junior of Mr. Carling by one year, and Mr. Mills is sixty. Sir Richard Cartwright, Mr. Dewdney and Mr. Costigan are fifty-six, while Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Haggart are fifty-five. Mr. Cook first saw the world during the troubles of 1837, and is consequently fifty four. Mr. Patterson, of Brant, is fifty two, Mr. Clapham is fifty one, and Mr. Laurier fifty. Mr. Curran is forty nine, Sir Adolphe Caron forty-eight, Sir John Thompson forty seven, Mr. L. H. Davies, of Prince Edward Island, forty-six, and Mr. Foster forty four. Mr C. H. Tupper, the Minister of Marine, is the juvenile of politics. He is but thirty six. Mr. Tupper was a baby in his arms when his father was first elected in the Nova Scotia Legislature.

GHOULS AT THEIR WORK.

CORNWALL, May 15.—The body of the late Mr. P. Purcell, ex M P for Glengarry and millionaire contractor, has been taken from its resting place. As a man named Loney was passing the burying ground at Flanagan's point in a row boat about noon to-day he noticed that the grave of the late Mr Purcell had been disturbed. He rowed to the shore and found the lid of the coffin on the ground beside the grave and the body gone. He immediately gave the alarm. Word reached here about 2 o'clock and Mr. John Purcell, brother of the deceased, immediately drove down to the Point and found that the ghouls had removed all the earth from the grave, torn the top off the rough box and removed the lid from the coffin. This they threw to one side and dragged the body from the grave to the river, where their boat was evidently anchored. A narrow footprint, about a number right, is the only clue left. A boat was found floating down the river near the Point this morning on which was painted the name "Ellen." Detectives in Montreal were immediately wired for and will arrive to-night to work up the case. The body was interred on the 5th inst., and it is the general impression that the "snatchers" expect a large reward for its return. A strict watch had been kept on the grave until last night, when all fears of a removal of the corpse were lulled. On Wednesday night two men entered the graveyard and were in the act of approaching the grave when the guard called a halt, saying, "Leave immediately, or I will shoot." They at once withdrew.

While splitting wood James Homer, Newmarket, raised a blister on his hand. No attention was paid to it until a day or two after, when his hand commenced to swell and the swelling continued to the elbow. A doctor was called in, and after treating it for two days pronounced it a case of blood poisoning. Just a week after spliting the wood Mr. Homer was a corpse.

most hearty, sincerely, but it is only when they happen near home that we fully realize their awfulness. A thrill of horror and regret ran through this town yesterday morning when the news reached here that the way-freight on the Orangeville branch of the G. P. R. between here and West Toronto Junction had been ditched and that the driver and fireman, a stranger and probably others had lost their lives in the wreck.

The train was in charge of Conductor Wm. Rooks, and Driver Robert Johnson and Fireman James Ferguson were on the engine. It was between 7 and 8 p.m. and on the down run that the terrible crash took place. When a short distance below Claypshville and while running at a fair rate of speed on a down grade the engine struck a new block lying on the track, and in an instant the whole machine left the rail, toppled over and buried beneath it the engineer and his mate. Johnson met instant death, while Ferguson lingered about half an hour before his spirit winged its flight. Riding on the engine at the time of the accident was a stranger, who, it seems, had missed the regular train and was taking this means of reaching home. He, too, was instantly killed.

After striking the obstruction the locomotive ran several hundred yards on the ties before turning over, but when it did leave the road it dug several ears over the embankment. Wm. P. Little, one of the brakemen, was riding next to a flat car loaded with stone, and when the engine left the track he was thrown off, a number of the great stones falling on him and crushing his right foot. W. G. White, another brakeman, was on top of a box car. He was thrown forward and received a number of ugly cuts on the left leg and several bruises on other parts of the body. These two men were sent to Toronto on the 9.30 train and immediately taken to the hospital, where it was found necessary to amputate Little's leg. White is in a very precarious condition, but it is thought that he will recover. The brakemen are positive that all the brakes were applied except the one on the flat car, but the steep grade made it utterly impossible to stop the train.

"Bob" Johnson, the engineer, was one one of the best known drivers on the road. He belonged to a family of railroaders, having two brothers on the C.P.R. and one a driver on the Trunk. He worked at the railway business from his boyhood up, and his sudden death created great excitement among his many friends along the line. His wife, who was a daughter of James Keyes, died some time ago. He leaves one child, who is living with friends in Orangeville. He was about 28 years of age.

James Ferguson, the fireman, was 27 years old and was a native of Orangeville, being the second son of Mr. James Ferguson, painter. He was an exemplary young man and was steadily working his way up in the confidence of the railway authorities. His parents have the heartfelt sympathy of every one in this section, where the family is well and favorably known.

W. G. White, the injured brakeman, lives at West Toronto Junction and is 25 years of age. He has been employed on the road for about three years. Little, the other brakeman, has only been on the road two weeks and is 21 years old. He was raised in the township of Mono, his home being near the village of Rosemont. Rumor has it that Little died in the hospital yesterday, but up to the hour of going to press the report has not been verified.

The bodies of Johnson and Ferguson were brought to Orangeville on Wednesday evening's train, and were met at the station by hundreds of sympathizing citizens. The funerals will take place this afternoon.

WILL BOYCOTT US.

Altonites Take Offence at our Visitors.

To the Editor of The Sun.

SIR.—We, the people of Alton, are naturally good and mad at the citizens of your town for getting up a counter attraction for the Queen's birthday. You have your big day on the 1st of July, and, of course, we all go to Orangeville then, but this year it will be quite different, and for a very good reason. Here we have gone to the trouble and expense of getting up a good programme for the 24th, confidently counting upon the support of your citizens, at least that portion of them who do not prefer Shelburne, Grand Valley or some other of the adjacent burgs, and what do we find? Why, off go a few more or less prominent townsmen and make arrangements with the Scarlet Corps of uniformed Orangemen of Toronto to visit your town on that day, thus virtually killing Alton's celebration, for what village could hope to compete with you in the face of 1,200 or 1,500 richly uniformed and splendidly drilled "Rising Sons of William?" We feel that we have not been fairly dealt with, and in the present temper of our people it is just possible we may get up a counter demonstration to your Dominion day celebration. Yours, etc., AJAX.

[Ajax is laboring under a misapprehension of facts, and as a somewhat similar wail reaches us from Shelburne, we will just state for the benefit of the jealous ones that the first our citizens knew of the proposed visit of Toronto Orangemen was when a committee came here to arrange for the reception of their brethren. We would be chumps, Ajax, to refuse to receive the visitors, and we would be "base ingrates" should we fail to receive them right royally. As for the 1st of July, we are arranging such a programme of attractions that you will be unable to stay away even though the bottom should drop clean out of your little town. We will expect you here on both occasions, and also on the 13th of June, when a thousand Sons of Ireland will be up from the city.—ED.]

No trace of the cruel parents who abandoned their baby at the "Rossin" last week has yet been found. The child is at Fergus.

The fire department is at present equipped with 600 feet of hose, 300 feet having been destroyed at the recent fire. Last Monday 250 feet more were ordered.

Wm. Graham has been summoned to appear at Saturday's police court to answer to a charge of receiving 50 cents from Joseph Lathwell under false pretences.

Adair, the photographer, is noted for his beautifully finished photographs. All sizes and the newest styles. Studio over Young Bros.' hardware store, West Broadway.

Yesterday morning a farmer named Samuel Lindsey laid an information before F. M. Pattullo against John Gilkinson for assault. The case will be heard at the police court next Wednesday.

Mr. H. Savage, the well-known cattle dealer, purchased two carloads of cattle from the Northwest one day last week and in turn disposed of them to Wright Bros., butchers. The drove numbered 50 head.

James Montgomery, who resides in the outskirts of the town, has been invited (per summons) to call at P. M Pattullo's justice shop and explain why he let three pigs run on the streets contrary to law.

At the assizes last Thursday the grand jury found "no bill" in the case of Bill Elder, who was committed to stand his trial for stealing timber from property in Mono belonging to W. A. Cesar, of this town. Bill used to own the farm some months ago, but it was sold under a mortgage, Mr. Cesar purchasing it. It is more than likely Bill will give the premises a wide berth now.

VISITING SCOTLAND.—On Monday last Mr. John Aiken, sr., left town for Scotland, to spend a few months with relatives in the old land. Mr. Aiken sailed from Montreal on Wednesday, per s.s. Parisian. We wish him a pleasant trip.

BLACK KNOT.—Attention should be paid to the black knot on plum and cherry trees. At this season all diseased trees should be destroyed in order that those not already affected may be saved. Any owner or occupant who allows any black knot to remain on any plum or cherry tree shall be liable to a fine of not less than $5 nor more than $20.

LAILA.—The beautiful operetta "Laila" will be given in the town hall on the evening of May 28th. About forty persons will take part, and there is no doubt that lovers of drama will be pleased with it. Do not miss the treat. Doors open at 7 30 o'clock. Performances to begin at 8. Admission 25c.; children 15c. Proceeds in aid of St. Mark's church spire fund.

THE ENGINEER WED.—On Wednesday afternoon of last week Mr. James Pickering, engineer at the waterworks, was joined in the bonds of matrimony to Miss Elizabeth A. Woodland of this town. Rev. A. Henderson, pastor of St. Mark's church tied the silken knot in the presence of a few friends of the contracting parties at the residence of the bride's mother, Wellington street. THE SUN extends its greetings.

PLEASANT EVENT.—A very pleasant event took place at the residence of Mr. Alex. Struthers, Owen Sound, on Wednesday, the 13th inst., when his third eldest daughter, Miss Alexandria, was married to Mr. Frederick J. King, of the furniture firm of F. J. King & Co., of Orangeville. The happy couple received the congratulations of a large circle of friends and left by the evening train for Niagara Falls. We wish them a pleasant honeymoon.

IMPORTANT ANNIVERSARIES.—Few persons perhaps are aware of the fact that next year is one of very significant celebrations. It is the twenty-fifth anniversary of Canadian confedeation; the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of responsible government; the one hundredth anniversary of the assembly of the first parliament of Upper and Lower Canada; the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Montreal, and the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus.

WAS IT INCENDIARISM?—Between 5 and 6 o'clock Sunday evening smoke was seen issuing from Mr. T. N. Williamson's stable, just east of the post-office. Fortunately the blaze was extinguished in time to prevent another conflagration, for had it got properly started nothing would have stopped the flames. Whether the fire was the work of an incendiary or an accident will probably remain a mystery. The fact that no coal oil was used and the early hour at which the fire started point to it as being the result of an accident. The police, however, are keeping a stricter watch than usual.

results of public gatherings, loafing in any citizens, will be severely dealt with hereafter. No standing around on street or street corners will be allowed, except under lawful privileges and under unavoidable circumstances; and to further the object, it might be well for parents to induce their children to attend church and ministers advise parents accordingly.

THE ARTHUR MAN KICKS.—Township councils display an economy amounting to niggardliness when they incorporate their lists of pound keepers, fence viewers, pathmasters, etc., dates of court of revision and other meetings, in the reports of minutes of meetings which are published free by the local press. Such matter is paid advertising and should be paid for as such. We presume if the law would allow it the council Mono would be hushed up to the minutes and printed gratis. What printing is paid for is in many instances done at starvation rates, and the councils should not expect too much for anything even from printers, who are proverbially a wealthy as well as a generous class.—Arthur Enterprise.

SAD DEATH.—Entered into rest Sunday, May 10th, Hannah J., youngest daughter of Mrs. Speirs, Erin. Miss Speirs' illness had been brief, and the announcement of her sudden death at the early age of 22 is deeply deplored by the whole community. Of retiring, gentle and unselfish disposition, Miss Speirs was a general favorite, and will be much missed from the home and church circles, where she proved herself a devoted member. The people of Erin again extend their deep sympathy to the grief stricken mother and sisters in these severe and repeated trials, this being the third member of the family in fourteen months. Miss Speirs resided in Orangeville for some time, being employed in the tailor shop of W. J. Johnston, late of this town.

"ENTERPRISING" CITIZENS.—Orangeville can boast of having more than her share of enterprising merchants and hotelkeepers, but some are too enterprising for anything. Two or three weeks ago a Toronto fakir made one of his periodical visits to Orangeville soliciting orders for printing billheads, letterheads, envelopes, etc., and, as usual, took a number of orders which should have been given to the local papers. There are three printing offices in this town capable of doing all the work in this particular line that the merchants and others want, and the work is done just as well and just as cheap as any city office can execute it. A newspaper does more than any other institution to advance the interests of a town, and the merchant who sends his printing to foreign offices is doing the very thing which he would be the first to object to were we to import our groceries, drygoods, etc.

CENTRAL CLAIMS COSTIGAN.

He Will Serve One Year in That Institution.

Joseph Costigan, the emigrant forger and thief, who has been fully reported in previous issues of THE SUN, was sentenced by Judge Street at the assizes last Thursday to one year's imprisonment in the Central prison, Toronto. Turnkey Charles Bowles will accompany Costigan thither some day next week.

PERSONAL.

Mayor Walsh and Dr. Lewis are in Ottawa.

Mr. John Paisley, of Toronto, was in town last week.

Mrs. Alex. Cotton, of Bellwood, is visiting friends in town.

Mr. Lacey of the Hillsburg Banner gave THE SUN a pleasant call last Thursday.

Mr. R. Patterson, of Caledon, an old subscriber to THE SUN, gave us a call on Saturday.

Mr. W. J. Price, formerly of this town, has settled at Malta, Man. He reports business booming out there.

Mr. Fred Strutt, of Queen street east, has sold his brick residence to Dr. Corbett, of Toronto, late of Orangeville. We understand the doctor intends retiring from his profession and making Brampton his home.—Banner.

Kirkland, Chatham, Ontario and Africa are found each around the "green (?) table."

ACCOUNTS

from J. J. Hubbard, $2; W. Fremlin, 75c.; R. Parkin, $5; D. G. Lamont, $36; H. Haley, $31; J. Graham, $24; R. W. Kidney, $1.65, were found correct and ordered to be paid; H. N. Young & Bros., $13.20, was referred to the F. & W. committee.

A communication from P. S. Inspector Gordon was read, asking that the town hall be placed at the disposal of the Dufferin Teachers' Association, which meets here on the 11th and 12th of June. The council very properly complied with his request.

Another communication asking the free use of the town hall was received from J. S. Leighton. The Orange hall tallies, which comes here on the 25th, will attract it for dancing, etc.

DAMAGES.

Hugh Haley, per communication, drew the attention of the council to the state of affairs on his property. The flood of last June carried away a portion of his lot and later on the council built a breakwater. The latter was damaged some time ago, and the town has not repaired it. Now Mr. Haley asks that it be repaired forthwith and that the council pay him $60 damages. The R. & B. will effect a settlement.

NO MONEY TO INVEST.

Several communications were received from sewer pipe and waterworks companies and were tabled. But the most amusing communication was from a firm offering the town a safe investment for its money—as if this town had any surplus cash! The communication was hustled under the table in quick order.

WE WANT WATERWORKS.

The city of Belleville wants to sell off its stock of fire engines, and asked us to purchase one, but as the town don't want anything in that line the epistle was dropped on the table.

MORE SUPLIES.

Chairman Gillespie brought in the report of the F. & W. committee and the council went into committee of the whole. After being slightly amended the report was adopted. It recommended the purchase of 250 feet of rubber hose at $1.15 per foot, 1 siamese coupling at $10, 1 play pipe at $17, 2 nozzles at $2.50, 1 controling nozzle at $10, ½ doz. hose straps at $9, 3 axes at $6, and the payment of a number of accounts. Previous to the adoption of the report Mr. Fair, an agent of the rubber company, addressed the council as to the quality of his goods.

R. AND B. MATTERS.

Ald. Adamson read two reports of the R. & B. committee. The first gave Contractor Armstrong power to run a drain along Mill street to the creek, and the second recommended that the tenders of Mr. U. Penalton for cedar scantling at $10 per M. and D. McDonald, for pine plank at $14 per M. be accepted. The reports were adopted.

NO SPUR-LINE YET.

Ald. Ketchum, chairman of the special committee appointed to enquire into the quarry spur line business, reported that action be deferred until the C. P.R. authorities are consulted. Adopted.

A NEW FIRE HALL.

Deputy reeve Endacott, chairman of the T. P. committee, read a report which stated that the insurance on the waterworks buildings had been paid by the companies. The amounts allowed were: Waterworks building and engine house, $610; engines, $20; hose, $285; bell tower, $447; bell $700, and the old bell. A sketch of a new building was submitted. It is proposed to tear the present building down and erect a more modern edifice. The committee was instructed to get plans and specifications prepared and call for tenders. The cost is estimated at $2,500.

SHELBURNE.

(From Press and Economist.)

On Saturday last Mr. Bracken, of the 4th line, Amaranth, had his barn destroyed by fire, catching from a bush fire near by. We have not received particulars as to loss.

One night last week the frame barn and stables belonging to D. McCoy, on the back line of Melancthon, were destroyed by fire, together with a threshing machine and other articles. The house, a log building and unoccupied, was also burned. The buildings and contents were insured.

About three o'clock Saturday afternoon the log dwelling house belonging to John Hurlburt, lot 14, con. 5, S.W. Melancthon, was found to be on fire. The men were away from home at the time, and only a very small portion of the contents of the house were saved. The log barn and stables were also consumed, together with one cow, four calves, some pigs, about forty hens, and all the farming implements. Mr. Hurlburt's loss is a very serious one to him, as he had very little insurance.

Subscriptions are being raised among the business men and property owners on Main street for the purpose of raising funds to employ a night watchman. We understand that John Anderson, who has charge of the electric lighting, is to be the person selected for the work, having offered to patrol the streets from 11 p.m. (at which hour the lights are extinguished) until daylight, nightly, for the term of five months, for the sum of $75. The idea is a good one, and we hope to see it carried out. We have been informed since the above was written that Mr. Anderson commenced making his rounds on Tuesday night.

Exercise of the muscles is necessary for the proper development of the human system, but unfortunately carrying water, cutting wood, working in the garden, or running family errands is not half as popular with the average boy just now as carrying a big bamboo pole around the country on fishing expeditions.

Orange Protestant. It appears that in lieu of a witnesses, while the defence didn't produce a solitary one. The judge's charge was dead against the prisoner, and this accounted for the rapid manner in which the jury arrived at its conclusion. When the grand jury was inquiring into the case twelve round came finding a true bill and thirteen for.

On Thursday morning his lordship Mr. Justice Street sentenced the prisoner to three years in the provincial penitentiary at Kingston, and he will probably be taken there next week. A great deal of sympathy is expressed for Kirkland on account of his age, as he has already passed the alloted three score and ten years.

CARDWELL.

One of our estimable young men, who resides on a corner farm near here, has kicked of his bachelor shoes and joined the benedict club. A fair lady from Blount is the other partner in the transaction. Full particulars next week.

The celebrated Cardwell exponents of football, the Rangers, have revived, and the club is reorganized for the season of '91, when they intend to make a record for themselves. The following officials are in charge: W. E. Hall, honorary-president; Hugh Braiden, honorary vice-president; Joseph Leighton, president; Wm Jackson, 1st vice-president; Edward Jenkins, 2nd vice president; John Leighton, 3rd vice president; Wm. George Jenkins, secretary; John McMaster, treasurer; John Lundy, captain; Wesley South, Robert Neil, George Leighton, jr., executive committee. The Rangers will play the first match this year at Mono Centre against the club of that place. The club is open for challenges.

CAMILLA.

Mr. Joseph Howard spent last week at Dundalk visiting his sister, Mrs. T. Lakings.

Business is remarkably dull around Camilla, and I send you this to let you know that we are alive and kicking.

A new firm will soon open out here, as one of our prominent business men is about taking in a "partner." The firm's name will be made known shortly.

Mr. Ritchie has again returned to Camilla, and is making his headquarters at Hotel Morrison, it being the most convenient place for his many patrons.

It is something wonderful the renovation that is going on at Camilla. There is hardly a house that has not been painted and fixed up by that irrepressible artist, Joy Honesty and Liberty Lewis.

SALEM.

Mr. Wm. Woodland of the 2nd line met with a serious loss a few days ago by the death of a 3 year old colt valued at $125.

Mr. James Woodland has completed his portion of the census taking business and has settled down to farming again.

Boating is a favorite pastime in this vicinity. Sam Island, who frequently indulges in this recreation in the evenings, has been repairing his boat and erecting seats thereon. Sam finds that his whole attention is required for other matters which will not permit him to use the oars.

Contractor Bob has been negotiating with Sir Richard de Faloon for the past few weeks with a view of forming a partnership to control the stone and mortar business. A later despatch says that the negotiations have resulted satisfactorily and their shingle has been hung out. A lot of contracts are expected.

In a previous issue of THE SUN a Salem correspondent made some reference to the detective being engaged by Bill Norsworth to secure for himself the position of an undisputed suitor for the hand of a third line belle. All we have to say now is to credit the detective with wonderful ability and sharpness as the baby lovers can now roam the verdant meadows and beautiful groves in the sight of his ones formidable rival without fear of molestation.

BORN WHITE, DIED BLACK.

NEW YORK, May 18.—Harry Welch, a white man, whose skin had turned black, and whose case had been watched with the greatest interest by the physicians at the Presbyterian Hospital, where he has been since May 6, died at that institution yesterday.

About the first of the present year Welch began to have severe intermittent pains in his stomach, and several physicians to whom he applied could give him no relief. Then he commenced to feel constantly languid and to assume a bilious look. In January his skin turned yellow, as though from jaundice. This continued until Welch might easily have been mistaken for a quadroon. Six weeks later he had the appearance of a mulatto.

His case was diagnosed by doctors as hypertrophic cirrhosis, or liver disease. He entered the hospital May 6 and after that continued to grow darker in color. When he died yesterday his entire skin was black. His two little girls, who arrived at the hospital yesterday with their grandmother one hour after their father's death, are remarkably pretty children and as white as the offspring of any white people. The dead man's little sons are as white as their sisters.

The disease of which Welch died was seated in the gall duct, which connects the gall bladder with the liver, which in turn is supplied with the bile necessary for digestion. The gall duct is very small, and in passing through the duct the gall stone sometimes tears the walls of the duct, causing great pain. In Welch's case the physicians say the gall stone became lodged in the duct, and the bile not being able to flow through the duct, was forced through the system, producing jaundice and changing the color [illegible]

Orangeville, May 6th.

Some leather's mean. Some workmen are mean. Some shoe sellers are mean. That's how mean shoes get made and sold.

Six out of every ten pairs of shoes are shams—pasted stock, "pancakes." Bits of useless leather are pressed and made into insoles, just as bits of useless wool are carded with long cotton and made into shoddy.

Never was a time when shoes looked so well and were so badly, until the shoeing of a whole family has come to be a serious task. There's no reason for mean shoes. Some shopkeepers see a reason for them in their cheapness, but if that's so, the meanner they're made, the better. (The wearer wouldn't tolerate that reason for a moment). The only room for them is the room they usurp, and the saving is a saving at the spigot to waste at the bung.

And the remedy?

There's a store where you can't buy shoddy shoes, because they don't sell them; where they have neither two prices nor two names for the same thing; where American kid doesn't pass for French, and machine sewed doesn't masquerade as hand-sewed.

It's here. None but the best at the lowest prices, though beat only means with what restrictions of price that're necessary.

For the men there's a good seamless Bal. for $1.75, and a better at $2 50, good enough to get married in. For the ladies here's some nice Dongola Shoes, Bals. and Button'd, at $2.75, the J. D. K. make (none better), as well as Toe Slippers at 85c., and Dong. Oxfords at $1.25, with childrens' shoes galore. There's no better for the money anywhere. We don't know how to sell "poor" shoes. More than that, we don't want to know.

You can get a Lady's fine Button Boot of us at 90c. a pair.

ATHLONE.

The license commissioners have granted a license to Mr. Keenan. The hotel is well conducted.

The funeral of the late John Kidd took place on Friday, the 8th instant, to St. James' cemetery, and was the largest that ever took place in the country, 235 vehicles being in the cortege, showing the esteem in which the deceased was held.

GRAND VALLEY.

(Times.)

Although the McKinley bill has not [illegible] affected the egg trade of Waldemar. That town's enterprising dealer, Mr. Johnston, has contracted to supply a firm this season, and is paying 14 cents a dozen this week.

At the station Wednesday on the arrival of the 11 o'clock train, Rev. No lives lost.

AFFAIRS IN ALLISTON.

Alliston's business street will not have a very prepossing appearance this summer. Make-shift stores are the order of the day. The main street is being lined with anything in the shape of buildings that will answer for the storing of goods. The fire limit bylaw has been declared a dead letter for the term of one year. It is safe to say that within a year or two the town will be built upon a superior style. The relief fund is growing rapidly, still considerable distress prevails notwithstanding there is plenty of work. The telegraph and express offices were opened for business Saturday and it will be but a few days till nearly all the merchants are again doing business.

Consumption and Lung Difficulties.

Always arose from particles of corrupt matter deposited in the air cells, by impure blood. Purify that stream of life and it will very soon carry off and destroy the poisonous matter, and like a crystal river flowing through a desert, will bring with it and leave throughout the body the elements of fertility in its course, causes the before barren waste to bloom with flowers and fruit, so pure blood restores the frame to rejoice in strength and health and bloom with unfading beauty. All Medicine Dealers sell Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

A BABY ON HIS HOOK

SARANOQUE, May 17.—While J. Carpenter, and W. U. Spray were fishing off the dock at the old woolen mill the former's hook caught on something very heavy, and on hauling it it was found to be a parcel securely tied, attached to which was a large stone. The parcel had two wrappers of paper, and inside, wrapped in linen, was the body of an infant. The babe was wrapped in copies of the Toronto World of May 7 and Empire of May 6. A post mortem showed that the child was born alive and healthy, and had evidently been smothered. The manner in which the deed was done up—first a covering of linen securely pinned, then newspapers and lastly a wrapper of course paper—points to it as the work of a woman.

A TIMID BRIDEGROOM.

NIAGARA FALLS, May 17.—An amiable couple from Thorold, who put up at the Keating house on Tuesday, experienced considerable difficulty in getting married. The young man, who is said to be a blood relation of the great Van Horne of the Canadian Pacific fame, shortly after arrival here, was taken sick and fainted in the hallway, and the blushing and expectant bride was almost frantic in anticipation of a postponement to such an extent that she threatened to throw herself over the river bank. Two physicians were called in who relieved the sufferings of the young swain. Finally, supported by the doctors, backed up by friends, encouraged by the minister, the ceremony was concluded and the presiding physician claimed the first kiss of congratulation.

ENDACOTT BROS.

Convict Hall a notorious safe-breaker, escaped from Stoney Mountain penitentiary, Manitoba, on Wednesday night, beyond doubt the worst crook on the list. He was sentenced about years ago for a term of eight years for blowing up the Hudson Bay Co's safe at Portage la Prairie. He came here he has been a constant source of trouble to his guards. How he escaped and where he has gone are equally mysterious, but those who know him say that he is not the man to be easily captured. Numerous efforts are being made to recapture him. It is stated that in making his escape through one particular door he had to battle against a drop of thirty feet on the hard rock below but that was a trifle compared to some of his feats in accomplishing his escapes.

Pale and sallow girls and prematurely aged women should use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They come as a boon and a blessing to all those who are afflicted with any form of the female complaints. Build up the blood, restore shattered nerves and constitutions, bring back the roses to the cheeks by dealers, or sent post paid on receipt of price—50c per box, or five boxes for $2.50—by addressing Dr. Williams' Med. One day last week four cattle belonging to the estate of the late Walter Lovell, of Minto, died very suddenly. A vet. was called to attend the last one that died. After death he opened the stomach and found a quantity of red lead. The premises were examined, and it was found that the painters who had been painting the buildings had left a quantity of red lead in the shed, which the cattle had got hold of. The loss will be heavy, as they were all fine animals.

Caught in a Shaft.

A FREQUENT source of accident is found in shafting. Great care should be used and a supply of Hagyard's Yellow Oil kept on hand in case of wounds, bruises, strains, burns or scalds. It is the prompt and sure reliever obtainable.

THE BEST FAMILY PILL IN USE

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS

Keep the Works in good order.

NORMAN, Ont., January 13, 1890.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time-piece: frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but wait you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.

Yours faithfully,
H. F. ATWELL.

AFFAIRS IN ALLISTON.

Alliston's business street will not have a very prepossing appearance this summer. Make-shift stores are the order of the day. The main street is being lined with anything in the shape of buildings that will answer for the storing of goods. The fire limit bylaw has been declared a dead letter for the term of one year. It is safe to say that within a year or two the town will be built upon a superior style. The relief fund is growing rapidly, still considerable distress prevails notwithstanding there is plenty of work. The telegraph and express offices were opened for business Saturday and it will be but a few days till nearly all the merchants are again doing business.

Consumption and Lung Difficulties.

Always arise from particles of corrupt matter deposited in the air cells, by impure blood. Purify that stream of life and it will very soon carry off and destroy the poisonous matter, and like a crystal river flowing through a desert, will bring with it and leave throughout the body the elements of fertility in its course, causes the before barren waste to bloom with flowers and fruit, so pure blood renews the frames to rejoice in strength and vigour, and bloom with unfading beauty. All Medicine Dealers sell Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

T A BABY ON HIS HOOK

GANANOQUE, May 17.—While J. Carpenter, and W. C. Spray were fishing off the dock at the old woolen mill this former's hook caught on something very heavy, and on landing it it was found to be a parcel securely tied, attached to which was a large stone. The parcel had two wrappers of paper, and inside, wrapped in linen, was the body of an infant. The babe was wrapped in copies of the Toronto World of May 7 and Empire of May 6. A post mortem showed that the child was born alive and healthy, and had evidently been smothered. The manner in which the parcel was done up—first a covering of linen securely pinned, then newspapers and lastly a wrapper of course paper—pointed to it as the work of a woman.

A TIMID BRIDEGROOM.

NIAGARA FALLS, May 17.—An anxious couple from Thorold, who put up at the Keating House on Tuesday, experienced considerable difficulty in getting married. The young man, who is said to be a blood relation of the great Van Horne of the Canadian Pacific fame, shortly after arrival here, was taken sick and fainted in the hallway, and the blushing and expectant bride was almost frantic in anticipation of a postponement to such an extent that she threatened to throw herself over the river bank. Two physicians were called in who relieved the sufferings of the young swain. Finally, supported by the doctors, backed up by friends, encouraged by the minister, the ceremony was concluded and the presiding physician claimed the first kiss of congratulation.

ESHCOTT BROS.

Convict Hall a notorious safe-breaker, escaped from Stoney Mountain penitentiary, Manitoba, on Wednesday night, beyond doubt the worst crook on. He was sentenced about years ago for a term of eight blowing up the Hudson Bay Co's safe at Portage la Prairie. He came here he has been a constant source of trouble to his guards. How he escaped and where he has gone are equally mysterious, but those who know him say that he is not the man to be easily captured. Strenuous efforts are being made to recapture him. It is stated that in making his escape through one particular window he had to battle against a drop of thirty feet on the hard rock below, but that was a trifle compared to other feats in accomplishing his liberty.

One day last week four cattle belonging to the estate of the late Walter Ferguson, of Minto, died very suddenly. A vet. was called to attend the last one that died. After death he opened the stomach and found a quantity of lead. The premises were examined, and it was found that the painters who had been painting the buildings had left a quantity of red lead in the shed, which the cattle had got hold of. The loss will be heavy, as they were all fine animals.

A terrible case of suicide is reported from near the village of Cainsville. David Irvine, an aged farm laborer, was Monday told by his employer, Mr. D. Whitting, to go back to the house as he was too old to do hard work in the fields. The remark seemed to prey upon Irvine's mind, for when next discovered he was seated in a chair in the barn, having hacked away at both arms with a knife, until he had bled to death.

The oldest woman in Western Ontario is Mrs. McLaren, who lives with her nephew, John McLaren, almost opposite Springbank. She is now in her 102nd year, having celebrated her 101st birthday on Tuesday. Despite her advanced age she is still in good health and in the possession of all her faculties. She performs her ordinary household duties every day, and, judging from appearances, is likely to live for some time to come.

Charles Ford, alias Wm. Rudolph, the convicted murderer, who was executed at Ottawa, Ill., last Saturday, made a full confession of his crime to the prison chaplain the night before the hanging. He stated that he has a sister living at Toronto, where she kept a disreputable resort. Ford and his sister decoyed a German pedlar into their house and cruelly butchered him, the motive for the crime being robbery.

Keep the Works in good order.

NEWMAN, Ont., January 15, 1890.
W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.
DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time piece: frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but wait you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.
Yours faithfully,
H. F. ATWELL.

AFFAIRS IN ALLISTON.

Alliston's business street will not have a very prepossing appearance this summer. Make-shift stores are the order of the day. The main street is being lined with anything in the shape of buildings that will answer for the storing of goods. The fire limit bylaw has been declared a dead letter for the term of one year. It is safe to say that within a year or two the town will be built upon a superior style. The relief fund is growing rapidly, still considerable distress prevails notwithstanding there is plenty of work. The telegraph and express offices were opened for business Saturday and it will be but a few days till nearly all the merchants are again doing business.

Consumption and Lung Difficulties.

Always arise from particles of corrupt matter deposited in the air cells, by impure blood. Purify that stream of life and it will very soon carry off and destroy the poisonous matter, and like a crystal river flowing through a desert, will bring with it and leave throughout the body the elements of fertility in its course, causes the before barren waste to bloom with flowers and fruit, so pure blood causes the frame to rejoice in strength and vigor and bloom with unfading beauty. All druggists and Dealers sell Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

A BABY ON HIS HOOK

ALGONQUIN, May 17.—While J. Carpenter, and W. C. Spray were fishing off the dock at the old woolen mill the former's hook caught on something very heavy, and on landing it it was found to be a parcel securely tied, attached to which was a large stone. The parcel had two wrappers of paper, and inside, wrapped in linen, was the body of an infant. The babe was wrapped in copies of the Toronto World of May 7 and Empire of May 6. A post mortem showed that the child was born alive and healthy, and had evidently been smothered. The manner in which the parcel was done up—first a covering of linen securely pinned, then newspapers, then a wrapper of course paper—pointed to it as the work of a woman.

A TIMID BRIDEGROOM.

NIAGARA FALLS, May 17.—An anxious couple from Thorold, who put up at the Keating house on Tuesday, experienced considerable difficulty in getting married. The young man, who is said to be a blood relation of the great Van Horne of the Canadian Pacific fame, shortly after arrival here, was taken sick and fainted in the hallway, and the blushing and expectant bride was almost frantic in anticipation of a postponement to such an extent that she threatened to throw herself over the river bank. Two physicians were called in who relieved the sufferings of the young swain. Finally, supported by the doctors, backed up by friends, encouraged by the minister, the ceremony was concluded and the presiding physician claimed the first kiss of congratulation.

Convict Hall, a notorious safe-breaker, escaped from Stoney Mountain penitentiary, on Wednesday night, beyond doubt the worst crook on file. He was sentenced about years ago for a term of eight years for blowing up the Hudson Bay Co.'s safe at Portage la Prairie. He came here to have been a constant source of trouble to his guards. His escaped and where he has gone are equally mysterious, but those who know him say that he is not the man to be jailbird to be easily captured. Strenuous efforts are being made to recapture him. It is stated that in making his escape through one particular hall to battle against a drop of thirty feet on the hard rock he but that was a trifle compared to some of his feats in accomplishing his escapes.

One day last week four cattle belonging to the estate of the late Walter Lyell, of Minto, died very suddenly. A vet. was called to attend the last one that died. After death he opened the stomach and found a quantity of lead. The premises were examined, and it was found that the painters who have been painting the buildings had left a quantity of red lead in the shed, which the cattle had got hold of. The loss will be heavy, as they were all fine animals.

Caught in a Shaft.

A FREQUENT source of accident is found in shafting. Great care should be used and a supply of Hagyard's Yellow Oil kept on hand in case of wounds, bruises, cuts, burns or scalds. It is the prompteist and surest relieve obtainable.

THE BEST FAMILY PILL IN USE

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS

Keep the Works in good order.

NORMAN, Ont., January 13, 1890.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time-piece: frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adhered to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but wait you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.

Yours faithfully, H. F. ATWELL.

DEAR SIR,—For many years, I have been a firm believer in your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills." Not with a blind faith, but a confidence wrought by my own personal experience of their value and merit. My business is such that I spend much of my time away from home, and I would not consider my travelling outfit complete without a box of Morse's Pills. Yours, &c., M. R. McLEAN.

Hung out wild streamers of light!
And storm and smoke and cinders
Made dark of noon-day bright.

Some hurried to the forward,
Some stayed 'midst hiss of steam;
And news came back in whispers
That three brave men were dead.

Released from wreck of grain-cars,
The engine-driver speed
Through coaches, calling loudly:
"My dreams—is he dead?"

They brushed the damp grain off him,
And with a mingled groan
They bound his bleeding forehead,
And hushed his half-muzzled moan.

Then on the bridge we gathered,
The wreck was just below,
With two dismembered engines
Steam-choked on the snow.

A form is limed lay near them,
And some hand's kindly grace
Had spread a crumpled paper
Upon the upturned face.

We drove in thankful silence
Across the ice bound bay,
But many hearts were wrecked
O'er death's full sheet that day.

And then they sent you to me,
When all was cleared away,
Unharmed, but marred with grease stains
To remind me of that day.

A CONVICT'S RUN FOR LIBERTY.

Cobourg, May 10.—Andrew McGuire, found guilty of attempting to murder Miss Tucker by throwing her in front of a moving train at the Grand Trunk station, was sentenced by Judge Rose yesterday to imprisonment for life in Kingston Penitentiary. In sentencing the accused Judge Rose referred to the shady character borne by the prisoner, to his attempt to kill Miss Tucker's father and to his rebellious conduct while in prison, where he had assaulted and wounded several of his guards.

Judge Rose then sentenced the prisoner to the full extent of the law, viz., to be confined in this provincial penitentiary to the full extent of his natural life. He said that McGuire could not expect mercy from the higher court, and that the only time he could expect to gain his freedom was only on the demise of Miss Tucker or on the occasion of her leaving the country.

Governor Clover then took charge of his prisoners and started to convey them to the jail, 1½ miles away, using his own rig for the purpose, having first hand cuffed, as he thought securely, another prisoner named Brown, and McGuire together. When about halfway to the jail McGuire skilfully picked the lock of the handcuff and leaped from the rig, and scaling a barb wire fence made for a swamp, pursued by two constables, one of whom came to grief at the barb wire fence, having there deposited his trousers; the other constable gamely kept up the chase and captured McGuire at the edge of the swamp, where if he had entered he would have undoubtedly been safe. McGuire swam a creek and in his condition his action greatly weakened him.

A Canadian Case.

The case of Mrs. E. A. Storey, of Shetland, Ont., is remarkable proof of the efficacy of Burdock Blood Bitters in Headache. She writes: "For over 40 years I was a martyr to headache, having severe attacks about once a week. Have now used 3 bottles of B.B.B. and have had no attack for 4 or 5 months."

BANK OF ENGLAND DOORS.

The Bank of England's doors are now so finely balanced that the clerk, by pressing a knob under his desk, can close the outer doors instantly, and they cannot be opened again except by special process. This is done to prevent the daring and ingenious unemployed of the great metropolis from robbing the famous institution.

The branch department of this and other great banking establishments are nightly submerged in several feet of water by the action of the machinery.

In some of the London banks the bullion departments are connected with the manager's sleeping rooms, and an entrance cannot be effected without setting off an alarm near that person's head.

If a dishonest official during day or night, should take even as much as one from a pile of a thousand sovereigns, the whole pile would instantly sink and a total of water take its place, besides drowning every person in the establishment ... of the theft.

[illegible] persons are aware of the fact that next year is one of the very significant celebrations. It is the twenty fifth anniversary of Canadian Confederation, the ninth anniversary of the establishment of responsible government in the country, the one hundredth anniversary of the convocation of the first parliament of Upper and Lower Canada, the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Montreal, and the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus.

A remarkable instance of equine longevity comes from Greenden, 5 miles from here, where a horse belonging to Mr. Albert King died one day the past week, at the age of 37 years. The animal was useful right up to the time of death and had never been sick. Mr. King has had possession of the veteran for 25 years. Colic, induced by badly masticated food, was the cause of death. —Mt. Forest Representative.

An exchange figures up the result of a bushel of corn distilled, as follows: The distiller gets four gallons of whiskey which will retail at $16. The Government gets $3.60, the farmer gets 40 cents, the railway gets $1, the retailer $7, and the consumer gets drunk.

John Wilson, 18 years old, was flogged in Barrie jail last week for committing rape on a little girl. Twelve lashes were administrated and he will receive twelve more in June. He is an English lad, having been shipped to Canada by Dr. Barnardo.

Driven insane by the joy that followed her knowledge of having fallen heiress to $000,000 left by a wealthy relative who had died intestate, poor Martha Spencer of East Loudon, an indigent laborer's wife, was debarred by Mania from taking the fortune. Thus, while a lunatic, she actually died of starvation because her condition kept the wealth away from her.

It doesn't look well to see girls in their teens gadding around the streets after night fall with a lot of gawky youths trotting at their heels, and talking silly nonsense to them. Some parents should look after their girls a little better than they do.—Streetsville Review. This is good advice for other than Streetsville folks.

CACTUS require absolutely no care. They grow for months in the house or garden without watering, and increase in value yearly. No wonder they become all the rage, for their flowers which are of excellent beauty and fragrance, and their curious forms render them exceedingly interesting. In winter they require scarcely any water. We send by mail 10 fine plants of blooming size, each one distinct and named, for $1.00; 3 for 50c. They will please you.

Poetry.

ON THE MONTH OF MAY.

Welcome sweet May time with all thy gay decorate,
Right welcome the sunshine and sweet-scented breeze,
Right welcome the prospects portrayed in thy mirror
The wild, merry song birds, the bright waving trees.

I'm longing once more to be out on the waters,
To row up the gay, shining river again;
To feather my oar as we steer to the westward,
The sun slowly sinking, the sky all aflame.

But it never will be quite the same as last summer,
For some of the party have gone far and wide;
They are scattered abroad on life's turbulent waters,
And dashed to and fro on its swift, surging tide.

And one has gone over the Stygian river,
Has passed from my sight like a beautiful dream;
She has anchored her barque on the shore that is golden,
And has left this fair earth for a heavenly scene.

I wonder some time if the days of this summer
Will be quite as happy as those that are past;
There's never a cloud in the skies that have vanished,
And in the blue waters no shadow is cast.

But away with all doubts and all fears for the future,
We'll anchor again at that rustic old mill;
We'll breathe in the balmy air, drink in the sunshine
And shout as we row with a hearty good will.

The Story Teller.

OLIVE VARCOE

—OR—

TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER VI.

"HAVE you heard the news, Vigo?" said Mr. Damerel. "The baronet is going to try the truth of the adage, 'Matrimony is a cure for love.'"

Young Vigo looked up from his newspaper with a bewildered expression on his face.

"Oh, don't be frightened," continued Damerel. "He mawwies the fair Mawistowe; but I can't tell what love he hopes to cure by the ceremony. The Varcoe is outwageous. I shouldn't be surprised if she made arsenic puddings for the whole family. I hear she makes all the puddings and pies."

"You hear great nonsense, Damerel," said young Vigo, putting down the paper with a trembling hand. "I am glad to know the marriage will be soon."

"Yes," said Damerel, "its so disagreeable to be jealous; and, when the baronet is disposed of, the course will be clear. But my dear friend, unless I have much mistaken that little girl, this mawwiage will never be."

"Your extraordinary ideas of Olive would provoke a saint," said Charles Vigo, warmly. "Even if she were, as you suppose, desperately in love with that epitome of all pride, Trewavas, what could she do to stop his marriage with the milk-and-water heiress?"

"Do?" said Damerel, "oh, she'd do anything. I'd label her 'dangewous' if she belonged to my family menagewie."

"Really, Damerel, I lose patience with you," said Vigo. "I consider you mad upon this point, and I only like the girl all the more for your abuse of her; and I think she likes me. I believe if the baronet were free to morrow to woo her, I should stand as good a chance with her as he does."

Mr. Damerel looked into Charles Vigo's honest, flushed face, and wisely held his peace. He knew that another word on this subject would arouse angry blood; and feeling that if together, they would be sure to converse on it—for Charles Vigo, like a true lover, would even rather hear his mistress abused than not talk of her at all—he let him seize his hat, and call to Bolster, and depart for a walk alone."

Through the grounds of Bosvigh through the soft, green meadows, lying park like around it, down by the stream, where the trout glistened, and the kingfisher darted to and fro in the sun, and on over the uplands to the down, Charles Vigo wandered with a swift step. But on the down he lingered and gazed around him. The beauty of the scene tempered his hot blood with calmness; and every breeze that blew freshly from the sea, brought with it some cooling balm for the fever fretting in his spirit.

Facing him lay the great Atlantic, its blue depths wonderfully smooth, as it rolled beneath the sapphire sky. Away to the right waved the green woods of Trewavas, every height verdure crowned and every fragrant slope bringing down to the sea the perfume of leaf and flower. Glistening among the myriad leaves, there flashed at times upon the light a glimpse of the old mansion, standing white, pure, and stately among its protesting guard of noble trees.

As Charles Vigo gazed upon it, his face gathered a wistful look. The girl he loved lived in that stately, time honored, ancient house, and yet the respect that grew round the name of Trewavas never touched her with its halo. Though she lived among them on a seeming equality, some unseen hand had struck her down beneath their level, and the result was that she had grown bitter. He could see this in her reckless air, her defiant look, the angry, scornful flash of her eye, and in the fierce temper, which broke bounds at times, and revelled at sinning against decorum. No, not a good girl!—Damerel was right. Not a good girl, as the world counts goodness, but one who might be good, if loved and cherished. Keep a plant from the light, and it will dwindle or twist and grow crooked; and sting a human soul with scoffs and scorn, and surely that too will writhe and bend to evil. Damerel was unjust. Let him try to feel as Olive felt, before he dared to judge her. Because she showed some little fierceness of temper, some natural girlish jealousy of Eleanor's wealth and position, it was cruel to deem her therefore capable of crime, and suppose she nursed in her heart a burning love and hatred, impelling her passionately on to sin. He did not believe a word of it. Sir Hilton and John Trewavas were brothers to her, nothing more; and let them look to it, if they nurse, by unkindness to break the spirit of a defenseless, motherless, fatherless girl! Sir Hilton, the other day, was disgentlemanly, uncivil in his speech to her; and even now Charles Vigo's cheeks tingled as he remembered he had stood by and heard a man use uncivil words to a lady. No, he concurated John. John was a kindly, good fellow—weak, perhaps, but always well meaning, and full of courtesy. What if he made John his friend, and told him of his hope? Yes, that would be a good plan. It was too soon to call at Trewavas again, but he might find him somewhere in the park.

It wanted but the excuse of this thought to make Charles Vigo turn his face from the sea, and bend his steps towards the woods of Trewavas.

The air was delicious, the day sunny, the sky without a cloud; and as the heath beat to the elastic step of the young man his spirits rose, and the wild yearnings of his heart grew smooth and even.

"It's hot work here, Bolster," said he. "Come on, good dog—there's shade at hand."

Beneath the trees at last, where the shadows fell in cool patches on the sward, and the soft moss yielded refreshingly to the tired feet.

Under this shadowy green vault Charles Vigo grew still more thoughtful. He ceased to whistle, and his step became slow and languid, making no sound upon the velvet turf. Then came irresolution. He would not try to see John. He had promised Damerel he would do nothing to the business yet awhile. At all events, he would go up to the Lady's Bower, and think it over—there was no hurry.

Now the Lady's Bower was in the depth of the wood. Paradise was not more solitary, ere Eve sprang from Adam's dreams, than was this tiny soft green glade in the midst of the forest—a spot covered with brightest moss, and shut in all around by giant beeches, whose great branches stretched about it like green arms in leafy strength, wonderful and beautiful to see.

Close against the tallest beech, and curiously interlaced with its branches, a lovely Lady Ida Trewavas, an earl's daughter, had built the Lady's Bower. It was covered with starry flowers of jasmine, trailing honeysuckle, climbing roses, and great hanging clusters of eglantine blossoms, gleaming like big blood drops on the green foliage; a beautiful spot, but with a touch of sadness on it, for the lady who had loved it died young. Some said she had brought a broken heart to Trewavas, and had built this bower for a hidden place of refuge, wherein to weep unseen. No matter how that might be, the spot was solitary enough for tears or sorrow, or any human woe or sin that sought to hide itself from curious eyes.

The moss sloped down from the bower to the edge of a lake, lily lined and so wondrously clear and silvery, that beneath its waters one might count the gleaming pebbles and watch the fish gliding to and fro. The great beeches spread their branches over this pool half way across, dipping the leaves into the water lovingly; and in the dark shadows they made, there was a depth and cool ness lovely to the eye in Summer heat. The pool was very still, and so shaded by its guardian trees, that the sun did but glint on it, falling in narrow lances and shafts of light, mingled with flutter ing shadows of myriad leaves.

In sunlight or in moonlight this lake was like a gem set in the forest, but in the greyness of evening there was a gloom about it; and if the night was dark, perchance the mind might feel a kind of horror in coming on it suddenly. It seemed then like a cold death lurking among the trees praying the weary and the sinful, with soft murmuring voice, to come to its chill bosom and rest.

As Charles Vigo drew near this spot, he heard voices, and he saw the soft folds of a dress—pale lilac—gleaming through the green bushes. Because of the deep shadows and intervening trees, he could not for a moment see the form of the other speaker; then it came upon him darkly, clothed in black, with a scarlet cord about the waist for a girdle.

He held his breath, and his heart beat loudly, for it was Olive, and he saw by her crimson cheeks and small hand clenched in the air, that she was speaking in furious passion. What should he do? Should he steal away softly as he came, or should he let the ladies know he was here?

No. They would feel hurt that a man should come upon them, and catch them quarreling thus. But while he hesitated, words reached him so fierce, so threatening, that he turned pale and resolved to stay.

"I promised Damerel I'd watch her," he said. "I shall never again get an opportunity like this. I do not stay meanly to listen, but to protect her against herself, to hinder perhaps—"

Mischief! that was the word young Vigo felt, but he did not say it, even to himself. "Down, Bolster, down!" he whispered, and the dog lay panting on the sward.

Eleanor sat within the bower, her slight form shrinking against the leaves, her pale delicate face scarcely visible, a book in her trembling hand. Olive stood without, with the sun flashing on her scarlet cheeks, her raven hair, her brilliant eyes, and her small nervous fingers, through which as she talked she pulled to and fro, with a whishing motion, the silken cord which hung from her waist.

"Miss Maristowe," she said, "there is no mercy in you, no pity; it is a cruel thing that you are doing, and I have appealed to you in vain. But beware! You shall not enjoy your coveted happiness in peace. You have made me your enemy, and I am dangerous. You do not know what you have done in rousing a nature like mine."

"Do you threaten me?" said Eleanor, proudly. "Every word you say only further convinces me that I am right, when I insist on you quitting Trewavas."

"My home, my only home!" said Olive, and her voice softened. "You drive me forth into the world, you exile me into a great desert of miseries strange to me, you expose me to peril and sorrow, and all only selfishly to secure your own happiness. You shall not have it—I will kill you first!"

"Miss Varcoe, let me pass," returned Eleanor. "You shall not frighten me then. I will not stay to hear such language."

Olive laughed, and barred the entrance of the bower with her arm.

"Stay, and hear me out," she said, "I shall not trouble you again. When we meet in the house I shall be placid, well bred, and as mute as a fish. Give me here in the woods full liberty and bitterness of speech."

"What have you to say?" asked Eleanor, in a trembling voice. "You have no right to make it a matter of complaint against me that you quit Trewavas. You cannot expect me to keep beneath my roof a woman who loves my husband. It is my duty to guard my own peace and his."

Olive's whole face flashed as she heard these words.

"How dare you say I love Hilton in any other way than I have a right to love him?" she exclaimed. "Remember, I have lived beneath the same roof with him longer than you. His home has been my home for ten years. I have been his sister, his playmate, his friend—"

Her voice broke, and she covered her face with her hands; then, dashing her tears away, she went on more passionately.

"I should be hard indeed if I did not love him. It is you who are to blame—you, the stranger, who have come between him and me, and planted dissension and strife among us; and you are afraid that he has yet some tenderness for the child, the girl he once loved. That is your cowardly fear, and so you drive me out into the world to perish!"

"Let me pass, Olive Varcoe," said Eleanor.

"No," said Olive, "stop and hear me. An heiress like you, a petted, only child like you, seldom has such a chance as this of hearing the truth. You are so accustomed to get all your wishes gratified, that you don't know when you are wicked. I shall tell you. You were wicked, when, for two years you led poor, honest, kindly John to believe that you loved him—"

"I never did so!" cried Eleanor, indignantly.

"Then you were blind," said Olive "I have greater cause to accuse you of loving John, than you have to accuse me of loving Hilton. I do accuse you of it. I say that you loved him, and forsook him when you found that you could get the elder brother. More than that, you have been callous, heartless, cruel, you have never given a thought to his sufferings. Mine has been the only eye to see them; mine the only voice to cheer him."

"This is a false and wicked charge, Miss Varcoe!" exclaimed Eleanor. "I never loved John. I even dislike him. You are not a lady, and I am; therefore I cannot condescend to forget myself as you do otherwise. I might answer you in language as strong as your own."

"No," said Olive, "I don't belong to that sisterhood which is so cut to one pattern, that a ship load of herrings is not more cold, or more like each other. I think, speak and believe what I feel. I do not set lies, and sell myself for a title. In these respects, truly, I am no lady. And I repeat it, you loved John; you have made him love you, and you have trampled over his heart to reach his brother."

"John will never dare to say so!" cried Eleanor, excitedly, "if he does, I will answer him with all the contempt I feel for his weak, wavering, unmanly nature. And you, Miss Varcoe, how shall I speak the disdain with which you fill me? You compel me to listen to you by a barrier stronger than iron; because you know that rather than thrust you aside, rather than touch that arm that bars my way, I would die!"

"No, don't touch me," said Olive, laughing again more bitterly. "A touch of yours would turn me mad! You are right not to try it. In all things you are my superior, Miss Maristowe—in birth, in beauty, in wealth, in happiness, in temper. Give me the one bitter privilege of having a more biting tongue than yours; and let me use it—let it sting its worst; it will not be for long. When you are Lady Trewavas, you will never be troubled with the sound of my voice. Will your bridal be the happier because I am sacrificed as a victim to your jealousy? Will no thought of me and of John intrude at the feast? Do not deceive yourself—you have wrecked his happiness. He will live to be a wretch. I see signs breaking through his quiet misery, that your selfish, thoughtless eyes have never noted. And as for me—as you, and the husband you have won, live at ease, I shall be a wanderer, a woman without a name, without a home—unloved, utterly forsaken! Yet in one thing I shall have my triumph—in one thing I shall yet sting you to the heart. Hilton will feel my miseries, not I; and your eyes will see his anguish, not mine. As he seeks for me, as he tries vainly to thrust his money and his charity on me, you will witness his distress; you will work uselessly to root from his heart his long love for his playmate; and you will see your hands upon him broken like threads, and your fancied happiness crumbled to the dust. This is the legacy I leave you when I quit Trewavas. You thought to have all things your own way. I was to accept the home you choose to find me; I was to take the pittance that you choose to dole out to me. But no—I tell you a thousand times, no!—I will accept nothing from a Trewavas. No cold charity shall crush me to the ground. I will keep my place in their hearts and in their home or I will have nothing from them. I will compel Hilton to know, that while he lives in luxury, the ruin descends on my defenceless head, and the earth denies me food and shelter. Now pass—I have finished."

The shapely arm that had barred the way dropped by her side, and taking up the cord again, and pulling it some what listlessly through her fingers, Olive Varcoe moved slowly away. Down the soft slope, to the edge of the gleaming lake, she went with measured, resolute step; then, still skirting the brink, with the hem of her robe touching the shining water, she passed out of sight among the tall ferns and leafy branches of the sweeping beech.

To his dying day Charles Vigo will never forget the look that Olive Varcoe wore as she crossed the greensward in the sunshine, her face stern, and set in passionate grief, her white hands playing with the crimson rope, her black dress clinging sombrely to her firm, lithe figure.

The sound of Eleanor's weeping reached him in his ambush; and ashamed that he had listened, he crept silently away.

For hours young Vigo wandered in the wood. Except that he knew his steps were not tending homewards, he was scarcely conscious whither he went. His heart yearned towards Olive. In spite of her faults he loved her, and he longed to fold her in his arms, and comfort her.

"She is surely cried," he said to himself, softly. "It is a hard thing to be driven from one's home by a stranger. Trewavas might have spared her such a trial. He has acted without taste and delicacy. I was sure she did not love him—a fellow all family pride and worldliness. Of course she couldn't like him; but then it was satisfactory to hear her say it. 'Friend, playmate,' those were her words. I always told Damerel there was nothing else."

Thus sometimes do a lover's ears deceive him.

"I admire her spirit," he continued. "She won't except anything of! No, why should she? Bosvigo shall be her home. Who wants a penny of their money? Not the Vigos, certainly. I shall care nothing now for what Damerel says. It is my duty to protect her at this point in her life. I cannot let her go out into the world to fight her way in the world, as she talks of doing, brave little thing! No, mine must be the roof to shelter her when she quits Trewavas."

Thus, in solitude, with thoughts coming to him brokenly, mingled with visions of happiness, and doubts as to his father's approval of his love, Charles Vigo turned from one narrow path to another, plunging deeper and deeper into the recesses of the wood.

Once he thought he heard a cry—a wild, solitary cry; and, startled by this strange sound among the summer leaves, and deeming it the cry of hawk or heron, he wandered on again amid the song of birds, and the hum of innumerable bees.

At length the wood deepened in gloom and the evening shadows fell grey across his path, but the strange shrinking from home and from companionship, that had kept him solitary so many hours, held him still in its bonds, and he stood irresolute beneath the leaves, thinking with curious repugnance of the noise, the cheerfulness, and the guests awaiting him at Bosvigo.

As he stood thus in the waning light, the sounds of the wood growing still about him, there broke on his ear the note of the great bell at Trewavas. Floating on the rustling waves of foliage, startling the stillness of the twilight, it came with an inexpressible mournfulness, like the sound of a passing bell, heard at sea, when the hearts of mariners returning home are fevered and anxious. Almost at the same instant there rose clearly on the breeze a low cry—this time unmistakably the cry of a woman—and listening scarce a moment, young Vigo dashed aside the branches, and strode through the underwood, in the direction whence the sound approached him, in a little more than a minute they had reached a tiny, cleared, open glade; and here, lying with her face on the grass, was Olive.

The young man ran towards her, and lifted her in his arms. She seemed scarcely sensible; there was a wild look of horror in her fixed eyes, and there broke every moment from her pale lips, her heaving chest, a rending sob, like a groan.

"Olive! Olive!" exclaimed her lover, eagerly, "who has hurt you? What has happened? Oh, she will die—she will die!"

"No No," said Olive, in a strange, unnatural voice. "I am not dying—I am not ill. Let me go, Mr. Vigo. To-morrow you will be sorry you have a own me kindness."

She struggled from his protecting arm, and sank down again on the grass.

Greatly distressed, the young man bent over her, full of love and pity.

"You do me injustice, Olive," he said, "I am always proud to be your friend."

"Are you?" she said, in a desolate tone. "It is not safe to be my friend. Leave me, Mr Vigo, I entreat you."

"Not before I know why I find you in this state," he replied; not before I know what has happened."

"Happened! what can have happened? Nothing has happened," said Olive, wildly. "Where have you been walking? how long have you been in this wood, Mr. Vigo?"

"I have been here some hours," he replied; "All the afternoon, I think."

Olive started to her knees, and clasping her hands, she gazed at him with a haggard look.

"Here!" said she, "on this side of the wood—all the afternoon! Have you seen any one? Sir Hilton or—or his brother, or—"

"I have seen no one but you," replied Charles Vigo a little evasively. "Will you not trust me, Olive?—will you not tell me what has happened?"

"Nothing has happened," exclaimed Olive, passionately. "Why will you persist in saying so?"

"Then why are you so distressed?" he asked. "Even now you can scarcely steady your sobbing voice to speak."

His words seemed to wring Olive's very heart; she clenched her hands together, and bowed her head upon them, while her frame shook with a convulsive sob. Mingled always with the sound of her anguish came the quick, impatient clash of the bell at Trewavas

[illegible] YEARS OLD.

ORANGEVILLE, MAY 28, 1891.

THEY GOT THERE!

THE DELEGATES STRIKE THE CAPITAL AND TALK WITH THE OLD MAN.

Mayor Walsh and Others of the Deputation Lay Their Grievance Before the Cabinet.

SIR JOHN AND HON. GEORGE E. FOSTER REPLY.

The delegates of the municipalities interested in the railway bonus refund agitation fairly captured the Capital on Thursday last, and laid their grievance before the members of the cabinet in a terse and forcible manner. The delegation consisted of about 150 persons, wardens, mayors, reeves and deputy reeves from 22 counties and five cities in Ontario. After the delegates arrived at Ottawa they held a meeting with Mayor Walsh in the chair. Speakers were chosen and when they appeared before the cabinet there was no coaxing or delay.

E. S White, M P. for Cardwell, introduced the delegation in a neat speech and called on Mr. W. L. Walsh as the first speaker.

HIS WORSHIP'S REMARKS.

Mayor Walsh said that the gentlemen present were there in response to an invitation extended to them by the Premier about a year ago. From the records of the proceedings the House of Commons as reported in Hansard it appeared that during last session the subject which the deputat on purposed proceeding to the Government was brought forward by Mr. McMullen, M P for North Wellington. In reply to Mr. McMullen's remarks, Sir John Macdonald said there might have been years ago deputations on this subject but certainly there had been none of late years, and he had not heard anything about the matter until Mr McMullen had brought it up. The Premier further said, if the various municipalities had expended their money as Mr. McMullen said they had, let them bring up their case and the Government would take it into consideration next session. That was the invitation which brought the deputation to Ottawa to day, an invitation coming from so eminent a source that they did not feel at liberty to disregard it. The matter referred to by Mr McMullen last session dealt more particularly with the local claims of the municipalities in his own neighborhood, but the delegation present was far more representative. It came from every part of Ontario, embracing amongst its members gentlemen from upwards of 150 municipalities of the province. In the delegation there were also representatives from five cities of Ontario and from municipalities embraced within 22 counties. It would, therefore, be seen that it was in every sense of the word a thoroughly representative body, entitled to speak for the entire number of municipalities in the province, which considered themselves within the category of those whose claims they were there to present. The object of the deputation, as Mr Waite had said, was to present to the Government the claims of the municipalities which, in days gone by, had constructed railways largely at their own expense, claims which they had on the Government by reason of the policy inaugurated some time ago of aiding railways out of the Federal treasury. They affirmed that those municipalities which had constructed railways out of municipal funds and without any assistance from the Dominion Government at a time when railways were a matter of necessity, and not as to day largely a matter of luxury, had the same right to come before the Government and say—since the policy of the Government was to assist in the construction of railways in Canada by granting subsidies of $3,200 per mile—that they were entitled to be placed in the same position as those municipalities which were now being aided, and as they would likely have been aided if the railways in their respective counties were under construction at the present time, instead of having been built many years ago. The funds to build these railways were contributed by the people themselves; but of the grants, which it was the policy of the Dominion Government now to make as railway subsidies, they as Canadian ratepayers, were paying their share in common with other portions of the Dominion of Canada. Having constructed their own railways at their own expense, and having assisted in the construction of these latter railways, the deputation thought they were entitled to the same consideration as other municipalities, that they should receive the same grant per mile from the Dominion treasury. That was the main principle upon which their claim was based—a principle in itself was so forcible and founded as to need little further elucidation at his hands. The railway statistics for 1889, published by the Department of Railways, established the fact that Ontario had contributed by municipal aid to a far larger extent than any other province of the Dominion in the construction of railroads. The statistics for 1889 were the latest obtainable, but they would answer the purposes of his argument. From this return it appeared that the municipalities of Ontario had contributed aid to the construction of railroads to the amount of $6,957,000. The next largest sum given by any province was that of the small province of Manitoba, but there the amount was far less than in Ontario, being only $595,000. It would therefore be seen to what a large extent the extensive system of railroads now spreading over Ontario was due to the aid given in their construction by the municipalities out of their own pockets. As illustrations of the injustice under which the municipalities were suffering from the present state of affairs, he would cite one or two cases. Two or three years ago the town of Wingham, which was five miles off the line of the Toronto, Grey & Bruce railway, found itself in want of railway communication. The Grey & Bruce road had been constructed through there, but it was five miles distant from Wingham. It was therefore projected to build a spur line to connect the town with the railway. The spur was built, and as far as the ratepayers, which were at hard, showed, was concerned without any aid whatever from the municipality of Wingham or any of the municipalities interested in that piece of road. The construction was aided by the Dominion Government to the amount of $3,200 per mile, on the ground that the town of Wingham without the expenditure of any municipal funds obtained the benefit of the entire line of the Toronto, Grey & Bruce railway, upon which the municipalities through which the road ran had given $967,000 in the way of municipal bonuses. Another case was that of the Guelph Junction railway, which, so far as the records showed, was not bonused by any of the municipalities along the line, but to which the city of Guelph gave a loan, the repayment of which was amply secured to the city. That was the only aid outside the Dominion Government grant of $640,000, and by the construction of that road the people of Guelph were directly connected with the Credit Valley system, which had been originally bonused by the municipalities for $1,500,000. These were two instances in which municipalities which had railways constructed through their territory since the inauguration of the Dominion Government a policy of railway aid were at a great advantage over the municipalities represented there to day. The claim preferred to the Government was that on all those railways to which municipal aid had been given the Government should give $3,200 a mile, that amount to be divided amongst the municipalities which had assisted in the construction of railways in proportion to the subsidies they had respectively granted. It might be urged that this would entail such a large expenditure of the public funds as to make it unfair to the other provinces of the Dominion, and that therefore it should not be countenanced for a moment. He thought, however, the province of Ontario was justly entitled to a little extra consideration in the matter of railway subsidies. The total of the subsidies granted by the Dominion Government, exclusive of the amount expended in the construction of the C. P. R and the Intercolonial railway, was something over $20,000,000. Of this amount Ontario had received but $2,893,060, so that if the total expenditure of the Dominion Government under this head was increased, in the in the manner proposed, he submitted that with all fairness no injustice would be done to the other provinces, but that in this matter Ontario would be but receiving what was due to her. (Applause) These were briefly the arguments which he desired to place before the Ministers, and he would conclude by placing in the hands of the Premier memorials from the different municipalities throughout the province praying for the relief which the delegates were there in person to ask. (Applause.)

Mr. Walsh was followed by Messrs. S. J. Parker, treasurer of Grey, Mayor Porter of Belleville, Mayor Taylor of London and Warden Johnston of Simcoe. Space will not permit us to give reports of their speeches, which were full of facts why a refund should be made.

Sir John and Hon. G. E. Foster replied.

SIR JOHN'S SPEECH.

Sir John Macdonald, on rising, was received with loud cheers. He said: Gentlemen, I need scarcely say to you—it goes without saying—that the Minister of Finance and myself have received with great pleasure this large and influential delegation. Your respect ability, numbers and position as representative men call upon us, and upon the Government of which we are members, to give full consideration to the various arguments that have been used by the gentlemen who have addressed us. (Cheers.) However, that is easy to say gentlemen, and we cannot say much more just now. We have not had this matter before us and do not know, and we have not been informed by any gentleman who has spoken what the amount of the obligation will be that we are asked to go to Parliament for. We do not know how many hundreds of thousands of dollars it may be; we do not know whether it may amount up into the millions or not, and therefore all we can say just now is this, that we will give this subject full consideration, all the consideration that your representations call for and imperatively demand. You ask the Government—and all the speakers, as it were, by their language imply that it rests with the Government—to grant or refuse the aid required. That is not the case. The matter rests with Parliament. The Government—the Ministry of the day—are the servants of Parliament, and all we could do, however favorable we might be to the request, would be to lay it before Parliament and put it in the most favorable light possible. I would be wanting in candor if I did not call your attention to the great difficulties in the way of carrying out your request. This representative deputation comes from the province of Ontario; it comes from Ontario alone; it represents the interests of various municipalities, but you must remember that Ontario, although the chief province of the Dominion, is outnumbered by the representatives of all the remaining provinces. There are 215 members in Parliament; there are only 92 members from Ontario. The remaining 123 members represent the rest of this great Dominion. Now, gentlemen, I would ask you this question: Do you believe that 123 of the representatives of the people from the other provinces of the Dominion one man would be found voting for a grant for the municipalities of Ontario alone? No; they would refuse it altogether unless it was accompanied by similar grants to all the railway enterprises in each and every province. It would require some time to ascertain what the extent of the claims of all the railways in the Dominion would be, and, when ascertained, it would probably amount to such a sum as to absolutely swamp the credit of the Dominion if we were to assume such a burden. We are ignorant of the amount as yet; we do not know what the extent of the obligation would be until actuaries have ascertained what amount had been advanced for railways in all the provinces, and what a grant of $3,200 per mile would amount to with respect to those enterprises. Take Nova Scotia and New Brunswick for instance. They have not such a complete municipal system as we have. In portions of those provinces they have no municipal system at all, but the people have been taxed all the same to build railways. Railways have been built by provincial bonuses, and the different Provincial Legislatures of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick would say: "Our people have been taxed to build railways; if you are going to carry out the policy that those railways which have not received any assistance from the Federal Government shall be assisted we claim such assistance as well." That claim could not be resisted, and if we attempted to resist it and confined the grant to Ontario railways, we would be manifestly delegated to Parliament. That, gentlemen, is the difficulty before us. I will only repeat what I stated, perhaps, a substantial ground of fairness in the claim you make as far as I can say: "Well, there is a railway in your county which has received $3,200 a mile. We have built railways out of our own pockets, and we have as much right to get that amount as a neighboring county." There is a great apparent amount of fairness in that; but we have to face the thing as it is. Is there any chance, is there any hope, that the Canadian Parliament of Canada will grant partial relief to any one province? I do not think there is the remotest prospect of that, and, therefore, the Government, before going to Parliament, must force the question at a whole and must look at the certain claims that would be made by the Provincial Government, and the different municipal bodies in the various provinces before coming to any conclusion in the matter. I think we have not sufficient data to even speculate on the total amount of the burden which would have been thrown on the Dominion treasury. I repeat that we are happy to meet this delegation, but we would have been better satisfied if you had come here before the meeting of Parliament. You have taken a course which is too common with important delegations who have claims to present, especially claims of a pecuniary character, to Parliament. Once Parliament is in session, it is too late for that kind of thing. The representations should be made before Parliament meets, and should be laid before the Government within such a time that they could give full consideration to all the claims and all the arguments, so that they would be enabled to get statistical information as to what the amount of the obligation will be, and also to consider, if they should come to the conclusion to deal with the subject at all, in what way they are to meet the claims, how the money should be raised, whether we should go into the English market and borrow one, two, three or four millions for the purpose, and whether the credit and prestige of Canada would bear such a burden. All this ought to have been considered before Parliament met. Every ministry prepares its measures, or ought to do so, before Parliament meets. They should know what they are going to bring forward in given session and have their measures ready, as is usually the case. Here, as you say, you cannot say what it will amount to. You cannot tell us how many hundreds of thousands of dollars will be required to meet your wishes, and therefore, we can only report that we acknowledge the influence and respectability of this great delegation, and will promise you to address ourselves to this subject and see whether, in the first place, we can deal with it, in the next place, to what extent, and then as to the mode of financing such a great measure. I think, my good friend the Minister of Finance, would have a good many uneasy nights if he were called upon now to raise funds to give every municipality the amount which they have spent in aiding railways. I thank you, gentlemen, for listening to me. I have told you candidly the position the question assumes. We will give it our earnest consideration. It is duty to do so. When such an influential body comes before us in such an impressive way we will address ourselves to the subject and deal with it in a manner consistent with the prestige and credit of the province, and we must consider, above all, whether any measure for the partial relief of any one province will be likely to go through Parliament. As I have already stated there is not the slightest chance of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia or Manitoba voting one sixpence for a railway for Ontario unless the same thing is granted to other railways which are in the same position in those provinces. (Cheers)

Dr Sproul, M. P. for East Grey, on behalf of the deputation, thanked the Government for the kind manner in which they had received the delegates, after which the gathering dispersed.

TOLTON LOSES!

The C. P. R. Defeats Him in a Suit at Osgoode Hall.

On Friday judgment was given at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, in the action of W. Tolton of Waldemar against the C P R. The case was tried at the assizes here a few weeks ago, but Mr. Justice Street reserved his decision.

Mr Tolton claimed damages for damage caused to the west half of lot 3 in the 9th concession of the township of Amaranth owing to the diversion of a water course by the line of railway constructed by the Toronto, Grey & Bruce Railway Company, and now worked by the defendants, and for a mandamus to compel the defendants to reopen the original channel of the water course. The plaintiff acquired the land by conveyance in 1876 and has ever since been in possession. The line of the Toronto, Grey & Bruce was constructed through the lot in 1871, and in the course of the work an embankment was built across the bed of a large water course which ran through the land in question and diverted the water into a new channel which ran along the side of their line until it found its way into the Grand River. This embankment and the new channel were both upon the land. About the time the works were being constructed Robertson, the plaintiff's predecessor in title, conveyed to the railway company the right of way, but not the bed of the new channel of the water course, which lay outside the parcel conveyed. Robertson made a claim upon the company in 1873 for compensation for the diversion of this stream by the works of the company; he pressed his claim and brought an action to recover it with other demands; he continued to press it down to May, 1874; the company acknowledged a liability to pay him for this particular injury; a settlement took place between him and the company at that time; both the solicitor for the company and the solicitor for Robertson testified that this particular injury was included in the settlement, and that no further claim was made by Robertson in respect of it although down to that time he had vigorously urged it. Under these circumstances the learned Judge finds that the company at that time made full compensation to Robertson for the injury for which this action was brought, and holds that the plaintiff is therefore not entitled to recover. Action dismissed with costs. Elgin Meyers, Q. C., for the plaintiff, Angus MacMurchy for the defendants.

THE JURY'S VERDICT IN THE CHURCHVILLE INQUEST.

SCENE OF THE ACCIDENT.

A Neglected Township By-Law Costs Three Men's Lives.

Full Report of the Evidence Taken—Description of the Wreck—Condition of the Wounded Men.

BRAMPTON, May 21.—A Globe representative to day visited the scene of the disastrous railway smash-up at Churchville on Tuesday night. The crossing at which the engine of the ill-fated train struck the cow, as recorded in yesterday's issue, is on a sharp down grade, fully a quarter of a mile north of the little flag station of Churchville. A sharp curve hides a southward bound train until it is almost on the crossing. Immediately over the crossing the line crosses a creek on a trestle bridge some 30 feet high, and, continuing still on a considerable curve, crosses the high road at two other places before reaching Churchville, so that there are three level crossings in about 400 yards. The evidence taken at the inquest showed that the cow was running across the track when struck and not lying down. After being struck she was partly thrown into a cattle guard and was again caught by the small wheels of the forward truck and carried a considerable distance. This second encounter was what probably caused the wheels to leave the rails. The two front wheels only were derailed at this point, but owing to the grade and the very heavy load behind no effort of the engineers or brakemen could stop the train. For nearly 400 yards she ran after the engine was partially derailed, until probably from the ties spreading the locomotive turned at a sharp angle and burying itself to the boiler fire into the bank, the tender and cars piling over it in dire destruction. No fewer than seventeen cars were derailed, sixteen of them being smashed to kindling wood, though the loss to freight was small, most of it being stone which sustained no injury. But under the the tender and crushed against the boiler were three poor fellows, whose lives were sacrificed, two of them neglecting the chance to escape till too late, standing at their post with the noble determination to save the train if possible. The third, Dicker, was a tailor of Waterloo who was on his way to a job with C. J. Owens of Streetsville, his identity being established through a telegram from that gentleman engaging him. As shown by the verdict recorded below the jury refused to attach blame for the accident to anyone but a very strong feeling was expressed on all hands that the township authorities should be called to account for neglecting to enforce a bylaw of eleven years' standing which expressly forbids the allowing of cattle to graze on the highway. Had this been in operation three valuable lives would have been spared and too others saved from life long injuries.

THE INQUEST.

The inquest on the bodies of Robert Johnson, the driver, Jas Ferguson, the fireman, and Nicholas Dicker, who were killed in the smash up, was opened in the town council chamber here this afternoon, at 3 o'clock before Dr. John Mullin, coroner for the county of Peel. The jury had been empanelled on Tuesday night, very shortly after the disaster occurred, and had at once proceeded to the scene, where the bodies were viewed, and the position of the wreck examined. No evidence was taken at that time, further proceedings being adjourned till to-day.

Mr. W. H. McFadden, county crown attorney, conducted the case for the Crown, the interests of the C. P. R. company being watched by Messrs. Angus Macdonald and James Kerr.

Jacob Brooks, Toronto Junction, conductor of the train, was the first witness examined. He deposed that on the afternoon of Tuesday in question he took his train, No. 68, out of Brampton at 7.45 p. m., six hours late. After going some 2½ miles and while running at from fifteen to twenty miles an hour, he felt a sudden jar, but being in the rear caboose at the time he saw nothing and had no personal knowledge of what was the cause. Immediately before he felt the jar he heard the whistle indicating that cattle were on the track, and finally the whistle was given for down brakes. After feeling the jar witness did not realize that the engine had left the track until the cars began to pile up. This occurred exactly at 8 o'clock. There was nothing unusual in the rate at which the train was running at the time of the accident. Twenty miles per hour was schedule time and no instructions had been given as to this particular point. He was acquainted with the deceased men, Johnson, and Ferguson, and saw them immediately after the train stopped. He could not say if Johnson was dead at that time, as they could not get to the engine for the steam. He could hear Ferguson moaning, but it was impossible to render assistance, though every effort was made. Possibly he lived an hour but witness did not think he was conscious after he was struck. Dicker was also to all appearances killed instantly. Witness did not know Dicker at all. He saw him at the Brampton station before the train left and again after he was killed. He had no business on the engine, it being against the distinct instructions of the company for strangers to board a freight train. When the engine was examined the lever was reversed and he believed the deceased men in endeavoring to avert the accident. In reply to questions from jurors witness explained that there were two whistles given before reaching the crossing. The distance of the engine from the crossing, when the first whistle was given, would be fully 80 rods. After this the whistles for cattle on the track and the down brakes were given, and there was ample time for the cow to have been driven off the crossing if she had been in charge of any person. It was impossible to see the crossing from the point where the first whistle was given owing to the curve.

DID THEIR DUTY FULLY

Henry Pinchin, Toronto Junction, was the next witness examined. He deposed that he was brakeman on the train in question, and generally corroborated the previous witness, particularly as to the whistles given and his belief that the deceased employes did all in their power to save the train. He added that the cow was struck right on the crossing, and the mark on the track showed that the wheels left the rails immediately. He had no positive doubt that the collision with the cow was the cause of the accident. He had four brakes on behind the whistle was given, and the other two brakemen (who are in the hospital) had probably six or seven more each. He saw no more before jumping. He saw no one at all in charge of the cow or in the neighborhood.

THE OWNER OF THE COW.

Betsy Lowry deposed that she owned the cow which was killed, and on the day in question had started to bring home in and another which had been grazing on the roads during the day. She was not expecting the train, as it was several hours overdue and the passenger train was not due for an hour. She left the animals in charge of her young sister and went to a neighboring mill a quarter of a mile away from the crossing. When on the way back she heard a sharp, long whistle and saw the cows start to run. She did not know where her sister was in relation to the approaching train, and fearing that she might be in danger returned faint and did not remember what she counted till after it was all over. In reply to questions witness claimed that the cows had been down in the village all day and were not in the neighborhood of the track till they were being driven home just at the time the freight came along. Her sister had often driven the cows home before, and she had always considered her competent but would not express an opinion on that point now. It was the custom in the village to allow cattle to graze on the highway in the early spring until the pastures opened. She only left her cows a short time to go over to the mill.

Maggie Carey, aged twelve, sister of the last witness, deposed that she was in charge of the cows for the time her sister was away. She did not see or hear the train till it was on the curve and the sudden whistle caused the cattle to start at a run towards home, which unfortunately was across the track. To do this they passed witness, and, unable to stop them, she ran away in the opposite direction.

Elmer Smith, a lad eleven years of age, swore that he was near the crossing and, hearing the whistle, looked up in time to see the cow running across the track and the engine strike her. The train did not appear to leave the rails, but the rise of the ground hid it from his view after running the distance it did before it was ditched.

The case was then given to the jury, who were out only about fifteen minutes when they returned the following verdict:—"We the jury after carefully considering the evidence consider the occurrence purely accidental, and that no blame can be attached to the train hands or officials, believing they did all they could and would bring in a verdict to that effect."

UNCLE TOM COMING.—Hagerty's great Uncle Tom's Cabin Co., will hold the boards in the town hall on Thursday, June 4th. A great company, with great scenery, will play this piece as it has never been played before in Orangeville.

POSTPONED.—The annual meeting of the Cardwell Conservative Association, which was to be held at Mono Mills on Tuesday, June 9, has been postponed until Saturday, June 13. R. S. White, M. P., will be present, and a large attendance is requested.

A NEW DEPARTURE.—The Toronto World has commenced the publication of a Saturday night edition which will contain Saturday's news and a large amount of special reading matter. The people of the Queen City should do their share towards supporting the enterprise.

WE WANT A BAND.—Orangeville should have a band. This fact was fully illustrated when the Toronto excursionists alighted from the train on Monday morning. No band was there to strike up a lively tune when the train pulled into the station and altogether it looked as if the visitors were coming to Claustown. What has the band committee done? If something is not done soon Alton will be laughing at us!

VERDICT AGAINST THE DOMINION EXPRESS CO.—At Toronto on Monday last the case of Hannah & Robinson v the Dominion Express Co. was tried and the former secured a verdict for damages. Several weeks ago Hannah & Robinson say they shipped two cases of eggs to Toronto, but the hen fruit never reached its destination, hence the action.

BROKE HIS LEG.—On Tuesday afternoon 14-year old Tommy Richardson, who lives with his parents in the East ward, met with a very unfortunate accident. Tommy was in the act of descending a ladder when he fell backwards, his leg going through the round. The force of the fall snapped Tommy's leg as if it had been a pipestem. Dr. Lewis was called in and attended to the boy's injuries, but it will some weeks before Tommy will be able to be out again.

The exposition was scholarly and highly appreciated by the congregation. The rev. gentleman will always have a warm welcome here. Rev. J. T. Caldwell supplied his pulpit in Orangeville.

HORSE CUT TO PIECES.—About 5 o'clock on Friday morning a G. P. R. freight train from Toronto struck a horse belonging to Milkman Rusk in the lower end of the yard and killed it almost instantly. After the animal had been struck by the engine it was carried a distance of thirty yards and mangled in a horrible manner. The horse had been put in a field next the track and as the fences are very poorly constructed along there it soon found its way onto the rails. The animal was worth about $100, and it is said Mr Rusk will sue the company for that amount.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE OFFICIALS.—The annual meeting of the members of the mechanics' institute was held in the reading room on Thursday evening and the following officials were elected: W. Hewat, president; Alex. Johnston, 1st vice-president; A. Turner, 2nd vice president; R. E. Denison, secretary-treasurer; J. McLaren, J. Foulds, A. Steele, C. B. Durland, J. C. Fox, N. Gordon, R. H. Young, W. Wallace, R. Mann, directors; W. Johnston, T. Mac Adam, auditors. A meeting of the directors is called for 7.30 o'clock this evening. The affairs of the institute are in an excellent condition and after purchasing a number of new books, their still remains in the treasury a balance of nearly $200.

PIGS WERE IN IT.—Saturday's police court was not as lively as it might have been all owing to the absence of P. M. Pattullo. Only one case was tried and several more were held over. Justices of the Peace McKinnon and Lamont were on the bench and discharged their duties fairly well. The case tried was a charge against James Montgomery, who resides in East Garafraxa, just outside the corporation, for allowing pigs to run at large contrary to a bylaw of the town. Mr. Montgomery explained that it was a little spite work of one of his neighbors, as the pigs were so small they could get out between the fence rails. He admitted the pigs were on the road and there was nothing else to do but impose a fine of $1 and costs, which amounted to $4 75 including the fine.

TROUBLE AT THE DANCE HOUSE.—Among the people who were enjoying themselves dancing in the town hall on Monday afternoon was a young lady of this town. As is sometimes the case, this young lady's pupa is strongly against dancing and it hurt his feelings to a very great extent when he was informed that his daughter was indulging in this pastime. The irate parent was not very long in forming a plan of campaign, which he quickly put in action. He armed himself with a cane and straightway marched to the hall. Out onto the floor he went and grabbed the girl and led her from the ballroom. A crowd blocked the doorway and several men held the indignant father. During the excitement the giddy girl escaped and it is safe to say did not return to finish the dance. Other parents would probably have pursued the same course if they had but known with whom their daughters were associating.

ALTON IS ANGRY.—The people of the little village of Alton are a very enterprising class and no less than two great celebrations will satisfy them this year. They say they will retaliate against Orangeville for holding a "celebration" on the Queen's birthday by having a big demonstration in Alton on Dominion day, and we believe they are preparing for it now. If the Altonites had only dropped around here on the 25th they would have seen a number of disgusted visitors wandering aimlessly up and down Broadway and patiently waiting until the train would take them back to their Toronto home. Our Alton friends should remember that the citizens of Orangeville are not responsible for the "celebration" here on Monday. We have only one gigantic day and that is the 1st of July. THE SUN has always been opposed to selfishness and we think the people of Alton are making a mistake by their proposed retaliatory celebration.

THEY ADJOURNED TO FIGHT.—Two local toughs got all tangled up in a row in one of the hotels on Monday evening, but could not find room enough to have a good old fashioned fight. To settle the matter their seconds agreed to go outside the corporation limits and settle the dispute in a satisfactory manner. The terms of agreement ran through the crowd like wildfire and in half-a-minute a procession of two or three hundred men and boys were making up Broadway and the tramp of their feet told plainer than words that something extraordinary was about to occur. The line of march was up the south side of Broadway to Bythia street, thence down Bythia to the core near Stevenson's carding mill. There they thought they were safe from Orangeville law and a bait was made. A ring was hastily formed and the principals prepared for battle. But just as they were about to commence hostilities Chief of Police Shields and Constable Hubbard appeared on the scene and politely informed the rabble they were in the town of Orangeville and if any fisticuffs were indulged in the men would be arrested. This stern command had the desired effect and the fight was indefinitely postponed.

Local Press and Others of the Deputation Lay Their Grievances Before the Cabinet.

SIR JOHN AND HON. GEORGE E. FOSTER REPLY.

The delegates of the municipalities interested in the railway bonus refund agitation fairly capured the Capital on Thursday last, and laid their grievance before the members of the cabinet in a terse and forcible manner. The delegation consisted of about 150 persons, wardens, mayors, reeves and deputy reeves from 22 counties and five cities in Ontario. After the delegates arrived at Ottawa they held a meeting with Mayor Walsh in the chair. Speakers were chosen and when they appeared before the cabinet there was no coaxing or delay.

B. S White, M P. for Cardwell, introduced the delegation in a neat speech and called on Mr. W. L. Walsh as the first speaker.

HIS WORSHIP'S REMARKS.

Mayor Walsh said that the gentlemen present were there in response to an invitation extended to them by the Premier about a year ago. From the records of the proceedings the House of Commons as reported in Hansard it appeared that during last session the subject which the deputat on purposed presenting to the Government was brought forward by Mr. McMullen, M P for North Wellington In reply to Mr. McMullen's remarks, Sir John Macdonald said there might have been years ago deputations on this subject but certainly there had been none of late years, and he had not heard anything about the matter until Mr McMullen had brought it up. The Premier further said, if the various municipalities had expended their money as Mr. McMullen said they had, let them bring up their case and the Government would take it into consideration next session. That was the invitation which brought the deputation to Ottawa to day, an invitation coming from no eminent a source that they did not feel at liberty to disregard it. The matter referred to by Mr McMullen last session dealt more particularly with the local claims of the municipalities in his own neighborhood, but the delegation present was far more representative. It came from every part of Ontario, embracing amongst its members gentlemen from upwards of 150 municipalities of the province. In the delegation there were also representatives from five cities of Ontario and from municipalities embraced within 22 counties. It would, therefore, be seen that it was in every sense of the word a thoroughly representative body, and entitled to speak for the entire number of municipalities in the province, which considered themselves within the category of those whose claims they were there to present. The object of the deputation, as Mr White had said, was to present to the Government the claims of the municipalities which, in days gone by, had constructed railways largely at their own expense, claims which they had on the Government by reason of the policy inaugurated some time ago of aiding railways out of the Federal treasury. They affirmed that those municipalities which had constructed railways out of municipal funds and without any assistance from the Dominion Government at a time when railways were a matter of necessity, and not as to day largely a matter of luxury, had the same right to come before the Government and say—since the policy of the Government was to assist in the construction of railways in Canada by granting subsidies of $3,200 per mile—that they were entitled to be placed in the same position as those municipalities which were now being aided, and as they would likely have been aided if the railways in their respective counties were under construction at the present time, instead of having been built many years ago. The funds to build these railways were contributed by the people themselves; but of the grants, which it was the policy of the Dominion Government now to make as railway subsidies, they as Canadian taxpayers, were paying their share in common with other portions of the Dominion of Canada. Having constructed their own railways at their own expense, and having assisted in the construction of these latter railways, the deputation thought they were entitled to the same consideration as other municipalities, that they should receive the same per mile from the Dominion treasury. That was the main principle upon which their claim was based—a principle which in itself was so forcible and founded as to need little further elucidation at his hands. The railway statistics for 1889, published by the Department of Railways, established the fact that Ontario had contributed by way of aid to a far larger extent than the provinces of the Dominion in the construction of railroads. The statistics for 1889 were the latest obtainable, but they would answer the purposes of his argument. From this return it appeared that the municipalities of Ontario had contributed aid in the construction of railroads to the amount of $6,957,000. The next largest sum given by any province was that of the small province of Manitoba, but there the amount was far less than in Ontario, being only $595,000. It would therefore be seen to what a large extent the extensive system of railroads now spreading over Ontario was due to the aid given in their construction by the municipalities out of their own pockets. As illustrations of the injustice under which the municipalities were suffering from the present state of affairs, he would cite one or two cases. Two or three years ago the town of Wingham, which was five miles off the line of the Toronto, Grey & Bruce railway, found itself in want of railway communication. The Grey & Bruce road had been constructed through there, but it was five miles distant from Wingham. It was therefore projected to build a spur line to connect the town with the railway. The spur was built, and as far as the ratepayers, which were at hard, showed, was concerned to the city. That was the city aid outside the Dominion Government grant of $640,000 and by the construction of that road the people of Guelph were directly connecting with the Credit Valley system, which had been originally bonused by the municipalities, for $1,500,000. There were two instances in which municipalities which had rail ways constructed through their territory since the inauguration of the Dominion Government's policy of railway aid were at a great advantage over the municipalities represented here to day. The claim preferred to the Government was that on all those railways to which municipal aid had been given the Government would give $3,200 a mile, that amount to be divided amongst the municipalities which had assisted in the construction of railways in proportion to the subsidies they had respectively granted. It might be urged that this would entail such a large expenditure of the public funds as to make it unfair to the other provinces of the Dominion, and that therefore it should not be countenanced for a moment. He thought, however, the province of Ontario was justly entitled to a little extra consideration in the matter of railway subsidies. The total of the subsidies granted by the Dominion Government, exclusive of the amount expended in the construction of the C. P. R and the Intercolonial railway, was something over $20,000,000 Of this amount Ontario had received but $2,893,000, so that if the total expenditure of the Dominion Government under this head was increased in the manner proposed, he submitted that with all fairness no injustice would be done to the other provinces, but that in this matter Ontario would be but receiving what was due to her. (Applause) These were briefly the arguments which he desired to place before the Ministers, and he would conclude by placing in the hands of the Premier memorials from the different municipalities throughout the province praying for the relief which the delegates were there in person to ask. (Applause.)

Mr. Walsh was followed by Messrs. S. J Parker, treasurer of Grey, Mayor Porter of B lleville, Mayor Taylor of London and Warden Johnston of Simcoe. Space will not permit us to give reports of their speeches, which were full of facts why a refund should be made.

Sir John and Hon. G. E. Foster replied.

SIR JOHN'S SPEECH.

Sir John Macdonald, on rising, was received with loud cheers. He said, Gentlemen, I need scarcely say to you—it goes without saying—that the Minister of Finance and myself have received with great pleasure this large and influential delegation. Your respectability, numbers and position as representative men call upon us, and upon the Government of which we are members, to give full consideration to the various arguments that have been used by the gentlemen who have addressed us. (Cheers.) However, that is easy to say gentlemen, and we cannot say much more just now. We have not had this matter before us and do not know, and we have not been informed by any gentleman who has spoken what the amount of the obligation will be that we are asked to go to Parliament for. We do not know how many hundreds of thousands of dollars it may be; we do not know whether it may amount up into the millions or not, and therefore all we can say just now is this, that we will give this subject full consideration, all the consideration that your representations call for and imperatively demand. You ask the Government—and all the speakers, as it were, by their language imply that it rests with the Government—to grant or refuse the aid required. That is not the case. The matter rests with Parliament. The Government—the Ministry of the day—are the servants of Parliament, and all we could do, however favorable we might be to the request, would be to lay it before Parliament and put it in the most favorable light possible. I would be wanting in candor if I did not call your attention to the great difficulties in the way of carrying out your request. This representative deputation comes from the province of Ontario; it comes from Ontario alone; it represents the interests of various municipalities, but you must remember that Ontario, although the chief province of the Dominion, is not numbered by the representatives of all the remaining provinces. There are 215 members in Parliament; there are only 92 members from Ontario. The remaining 123 members represent the rest of this great Dominion. Now, gentlemen I would ask you this question: Do you believe that 123 of the representatives of the people from the other provinces of the Dominion one man would be found voting for a grant for the municipalities of Ontario alone? No; they would refuse it, altogether unless it was accompanied by similar grants to all the railway enterprises in each and every province. It would require some time to ascertain what the extent of the claims of all the railways in the Dominion would be, and, when ascertained, it would probably amount to such a sum as to absolutely swamp the credit of the Dominion if we were to assume such a burden. We are ignorant of the amount as yet; we do not know what the extent of the obligation would be until actuaries have ascertained what amount had been advanced for railways in all the provinces, and what a grant of $3,200 per mile would amount to with respect to those enterprises. Take Nova Scotia and New Brunswick for instance. They have not such a complete municipal system as we have. In portions of those provinces they have no municipal system at all, but the people have been taxed all the same to build railways. Railways have been built by provincial bonuses, and the different Provincial Legislatures of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick would say: "Our people have been taxed to build railways; if you are going to carry out the policy that those railways which have not received any assistance from the Federal Government shall be assisted we claim such assistance as well." That claim could not be resisted, and if we attempted to resist it and confined the grant to Ontario railways, we would be [illegible] at a whole and most look at the certain claims that would be made by the Provincial Government, and the different municipal bodies in the various provinces before consider to any construction to the matter. I think we have not millions of dollars to speculate on the total amount of the burden which would have been thrown on the Dominion treasury. I repeat that we are happy to meet this deputation, but we would have been better satisfied if you had come here before the meeting of Parliament. You have taken a course which is too common with important deputations who have claims to present, especially claims of a pecuniary character, to Parliament. Once Parliament is in session, it is too late for that kind of thing. The representations should be made before Parliament meets, and should be laid before the Government within such a time that they could give full consideration to all the claims and all the arguments, so that they would be enabled to get statistical information as to what the amount of the obligation will be, and also to consider, if they should come to the conclusion to deal with the subject at all, in what way they are to meet the claims, how the money should be raised, whether we should go into the English market and borrow one, two, three or four millions for the purpose, and whether the credit and prestige of Canada would bear such a burden. All this ought to have been considered before Parliament met. Every ministry prepares its measures, or ought to do so, before Parliament meets. They should know what they are going to bring forward in given session and have their measures ready, as is usually the case. Here, as you say, you cannot say what it will amount to. You cannot tell us how many hundreds of thousands of dollars will be required to meet your wishes, and therefore, we can only report that we acknowledge the influence and respectability of this great delegation, and will promise you to address ourselves to this subject and see whether, in the first place, we can deal with it, in the next place, to what extent, and then as to the mode of financing such a great measure. I think, my good friend the Minister of Finance, would have a good many uneasy nights if he were called upon now to raise funds to give every municipality the amount which they have spent in aiding railways. I thank you, gentlemen, for listening to me. I have told you candidly the position the question assumes. We will give it our earnest consideration. It is duty to do so. When such an influential body comes before us in such an impressive way we will address ourselves to the subject and deal with it in a manner consistent with the prestige and credit of the province, and we must consider, above all, whether any measure for the partial relief of any one province will be likely to go through Parliament. As I have already stated there is not the slightest chance of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia or Manitoba voting one sixpence for a railway for Ontario unless the same thing is granted to other railways which are in the same position in those provinces. (Cheers)

Dr Sproul, M. P. for East Grey, on behalf of the deputation, thanked the Government for the kind manner in which they had received the delegates, after which the gathering dispersed.

TOLTON LOSES!

The C. P. R. Defeats Him in a Suit at Osgoode Hall.

On Friday judgment was given at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, in the action of W. Tolton of Waldemar against the C P.R. The case was tried at the assizes here a few weeks ago, but Mr. Justice Street reserved his decision.

Mr Tolton claimed damages for damage caused to the west half of lot 3 in the 9th concession of the township of Amaranth owing to the diversion of a water course by the line of railway constructed by the Toronto, Grey & Bruce Railway Company, and now worked by the defendants, and for a mandamus to compel the defendants to reopen the original channel of the water course. The plaintiff acquired the land by conveyance in 1876 and has ever since been in possession. The line of the Toronto, Grey & Bruce was constructed through the lot in 1871, and in the course of the work an embankment was built across the bed of a large water course which ran through the land in question and diverted the water into a new channel which ran along the side of their line until it found its way into the Grand River. This embankment and the new channel were both upon the land. About the time the works were being constructed Roberston, the plaintiff's predecessor in title, conveyed to the railway company the right of way, but not the bed of the new channel of the water course, which lay outside the parcel conveyed. Roberston made a claim upon the company in 1873 for compensation for the diversion of this stream by the works of the company; he pressed his claim and brought an action to recover it with other demands; he continued to press it down to May, 1874; the company acknowledged a liability to pay him for this particular injury; a settlement took place between him and the company at that time; both the solicitor for the company and the solicitor for Robertson testified that this particular injury was included in the settlement, and that no further claim was made by Robertson in respect of it although down to that time he had vigorously urged it. Under those circumstances the learned judge finds that the company at that time made full compensation to Robertson for the injury for which this action was brought, and holds that the plaintiff is therefore not entitled to recover. Action dismissed with costs. Elgin Meyers, Q. C., for for the plaintiff, Angus MacMurchy for the defendants.

MEAFORD, May 21.—A Globe representative to day visited the scene of the disastrous railway smash-up at Chatsworth on Tuesday night. The crossing at which the engine of the ill-fated train struck the cow, as reported in yesterday's issue, is on a sharp down grade, fully a quarter of a mile north of the little flag station of Chatsworth. A sharp curve hides a westbound freight train until it is almost on the crossing. Immediately over the crossing the line crosses a creek on a trestle bridge some 30 feet high, and, continuing still on a considerable curve, strikes the high road at two other places before reaching Chatsworth, so that there are three level crossings in about 400 yards. The evidence taken at the inquest showed that the cow was running across the track when struck and not lying down. After being struck she was partly thrown into a cattle guard and was again caught by the small wheels of the forward truck and carried a considerable distance. This second encounter was what probably caused the wheels to have the rails. The cow front wheels only were derailed at this point, but owing to the grade and the very heavy load behind not sufficient of the coupling or brakeflies could stop the train. For nearly 400 yards she ran after the engine was partially derailed, until probably from the ties spreading the locomotive turned at a sharp angle and burying itself to the boiler line into the bank, the tender and cars piling over it in dire destruction. No fewer than seventeen cars were derailed, sixteen of them being smashed to kindling wood, though the loss to freight was small, most of it being stone which sustained no injury. But under the the tender and crushed against the boiler were three poor fellows, whose lives were sacrificed, two of them neglecting the chance to escape till too late, standing at their post with the noble determination to save the train if possible. The third, Dicker, was a tailor of Waterloo who was on his way to a job with C. J. Owens of Streetsville, his identity being established through a telegram from that gentleman engaging him. As shown by the verdict recorded below the jury refused to attach blame for the accident to anyone but a very strong feeling was expressed on all hands that the township authorities should be called to account for neglecting to enforce a bylaw of eleven years' standing which expressly forbids the allowing of cattle to graze on the highway. Had this been in operation three valuable lives would have been spared and two others saved from life long injuries.

THE INQUEST.

The inquest on the bodies of Robert Johnson, the driver, Jas Ferguson, the fireman, and Nicholas Dicker, who were killed in the smash up was opened in the town council chamber here this afternoon, at 3 o'clock before Dr. John Mullin, coroner for the county of Peel. The jury had been empanelled on Tuesday night, very shortly after the disaster occurred, and had at once proceeded to the scene, where the bodies were viewed, and the position of the wreck examined. No evidence was taken at that time, further proceedings being adjourned till to-day.

Mr. W. H. McFadden, county crown attorney, conducted the case for the Crown, the interests of the C. P. R. company being watched by Messrs. Angus Macdonald and James Kerr.

Jacob Brooks, Toronto Junction, conductor of the train, was the first witness examined. He deposed that on the afternoon of Tuesday in question he took his train, No. 68, out of Brampton at 7.45 p. m., six hours late. After going some 2½ miles and while running at from fifteen to twenty miles an hour, he felt a sudden jar, but being in the rear caboose at the time he saw nothing and had no personal knowledge of what was the cause. Immediately before he felt the jar he heard the whistle indicating that cattle were on the track, and finally the whistle was given for down brakes. After feeling the jar witness did not realize that the engine had left the track until the cars began to pile up. This occurred exactly at 8 o'clock There was nothing unusual in the rate at which the train was running at the time of the accident. Twenty miles per hour was schedule time and no instructions had been given as to this particular point. He was acquainted with the deceased men, Johnson, and Ferguson, and saw them immediately after the train stopped. He could not say if Johnson was dead at that time, as they could not get to the engine for the steam. He could hear Ferguson moaning, but it was impossible to render assistance, though every effort was made. Possibly he lived an hour but witness did not think he was conscious after he was struck. Dicker was alan to all appearances killed instantly. Witness did not know Dicker at all. The last time at the Brampton station before the train left and again after he was killed. He had no business on the engine, it being against the distinct instructions of the company for strangers to board a freight train. When the engine was examined the lever was reversed and he believed the deceased men in endeavoring to avert the accident. In reply to questions from jurors witness explained that there were two whistles given before reaching the crossing. The distance of the engine from the crossing, when the first whistle was given, would be fully 80 rods. After this the whistles for cattle on the track and the down brakes were given, and there was ample time for the cow to have been driven off the crossing if she had been in charge of any person. It was impossible to see the crossing from the point where the first whistle was given owing to the curve.

Henry Pinchin, Toronto Junction, was the next witness examined. He deposed that he was brakeman on the train in question, and generally corroborated the previous witness, particularly as to the whistles given and his belief that the deceased employes did all in their power to save the train. He added that the cow was struck right on the crossing, and the mark on the track showed that the engine had not even slackened speed. She left the animal in charge of her young sister and went to a neighboring mill a quarter of a mile away from the crossing. When on the way back she heard a sharp, long whistle and ran to the crossing as fast as she could not know where her sister was in relation to the approaching train, and fearing that she might be in danger whence thread faint and did and remember what she occurred till after it was all over. In reply to questions witness claimed that the cows had been down in the village all day and were not in the neighborhood of the track till they were being driven home just at the time the freight came along. Her sister had often driven the cows home before, and she had always considered her competent but would not express an opinion on that point now. It was the custom in the village to allow cattle to graze on the highway in the early spring until the pastures opened. She only left her cows a short time to go over to the mill.

"Maggie Carey, aged twelve, sister of the last witness, deposed that she was in charge of the cows for the time her sister was away. She did not see or hear the train till it was on the curve and the sudden whistle caused the cattle to start at a run towards home, which unfortunately was across the track. To do this they passed witness, and, unable to stop them, she ran away in the opposite direction.

Elmer Smith, a lad eleven years of age, swore that he was near the crossing and, hearing the whistle, looked up in time to see the cow running across the track and the engine strike her. The train did not appear to leave the rails, but the rise of the ground hid it from his view after running the distance it did before it was ditched.

The case was then given to the jury, who were out only about fifteen minutes when they returned the following verdict:—"We the jury after carefully considering the evidence consider the occurrence purely accidental, and that no blame can be attached to the train hands or officials, believing they did all they could and would bring in a verdict to that effect."

CONFIRMATION SERVICES.—His lordship Bishop Hamilton, of Hamilton, will hold confirmation services in St. Mark's church at 8 o'clock on Monday evening next. A large number of candidates will be confirmed.

UNCLE TOM COMING.—Harerly's great Uncle Tom's Cabin Co., will hold the boards in the town hall on Thursday, June 4th. A great company, with great scenery, will play this piece as it has never been played before in Orangeville.

POSTPONED.—The annual meeting of the Cardwell Conservative Association, which was to be held at Mono Mills on Tuesday, June 9, has been postponed until Saturday, June 13. R. S. White, M. P., will be present, and a large attendance is requested.

A NEW DEPARTURE.—The Toronto World has commenced the publication of a Saturday night edition which will contain Saturday's news and a large amount of special reading matter. The people of the Queen City should do their share towards supporting the enterprise.

WE WANT A BAND.—Orangeville should have a band. This fact was fully illustrated when the Toronto excursionists alighted from the train on Monday morning. No band was there to strike up a lively tune when the train pulled into the station and altogether it looked as if the visitors were coming to Clamtown. What has the band committee done? If something is not done soon Alton will be laughing at us!

BOOKS.—Mr. Lee, of the Tuesday afternoon 14-year old Tommy Richard gave, who lives with his parents in the East ward, met with a very unfortunate accident. Tommy was in the act of dismounting a ladder when he fell backwards, his leg going through the round. The force of the fall snapped Tommy's leg as if it had been a pipestem. Dr. Lewis was called in and extended to the boy's injuries, but is still some weeks before Tommy will be able to be out again.

A POPULAR MINISTER.—The Hamilton Mith correspondent of the Toronto Economist pays the following compliment to Rev. M. L. Pearson, pastor of the Methodist church here: The Rev. M L Pearson, the retiring chairman of Orangeville District, presided at the Educational service last Sunday morning, selecting as his text 2nd Cor. xii. 2 4. The exposition was scholarly and highly appreciated by the congregation. The rev. gentleman will always have a warm welcome here. Rev. J. T. Caldwell supplied his pulpit in Orangeville.

HORSE CUT TO PIECES.—About 5 o'clock on Friday morning a G. P. R. freight train from Toronto struck a horse belonging to Milkman Rock in the lower end of the yard and killed it almost instantly. After the animal had been struck by the engine it was carried a distance of thirty yards and mangled in a horrible manner. The horse had been put in a field next the track and as the fences are very poorly constructed along there it soon found its way onto the rails. The animal was worth about $100, and it is said Mr Rock will sue the company for that amount.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE OFFICIALS.—The annual meeting of the members of the mechanics' institute was held in the reading room on Thursday evening and the following officials were elected: W. Hewat, president; Alex. Johnston, 1st vice-president; A. Turner, 2nd vice president; R. E Denison, secretary-treasurer; J McLaren, J. Foulds, A. Steele, C B. Dorland, J. C. Fox, N. Gordon, R. H. Young, W Wallace, R. Mann, directors; W. Johnston, T. Mac Adam, auditors. A meeting of the directors is called for 7.30 o'clock this evening. The affairs of the institute are in an excellent condition and after purchasing a number of new books, their still remains in the treasury a balance of nearly $200.

PIGS WERE IN IT.—Saturday's police court was not as lively as it might have been all owing to the absence of P. M. Pattullo. Only one case was tried and several more were held over. Justices of the peace McKinnon and Lamont were on the bench and discharged their duties fairly well. The case tried was a charge against James Montgomery, who resides in East Garafraxa, just outside the corporation, for allowing pigs to run at large contrary to a bylaw of the town. Mr. Montgomery explained that it was a little spite work of one of his neighbors, as the pigs were so small they could get out between the fence rails. He admitted the pigs were on the road and there was nothing else to do but impose a fine of $1 and costs, which amounted to $4 75 including the fine.

TROUBLE AT THE DANCE HOUSE.—Among the people who were enjoying themselves dancing in the town hall on Monday afternoon was a young lady of this town. As is sometimes the case, this young lady's papa is strongly against dancing and it hurt his feelings to a very great extent when he was informed that his daughter was indulging in this pastime. The irate parent was not very long in forming a plan of campaign, which he quickly put in action. He armed himself with a cane and straightway marched to the hall. Out onto the floor he went and grabbed the girl and led her from the ballroom. A crowd blocked the doorway and several men held the indignant father. During the excitement the giddy girl escaped and it is safe to say did not return to finish the dance. Other parents would probably have pursued the same course if they had but known with whom their daughters were associating.

ALTON IS ANGRY.—The people of the little village of Alton are a very enterprising class and no less than two great celebrations will satisfy them this year. They say they will retaliate against Orangeville for holding a "celebration" on the Queen's birthday by having a big demonstration in Alton on Dominion day, and we believe they are preparing for it now. If the Altonites had only dropped around here on the 25th they would have seen a number of disgusted visitors wandering aimlessly up and down Broadway and patiently waiting until the train would take them back to their Toronto home. Our Alton friends should remember that the citizens of Orangeville are not responsible for the "celebration" here on Monday. We have only one gigantic day and that is the 1st of July. THE SUN has always been opposed to selfishness and we think the people of Alton are making a mistake by their proposed retaliatory celebration.

THEY ADJOURNED TO FIGHT.—Two local toughs got all tangled up in a row in one of the hotels on Monday evening, but could not find room enough to have a good old fashioned fight. To settle the matter their seconds agreed to go outside the corporation limits and settle the dispute in a satisfactory manner. The terms of agreement ran through the crowd like wildfire and in half-a-minute a procession of two or three hundred men and boys were making up Broadway and the tramp of their feet told plainer than words that something extraordinary was about to occur. The line of march was up the south side of Broadway to Bythia street, thence down Bythia to the cove near Stevenson's carding mill. There they thought they were safe from Orangeville law and a ball was made. A ring was hastily formed and the principals prepared for battle. But just as they were about to commence hostilities Chief of Police Shields and Constable Hubbard appeared on the scene and politely informed the rabble they were in the town of Orangeville and if any fisticuffs were indulged in the men would be arrested. This stern command had the desired effect and the fight was indefinitely postponed.

ORANGEVILLE DISTRICT

The Methodist Church Shows to be in Prosperous Condition.

The annual district meeting was held in the Methodist church, Orangeville on Thursday and Friday last. There was a large representation of ministers and lay representatives. The chair of the district, Rev M. L. Pearson, presided. Rev. J. Long was elected secretary and Rev. James McDonald assistant. The reports showed that over the district there has been a prosperity during the year. There was a considerable increase in the membership and all the funds are in advance.

The young men who are probationers, W. W. Walker and W. Dean, were recommended to the conference for continued on trial. J. S. Noble and K. J. Hart, B A, who have been preaching during the year under the direction of the chairmen, are recommended to be received on trial. Several other young men are also applying to become probationers. The case of Rev. James Thompson, who has been suspended, occupied the attention of the meeting for several hours, and was finally referred to conference.

Thirty lay representatives were elected to the conference and the following appointments were made to the various conference committees:

Stationing committee, H. McTaggart; missionary committee, Sheriff Boyd; S. S. committee Rev H Harper; Mr. Kelliam; Epworth League committee, W. C. Washington, M. A., and J. Saltona.

A resolution of sympathy with Charles Ford, of Alton circuit, on the lay representatives, who was detained on the morning of the first day of the meeting of his estimable Christian wife, was passed, and another resolving the members of Parliament representing these ridings to vote for Jamieson's resolution.

A GENUINE FIZZLE!

THE 1000 UNIFORMED MEN NUMBER LESS THAN 50.

Several Hotelkeepers in the Soup.

DID THE BATTALION REALLY WANT TO COME HERE?

Tramping Broadway and Dancing the Only Entertainment Provided.

It was a fizzle!

And it was several hundred times worse than Toronto's grand summer carnival!

We refer to the alleged "big time" in Orangeville on Monday, May 25.

A couple of weeks ago glaring posters announced that 1000 uniformed members of the Toronto Orange Battalion would visit Orangeville on the Queen's birthday. Accordingly several of the citizens met and appointed a committee to solicit subscriptions from merchants, printers and divers other business men to defray the expense of the undertaking and somewhere in the neighborhood of $30 was realized in this way.

The morning of the 25th dawned as beautiful as anyone could desire, and about 11 o'clock a special train bearing the excursionists pulled into the C. P. R. station. When the puffing engine came to a standstill 49 (not 1000) uniformed members of the corps and about 75 Torontonians marched up town. No band was at the station to receive them and it there had not been two fife and drum bands with the visitors silence would have reigned supreme. They marched from the station to the market square, where several speakers delivered addresses. After the orators were through dinner was announced, and after dinner there was nothing else to do but walk around town or go to the town hall and dance.

Three of the hotels did a rushing business, but the remaining six did not rake in many more dimes than they would on an ordinary day.

No preparation had been made to entertain the visitors and the few that did come were heartily sick of the "celebration." Had it not been for the country people, who came to town in great numbers, Orangeville would have presented a very sad sight.

When the delegates were in town three weeks ago it was agreed to give the battalion $75, providing the 1000 came. As only 49 members came the committee objected to paying $75, but offered them $50. The boys wouldn't accept this amount, and so the matter stands.

Nearly all the hotels made special preparations to receive the visitors who didn't come, and consequently a large stock of provisions remains unmasticated.

The special train left for the city at 8 o'clock, and our "great day" was over.

Caught in a Shaft.

A FREQUENT source of accident is found in shafting. Great care should be used and a supply of Hagyard's Yellow Oil kept on hand in case of wounds, bruises, sprains, burns or scalds. It is the prompteest pain reliever obtainable.

ORANGEVILLE DISTRICT.

The Methodist Church Shown to be in a Prosperous Condition.

The annual district meeting was held in the Methodist church, Orangeville, on Thursday and Friday last. There was a large representation of ministers and lay representatives. The chairman of the district, Rev. M. L. Pearson, presided. Rev. J. Long was elected secretary and Rev. James McDonald assistant. The reports showed that all over the district there has been prosperity during the year. There is a considerable increase in the membership and all the funds are in advance.

The young men who are probationers, W. W. Walker and W. Dean, were recommended to the conference to be continued on trial. J. S. Noble and K. J. Hart, B. A., who have been preaching during the year under the direction of the chairman, are recommended to be received on trial. Four other young men are also applying to become probationers. The case of Rev. James Thompson, who has been suspended, occupied the attention of the meeting for several hours, and was finally referred to conference.

Thirty lay representatives were elected to the conference and the following appointments were made to the various conference committees:

Stationing committee, H. McTavish; missionary committee, Sheriff Bowlby; S. S. committee, Rev. H. Harper and Mr. Kellham; Epworth League committee, W. C. Washington, M. A., and J. Saltons.

A resolution of sympathy with Mr. Charles Ford, of Alton circuit, one of the lay representatives, who was deprived on the morning of the first day of the meeting of his estimable Christian wife, was passed and another requesting the members of Parliament representing these ridings to vote for Mr. Jameson's resolution.

CHARLESTON.

Caledon court of revision will meet in the court house here on Monday next.

A number of our residents spent the Queen's Birthday at Orangeville and Alton.

Mr. Jos. Warnock has purchased from Mr. D. Taylor the residence near the court house.

Mr. Wm. Keeler has returned home from British Columbia. Mr. K. did not like the country.

The members of the A. O. U. W. lodge attended divine service in the Presbyterian church in full regalia on Sunday last. Rev. A. Wilson, who belongs to the order, delivered an excellent sermon which was listened to with great attention by all present.

Mr. Wm. Stubbs, V. S., has leased the dwelling house near the fair ground from Mrs. Geo. Wanless, where he will shortly take up his residence.

Mrs. Ford, wife of Mr. Thos. Ford, died on Wednesday last week at her residence, lot 8, 2nd con., west, after a short illness, in the 46 year of her age. Deceased was a daughter of Mr. Edward Lovens of Hockley, and has been a resident of Caledon for many years. Mr. Ford and family have the sympathy of all. The remains were interred in Snell's church burying ground, Mono, and was largely attend, the religious services being conducted by Rev. Mr. Washington.

VICTIMS BURIED.

The Remains of Engineer Johnson and Fireman Ferguson Laid at Rest.

The funeral of Engineer Robert Gill Johnson, one of the victims of the Cheesville disaster, took place from the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. James Keys, at 2 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon to the Town cemetery. The funeral was very largely attended, as deceased was well known and popular in Orangeville. His remains were laid beside those of his wife and child, who died nearly two years ago. Rev. D. C. Hossack, pastor of St. Andrew's church, conducted religious services both at the house and grave.

Deceased was born in Toronto on the 12th of October, 1863, and had been employed on the G. P. R. for 14 years. He was one of the best known drivers on the road and was always kind-hearted and genial. Mr. Johnson was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, but, unfortunately carried no insurance. Deceased leaves one son, Harry, a bright little lad of 4, a mother, one sister and six brothers to mourn his loss.

The funeral of the fireman, James Galt Ferguson, started from his father's residence, in the East ward shortly after 3 o'clock. The cortege was similar to that which followed the engineer's remains to the grave, and the interment took place in a nice plot in the Forest Lawn cemetery. Deceased was a native of this town, having been born here 27 years ago. He had been employed on the road over five years and was rapidly advancing himself from one position to another. He was a member of the A. O. U. W. lodge and carried an insurance of $2000. "Jim" was known and respected by everybody and his sad death was a terrible shock to his friends. A father, mother, one brother and three sisters survive him, and they have the sympathy of the community in their sad bereavement.

A stately edifice is raising out of the ashes of Reeve Alton's barn. Last Monday work was begun in the erection of a new barn, which will be superior to any in this section of the country. The dimensions of the building are 42 x 100 feet, with a stone foundation and stables underneath. Wm. Ashcroft has the contract for the stone work and Among all the pleasing events that have taken place around here there was none more pleasing than that which occurred at the residence of Mr. Wm. Allen on Wednesday evening of last week, when his young and accomplished daughter, Miss Martha, was married to Mr. George Leighton, son of Mr. Joseph Leighton, of Cardwell. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Burt, pastor of the Herald Angel church, in the presence of a select company of relatives and friends of the contracting parties. Mr. Joseph Jackson of Cardwell supported the groom, while Miss Alice Farrow of Toronto waited on the bride, both bride and bridesmaid being gorgeously attired. At the dejeuner as the wedding cake was distributed Mr. Jas. Jackson proposed the health of the bride and was followed by Rev. Mr. Burt, who hoped that the bride's wedded life would be as bright as sunshine (which just at the moment burst in upon the newly married pair) and that her joys might be as good and substantial as the gigantic cake of which they were partaking. On Sunday the wedding party attended divine service at Cardwell, of which congregation very many of their friends are members. THE SUN extends its congratulations.

CARDWELL.

Some of our residents who were not lured to town on the 25th repaired to Canning's Falls where without premeditation quite a number of friends met and formed one Queen's birthday party, picnicking in true style on a patch of land easily accessible. This over, the exploration of the Victoria Grotto was fully accomplished, and after the visitors had retired the initiation of any twenty lads and lasses into the "Mono Waders" duly came off—the public portion of which one only be viewed, as over the brink of the immense cliff, which causes the Falls, is seen the merry company, dancing the slippery foothold beneath the waters, the orage, the deeper pools, and windings above. The whole party immensely enjoyed the Falls, the lower cascades, the cave, the adorn, the and rag—while one with his Winchester brought to a stand the wary denizens of the jungle. The company met in the Lodge at about 8 p. m. when the evening closed with prayers for Queen and Country and all sang lustily the concluding National Anthem.

In our churches the coding of divine service consisted of prayers from the "Accession Service" and the singing most heartily God Save the Queen! A special sermon on "Loyalty, Thanksgiving and Charity" was preached in addition to the above pleasing incidents in St. Alban's to the Ancient order of United Workmen.

Orangeville, May 6th.

Some leather's mean. Some workmen are mean. Some shoe sellers are mean. That's how mean shoes get made and sold.

Six out of every ten pairs of shoes are shams—pasted stock, "pancakes." Bits of useless leather are pressed and made into insoles, just as bits of useless wool are carded with long cotton and made into shoddy.

Never was a time when shoes looked so well and were so badly, until the shoeing of a whole family has come to be a serious task. There's no reason for mean shoes. Some shopkeepers see a reason for them in their cheapness, but if that's so, the meaner they're made, the better. (The wearer wouldn't tolerate that reason for a moment). The only room for them is the room they usurp, and the saving is a saving at the spigot to waste at the bung.

And the remedy?

There's a store where you can't buy shoddy shoes, because they don't sell them; where they have neither two prices nor two names for the same thing; where American kid doesn't pass for French, and machine sewed doesn't masquerade as hand-sewed.

It's here. None but the best at the lowest prices, though best only means with what restrictions of price that're necessary.

For the men there's a good seamless Bal. for $1.75, and a better at $2.50, good enough to get married in. For the ladies here's some nice Dongola Shoes, Bals. and Button'd, at $2.75, the J. D. K. make (none better), as well as Toe Slippers at 85c., and Dong. Oxfords at $1.25, with childrens' shoes galore. There's no better for the money anywhere. We don't know how to sell "poor" shoes. More than that, we don't want to know.

You can get a Lady's fine Button Boot of us at 90c. a pair.

TRUST.

If thou dost find cold spirits hearts unkind,
Let this not vex thy compassionate mind
To think all are alike; it is not so,
For still on earth the warmth of love doth glow.

If thou shalt meet with falsehood, coolly dealt,
Let this not to thy spirit depth be felt,
For all men are not false; truth doth still
Abide on earth and work her righteous will.

If thou shalt trust to friends who treachery plan,
Full sore thou art of faith with every man,
For honor liveth; and then yet shalt thou
The power that lies in a friend's faithfulness.

There is no evil that can thee befall,
If thou shalt save thy spirit from the thrall
Of bitterness, suspicion and despair,
And quickly place in higher, purer air.

Have faith in God; he bids the tempest cease,
He hills thy rising waves of woe to peace.
Have faith in him who guides thy life, and then
Thou shalt both love and trust thy fellow men.

THE QUESTION OF SLEEP.

The latest authority on the vexed question of sleep, Dr. Molina, says that the proper amount of sleep to be taken by a man is eight hours. So far as regards city life, the estimate is probably correct. Proverbial wisdom does not apply to modern conditions of social existence.

"Five (hours) for a man, seven for a woman, and nine for a pig," says one proverb; and a second quoted by Mr. Hazlitt in his "English Proverbs," declares that Nature requires five; custom gives (allows) seven; laziness takes nine, and wickedness eleven." These conclusions seem, however, drawn from observations of country life. Physical fatigue is more easily overcome than intellectual. Men, however, who follow any intellectual pursuit are exceptionally fortunate if the processes of restoration occupy less than seven hours. More frequently they extend to eight and nine hours. Kant, it is stated, took never less than seven hours. Goethe owned to requiring nine. Soldiers and sailors, on the other hand, like laborers, do with a much less quantity.

Sleep is closely connected with the question of diet; "good sleeping" was a noticeable feature in the large majority of Dr. Hompfrey's cases. Sound, refreshing sleep is of the utmost consequence to the health of the body, and no substitute can be found for it as a restorer of vital energy. Sleeplessness is, however, often a source of great trouble to elderly people, and which is not easily relieved. Narcotic remedies are generally mischievous; their first effects may be pleasant, but the habit of depending upon them rapidly grows until they become indispensable. When this stage has been reached, says Dr. Robson Roose, the sufferer is in a far worse plight than before. In all cases the endeavor should be made to discover whether the sleeplessness be due to any removable cause, such as indigestion, cold, want of exercise, and the like. With regard to sleeping in the daytime, there is something to be said both for and against that practice. A nap of "forty winks" in the afternoon enables many aged people to get through the rest of the day in comfort, whereas they feel tired and weak when deprived of this refreshment. If they rest well at night, there can be no objection to the afternoon nap; but, if sleeplessness be complained of, the latter should be discontinued for a time. Most old people find that a reclining posture, with the feet and legs raised, is better than the horizontal position for the afternoon nap. Digestion proceeds with more ease than when the body is recumbent.

A Canadian Case.

The case of Mrs. E. A. Storey, of Shetland, Ont., is remarkable proof of the efficacy of Burdock Blood Bitters in Headache. She writes: "For over 40 years I was a martyr to headache, having severe attacks about once a week. Have now used 3 bottles of B.B.B. and have had no attack for 4 or 5 months."

A FORTUNE PAID FOR BOARD.—Sixty thousand dollars in board and lodging is pretty steep, but that is what Frank Parmelee, the omnibus man, has paid the Grand Pacific Hotel, Chicago. He sat down to the first meal placed on the table. He has not missed a meal in seventeen years, except when he was out of the city. He is seventy four years old, but he is as active and energetic as a boy. Probably the cuisine of the Grand Pacific is responsible for Mr. Parmelee's health, and vigor, and perhaps the credit should be given to the wonderful digestive apparatus which he has concealed about his person. Mr. Parmelee eats two meals each day in dining-room, and one meal during the night. For fifty years he has never failed to awaken in the middle of the night and refresh himself with a square meal of lobster salad, cold sausage and mince pie.—Chicago Herald.

"My friends," remarked the minister, "the collection today will be devoted to my travelling expenses, for I am going away for my health—the more I receive the longer I can stay"—and, strange to say, the largest collection ever made was taken up. This did not happen in Orangeville.

An amateur gardner, who is commencing to gain experience, has made the discovery. Don't plant your punkins too near your neighbor's fence. If you do, the vine will crawl through, and the very best punkin you have will grow on the wrong side of the fence.

UMBRELLA REQUISITE.

A man just back from a visit to Germany says:

"The only way to stop this dangerous practice of carrying canes and umbrellas horizontally too long been known to the people of Berlin. There a man no sooner tooks his walking stick under his arm than he feels a quick blow on it from behind. In either drops to the pavement or assumes the only proper and safe position in which a stick should be carried.

"There is no use of his getting angry with the person who struck the blow, or in his trying to by him up, for public opinion is with the perpetrator of the barbarous and indefensible practice of which I speak.

"I have seen dozens of Americans treated to this discipline in Unter den Linden, while they were endangering the lives and discommoding the bodies of the crowds there. Most of them whirled about with fight bristling all over them, but a glance or two at the angry faces around them usually sufficed to calm them down."

The Single Tax.

The single tax may relieve poverty but as a remedy for painful ailments it cannot compare with Rheumatic Oil, the old reliable cure for rheumatism, neuralgia, croup, sore throat, lumbago, colds and inflammatory diseases.

FARMING FOR PROFIT.

One farmer has 100 bushels of wheat on three acres and his neighbor has 100 bushels on ten acres. The income is the same in both cases, but how about the profit? This matter of income and profit needs to be studied over more. If you own your farm, stock and tools it doesn't matter so much; but if your farming must support your family and pay debts, you must to look out, and grow all crops at a profit. The right way is to undertake no more than you can reasonably expect to do thoroughly well. There is no half way work in any line. The world is full of ordinary. Do just a little better, and then you are on the road up.

GET THE BEST.—J. J. White, the agricultural implement man, has received another shipment of binders, mowers, horse rakes, hay forks and sheaf slings. A most varied and complete stock of carriages, buggies, phaetons, wagons, etc. When you want anything in this line, all you have to do is to go to J. J. White and get the best made.

THE QUESTION OF SLEEP.

The latest authority on the vexed question of sleep, Dr. Molina, says that the proper amount of sleep to be taken by a man is eight hours. So far as regards city life, the estimate is probably correct. Proverbial wisdom does not apply to modern conditions of social existence.

"Five (hours) for a man, seven for a woman, and nine for a pig," says one proverb; and in second quoted by Mr. Hazlitt in his "English Proverbs," declares that Nature requires five; custom gives (nine) seven; laziness takes nine, and wickedness eleven." These conclusions were, however, drawn from observations of country life. Physical fatigue is more easily overcome than intellectual. Men, however, who follow any intellectual pursuit are exceptionally fortunate if the processes of restoration occupy less than seven hours. More frequently they extend to eight and nine hours. Kant, it is stated, took never less than seven hours. Goethe owned to requiring nine. Soldiers and sailors, on the other hand, like laborers, do with a much less quantity.

Sleep is closely connected with the question of diet; "good sleeping" was a noticeable feature in the large majority of Dr. Humphrey's cases. Sound, refreshing sleep is of the utmost consequence to the health of the body, and no substitute can be found for it as a restorer of vital energy. Sleeplessness is, however, often a source of great trouble to elderly people, and which is not easily relieved. Narcotic remedies are generally mischievous; their first effects may be pleasant, but the habit of depending upon them rapidly grows until they become indispensable. When this stage has been reached, says Dr. Robson Roose, the sufferer is in a far worse plight than before. In all cases the endeavor should be made to discover whether the sleeplessness be due to any removable cause, such as indigestion, cold, want of exercise, and the like. With regard to sleeping in the daytime, there is something to be said both for and against that practice. A nap of "forty winks" in the afternoon enables many aged people to get through the rest of the day in comfort, whereas they feel tired and weak when deprived of this refreshment. If they rest well at night, there can be no objection to the afternoon nap; but, if sleeplessness be complained of, the latter should be discontinued for a time. Most old people find that a reclining posture, with the feet and legs raised, is better than the horizontal position for the afternoon nap. Digestion proceeds with more ease than when the body is recumbent.

A Canadian Case.

The case of Mrs. E. A. Storey, of Shetland, Ont., is remarkable proof of the efficacy of Burdock Blood Bitters in Headache. She writes: "For over 40 years I was a martyr to headache, having severe attacks about once a week. Have now used 3 bottles of B.B.B. and have had no attack for 4 or 5 months."

A FORTUNE PAID FOR BOARD.—Sixty thousand dollars in board and lodging is pretty steep, but that is what Frank Parmelee, the omnibus man, has paid the Grand Pacific Hotel, Chicago. He sat down to the first meal placed on the table. He has not missed a meal in seventeen years, except when he was out of the city. He is seventy-four years old, but he is as active and energetic as a boy. Probably the cuisine of the Grand Pacific is responsible for Mr. Parmelee's health and vigor, and perhaps the credit should be given to the wonderful digestive apparatus which he has concealed about his person. Mr. Parmelee eats two meals each day in dining-room, and one meal during the night. For fifty years he has never failed to awaken in the middle of the night and refresh himself with a square meal of lobster salad, cold sausage and mince pie.—Chicago Herald.

"My friends," remarked the minister, "the collection today will be devoted to my travelling expenses, for I am going away for my health—the more I receive the longer I can stay"—and, strange to say, the largest collection ever made was taken up. This did not happen in Orangeville.

An amateur gardner, who is commencing to gain experience, has made this discovery. Don't plant your punkins too near your neighbor's fence. If you do, the vine will crawl through, and the very best punkin you have will grow on the wrong side of the fence.

The Single Tax.

The single tax may relieve poverty but as a remedy for painful ailments it cannot compare with Rheumatic Cure Oil, the only reliable cure for rheumatism, neuralgia, croup, sore throat, lumbago, colds and inflammatory diseases.

FARMING FOR PROFIT.

One farmer has 100 bushels of wheat on three acres and his neighbor has 100 bushels on ten acres. The income is the same in both cases, but how about the profit? This matter of income and profit needs to be studied over more. If you own your farm, stock and tools it doesn't matter so much; but if your farming must support your family and pay debts, you want to look out, and know all drops at a profit. The right way is to undertake no more than you can reasonably expect to do thoroughly well. There is no half-way work in any line. The world is full of ordinary. ## Poetry.

A QUERY.

Did you think, oh, my darling, your coldness can sever
The chords which have bound you for years to my heart—
That the strong cords of fate, shut between us forever,
Could sunder our souls, or our lives, for aught?

Did you think that I held you so lightly, my treasure—
The world's little joys for your loss could atone,
Or that your shallow heart, by its aching, can measure
The depth of my love by the depth of your own?

Ah, no! there are depths which you never have sounded,
Far down in my heart lies the pearls of the sea;
And the strength of my feelings can never be bounded
By time, or by change, or by absence from thee.

Did you think that the bonds of affection were welded
As silken and frail as the curl of your hair,
To snap like a thread when the brief dream was ended,
And leave us as free as the fetterless air?

Did you think that I held you so lightly, my treasure,
That to lose you would cost me no atom of pale,
Or call from your heart, 'mid fashion and pleasure,
One sigh of regret for the old days again?

Down deep in my heart I have hidden my sorrow,
False to your vows and false to your trust;
Go call up your pride, it is needed to screen us,
For love and its hopes are now deep in the grave.

Ah! is it well that I still must remember
The things it were wiser by far to forget;
The roses of May, 'mid the snows of December,
The hopes that have passed into deathless regret?

The Story Teller.

OLIVE VARCOE

—OR—

TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER VI. (Continued.)

"DON'T annoy yourself for that, Olive," said he. "Let them wait; and perhaps they are not ringing for you; some other member of the family may be missing."

Olive glanced at him hurriedly.

"Oh, no, she cried—"they are ringing for me, only me, I am certain. Let us make haste."

"Take my arm, Olive," said Vigo. She took it, but only for a moment, for her hand dropped suddenly by her side, and she stood still.

"Hark! Do you hear anything?" she asked.

"No, I hear nothing," he replied.

"I hear it," she said—"a voice calling me, 'Olive—Olive!' I have heard it all these hours."

"My dear Olive you are ill—you are excited," said young Vigo. "There is not a sound in the wood. Even the bell has stopped now."

"Has it stopped?" she asked. "Why has it stopped? Good heavens! why has the bell stopped?"

"My poor Olive," said Charles; how nervous you are! I dare say Sir Hilton or his brother, for whom they were ringing, has come in, and I suppose—"

He hesitated, and then went on with a tinge of bitterness in his tone.

"I will say it out, Olive—I suppose you too insignificant a person in the household to ring for. Do you know, Olive, that for your sake I often hate them?"

"Do not hate the only friends I have—the only people who love me," she said. "I am a wild, wicked, ungrateful girl! Oh, how I have repaid them! I have always been the cause of hatred, bitterness, and sin! And now I am going away. I shall never see dear Trewavas again!"

"Is it for this you gave way to such keen distress, Olive?" said he. "Do you indeed love Trewavas so deeply?"

"It is my home, my only home," she replied; "and I am driven out of it, Mr. Vigo—driven out like Cain, to wander miserably on the earth!"

"No, Olive, never!" he returned. "My house awaits you; my house shall be yours. I love you better than my life! Give me your hand. Tell me that I may hope—"

Olive gazed at him with sad eyes. The fevered excitement of her manner seemed suddenly chastened into calmness.

"You know not what you do," she said in a sweet, low voice.

"I know right well, Olive," he replied; "I am asking you to be my wife."

"With all my faults and sins black on me, as they are this day?" she said, in a tone of constrained quiet.

"Yes," said he; "for I am not ignorant, Olive, that you have faults, but they arise from your position. You have been galled, and, like a proud steed, you have winced, and shown temper. In another position you will be another woman. Honored, respected, beloved, my life on it, Olive, you will show yourself outwardly as noble as I know you to be inwardly at heart."

Olive fixed her gaze on his face, till her eyes filled with tears.

"I shall never forget these words as long as I live," she said. "A moment ago, Mr. Vigo, and I was hesitating whether I would snatch at hope, safety, and honor, in your home, and give you in return my cold hand and my forced gratitude. No, I will never do you that great, that lasting wrong. I will never be to you that basest of the world's deceits, an unloving wife. But, Mr. Vigo, you shall be my friend; and may Heaven keep you from dishonor and disgrace in the same!"

Her unclouded eyes, fixed on his, chilled Charles Vigo's heart with a strange grief; they spoke of a deep gulf, a gulf, a grief which he could not measure.

"Is there no hope, Olive?" he asked. "Do not refuse me so resolutely. Let me wait; and, meanwhile, I will be your friend your brother. Oh, Olive, Olive!"

He utterly broke down, and hid his face from her, that she might not be pained by his grief.

"You, be my friend, my brother," she said, taking his hand in hers; "and who can tell how soon I may pay your affection to the test?"

"Commend me in all things, Olive," said he. "You shall find me better than a brother."

Olive regarded him earnestly with her deep, passionate eyes. The workings of her face, the trembling of her lips, told of some fearful agitation within; but she calmed herself to speak quietly.

"I believe you, Charles Vigo," she said; "and I will trust you."

"Trust me altogether, Olive," said he; "trust me with your life's happiness, and you shall never repent it."

Olive shook her head sadly.

"Why do you refuse?" pleaded her lover. "If Sir Hilton were not engaged to Miss Maristowe if he were not on the eve of marriage, I would never ask you. I should think an attachment between you inevitable, and I would stand aside and see him win you, without a murmur. But now when he not only chooses another lady, but to please her, refuses you any longer a home beneath his roof, how can I bear to suspect that, for love of him, you reject me?"

Olive was deadly pale and leant against a tree for support.

"Do not speak to me of Hilton," she said, faintly, with white lips. "He can never be anything to me more than he is. What do I say—more? No; he will be far less. In a little while I shall be an outcast and a stranger, and the very name of Trewavas will be a curse in my ears."

"Oh, Olive, you will not steal away from Trewavas, and not let me be your friend?" said Charles Vigo. "You will come to me for help, for counsel? Remember you have me a Knight defender of the Friendless. Here is my order. I am going to have it framed in gold."

He drew from his pocket the tiny end of crimson cord which Olive had given him in the billiard room; and as it flashed before her eyes a ghastly change came over her face, her knees shook, and her hands involuntary clutched his arm for support.

"I feel ill—I am faint," she said.

As young Vigo put his arm around her to support her, he saw that the cord, which she had worn as a girdle, was no longer round her waist. It was not a time to make a remark on so trivial a circumstance, so he held his peace.

"Will you rest here on the grass," he said, "and let me run to Trewavas for a carriage?"

"No, I will trouble no one at Trewavas," she replied. "I am better. I can walk now. Do leave me, Mr. Vigo. We are close to the house, and I would rather go in alone. Promise me that you will tell no one that we have met."

Thinking their meeting an affair that concerned only themselves, Charles Vigo readily gave this promise, wondering not a little at the fear she showed lest he should break his word.

"Thanks!" said Olive. "Good-bye, Mr. Vigo."

She held out her hand, and again her earnest look, her pale lips, her strange manner, affected the young man singularly. His fingers clasped hers, and as they stood there with joined hands, the echo of furious galloping reached their ears.

"That's a horse from Trewavas?" exclaimed young Vigo. "Whoever rides him is going at a tremendous pace. I trust there is no one ill."

He long remembered the look of Olive's face, and the clasp of her small fingers burning his hand

"You forget we are on Echo Hill," she said, with a sickly smile. "A canter echoed here sounds like the gallop of Death on the pale horse. Do not be alarmed; no ill will touch Trewavas."

"Nevertheless, I have a presentiment that something is wrong," said Charles Vigo. "Let me go with you."

"No, no; you will see that I am a witch," said Olive, making a ghastly effort to be playful. "No sorrow, no sickness, no shame, can come nigh Trewavas. Farewell! Adieu, good Bolster! Take care of your kind master."

She ran down the slope of the hill towards Trewavas, and as she went, the the great bell suddenly clanged out again, sending the boom of its heavy tongue far over the wood. The curious echo on this spot repeated the sounds and scattered them flying—flying down the leafy hill after Olive's swift steps, like messengers of doom.

There was a chill foreboding lying heavy at the heart of the lover, who watched her, which like a sympathetic chord vibrated to the note of the bell; and as the gloomy echoes floated out, dying—dying over Olive's head, he shuddered, and strained his eye longing to see her face again. He had his wish. At the park gates she turned, and as the last ray of sunset stone redly on her brow, and streaked her ebon hair with fire, she smiled, waved her hand to him, and vanished.

In the terror of his love he thanked her silently for that kiedly smile, and with a great load lifted off his heart, he went home through the dew. And yet ere another sun had set he cried bitterly to himself, "Oh, to think that she could smile."

CHAPTER VII.

The Lovers' Seat stood on the cliff, overlooking a tiny sheltered cove in the bay, on the silvery, glittering sands of which the waves broke ever gently. The cliffs here were a mass of foliage. Arbutus, almond, laurel, rhododendron, hawthorn, clung to the rocks, and flung their flowers in luxurious profusion, even to the water's edge.

Availing herself of the natural beauty of the place, Lady Trewavas had turned the face of the cliff into a garden. Winding walks climbed from the beach to the park above; and midway up, overhanging the sea, was the ledge of rock which tradition called the Lovers' Seat. An arbor had been formed here, and trailing plants hung all around it, while the platform on which it stood was, by gardening skill, covered with a mass of flowers.

From this point overhead one of the loveliest views in the West. Spread out below was the silver sheet of sands, and the clay cove, shut in by two sharp headlands, which, like a gateway, opened on the bay of Trewavas. The amphitheatre of hills and woods, the blue sky, the passing birds, the changing shadows of the day, all lay mirrored in this limpid sheet of blue green waters.

It was a lovely afternoon of the loveliest of summer days, when Sir Hilton parted with his friend at Trewavas Cliff and sailed across the bay towards the Lovers' Seat. The sea was azure glass, the sky a sapphire, the breeze came from the south, filling the sails with a soft rushing sound, while the ripple of the waves laved the sides of the little craft in loving moods, like the whisperings of mermaids floating upwards from the cool caves below. Life with the young baronet was calm and fair and smooth as the sea on which he sailed; and the murmurs of coming sorrow, like the beatings of the surf on the shore, only reached him at intervals, faintly. Thus dimly did he feel the danger of the air commanore he had created. On the whole he was tranquil and self-satisfied. He had resisted the temptation to commit a gigantic folly—the folly of an imprudent marriage; Eleanor had saved him from this; and if he was safe, the whole house of Trewavas was safe, and the entire family owed him gratitude.

And so in smooth sailing the prettily painted boat glided on, and the soft wind whistled and sung in the sails, and the waves kissed the keel in musical murmurings, whispering of cool depths, and sweet delights in the summer sea.

Nearer and yet nearer the shore drew towards them. Then, while the ray fell hot upon him, Sir Hilton shaded his eyes with his hand and looked upward over the steep green slope of that garden cliff, overhanging the sea.

"Eleanor is certainly waiting for me," he said.

As the thought spoke within him, he saw her. She sat on the rocky seat among the boughs and fresh green leaves with her face turned seawards. She was pale, and her hair hung loose upon her shoulders in a fashion he had never seen her wear it The folds of her lilac dress gleamed in dainty contrast against the shaded varied tints of green, her small hands crossed meekly on her bosom.

Sir Hilton waved his hand to her smiled; but, as the boat shot swiftly to shore, and the sun's rays that had shone hotly on him glanced past him to the east, the vision vanished.

"She is hiding behind the trees," he said to himself, softly. But his heart beat faster, and there was a vague fear upon him, which made the summer breeze feel chill.

The keel of the boat grated on the sands, and the old boatman sprang ashore, and held it while Sir Hilton with a shiver on him, stepped upon the land.

"Do not wait for me, Tregelles," said he; "I shall walk home through the park. Go back to the boat-house quietly, you are tired."

"It's so uncommon hot, your honor," said the old man.

"Is it?" said Sir Hilton; and, as he spoke, a cold shadow crept over him, and the vague fear that had touched him on the sea grew to a deadly horror that seemed to clutch his very heart. Battling with it, he went up the sands, his figure appearing and disappearing behind green trees and jutting rocks, as he climbed the winding paths upward to the Lovers' Seat. When he reached it, the place was bare and empty.

He waited, he lingered, he watched, he walked to and fro, dull fear hanging heavy on him; but Eleanor never came. And all the time he lingered, awaiting her step, he fought against an instinct that told him she would never come; he fought against a hot longing at his heart to rush away, and seek her in some wild, doomed place. And at last, as the old church, ivy-covered and embowered in trees, within the park, rang out from its grey steeple seven strokes, Sir Hilton turned away and strode homewards.

As he quitted the sound of the sea, and came upon the tall shadows lying silent round about the mansion, the sharp ring of a bell met him. With it came cheerful thoughts of daily life, with all its round of cares and comforts; all the smiling stream of home love and happiness, set in luxury and ease of riches, tempered by order and kindly rule; all the bright play, the music, and the dance of his youth, crowned with wealth and honor; all this passed before him, and made him glad.

"They wait dinner for me," he said, and his step grew quick and light. "That was a strange illusion the sun's rays made on the cliff. I will tell Eleanor I have seen her ghost."

In the hall Lady Trewavas met him.

"How late you are, Hilton!" said she. "And where is Eleanor? Is she gone up to dress? Her mother has been anxious; do not keep her out so late again, Hilton."

"I have not seen Eleanor," he replied.

"Not seen her?" said Lady Trewavas. "She left the house hours ago to walk to the Lovers' Seat to meet you."

"I was there a little after five, and waited until seven, and saw nothing of her," replied Sir Hilton.

Lady Trewavas and her grandson looked in each other's face. Both were pale; both felt in their hearts the shadow of that fear that had tortured Sir Hilton on the sea.

"Have you enquired of the servants?" he asked; "or has John seen her?"

"John has been in nearly all the afternoon," she replied. "He has not seen her since she quitted the house."

"Good Heavens! she has lost herself in the wood, or a viper has stung her!" he exclaimed; "or can she have approached too near the cliff, and fallen over!"

"Do not frighten yourself so easily," said Lady Trewavas, with assumed calmness. "She took a book with her, and doubtless she became absorbed in reading, and has forgotten the time. She will be here soon. I will have the great bell rung; she will hear that, even if she has strolled a great way from the house."

GRAND VALLEY.

(Local.)

The mill here has a lot of timber for manufacturing into ties, posts, lumber, shingles etc. A large quantity of material extends up the river for a couple of miles.

The East Garafraxa farmer, who lost a sum of nearly $100 while on a spree in this village two weeks ago, has not recovered the lost treasure as yet. It should be a warning to him and others who handle money in large amounts, to keep clear of the intoxicating draught.

At a meeting of the business men of Grand Valley, held in R. E. Hamilton's hall on Monday evening, the following agreement was signed by all present and we understand that it has since been signed by all the business men of the village. "We, the undersigned business men of Grand Valley, agree to close our respective places of business on and after June 1st at 7 o'clock in the evening with the exception of Wednesday and Saturday evenings and evenings before public holidays.

Mr. Geo Nodwell had the frame of his new bank barn raised on Friday afternoon. Mr. S. Tweedy and Mr. T. H. Hamilton our two popular auctioneers, were the captains. The race contest was lively, the battalion under command of Capt. Hamilton winning the fight by active work in the combat. The opposition claim they were the winners as the east wing did not complete their work—a rafter being left out to the cold. However, nobody was hurt and good feeling prevailed. Mr. G. McBride was the framer and everything went together nicely. The raising was well represented by the ladies of this place and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Nodwell.

SHELBURNE.

(From Free and Economist.)

Mr. John Fisher, mayor, and Ald. Thos. Moore, of North Toronto, were in town last week inspecting our waterworks system.

Mrs. Constable, wife of Mr. James Constable, formerly of Shelburne, died at the Home for Incurables in Toronto on Friday last. The deceased was a daughter of Mr James King, formerly of Amaranth.

Dr. Blair left Shelburne Monday morning for Montreal, from which place he sailed yesterday in the Allan line steamer Parisian for Liverpool—He will spend several months attending the great hospitals in London and Dublin.

On Tuesday last James House, of Horning's Mills, appeared before Magistrate Dunbar, here, on the charge of committing injury to property by fishing in the waters of Horning's Mills lake on May 1st, the said lake having passed into the hands of a company. W. L. Walsh appeared for plaintiff; A. A. Hughson, of the same place, for the defendant. A number of witnesses were heard. At the request of counsel the magistrate reserved his decision until the 29th inst. There appears to be a good deal of illfeeling in regard to the control of this lake having been obtained by so many 'outsiders,' as some of the gentlemen who belong to the company are styled. Monday night the company's boat house and all its contents were burned. The respectable portion of the community, however, feel that this last act of the company's opponents is an outrage that cannot be countenanced, and they hope that, for the sake of the good name the place has hitherto enjoyed, the guilty parties will be brought to justice.

TWO BEAUTIFUL YOUNG GIRLS.

Who will Create a Furore in Newport this summer.

Newport is to have a sensation this summer. It is authentically stated that the beautiful and celebrated daughters of Lord Dufferin, Beatrice and Adelaide, are to grace this famous resort with their presence this coming season.

It will be remembered that Beatrice's beautiful dark eyes have played havoc lately with the heart of Albert, the eldest son of the Prince of Wales. What it will amount to is as yet a matter of conjecture in England. The young ladies are acknowledged to be the most beautiful in all Europe, and there will be not a little excitement in the hearts of our American belles over there coming. They are exquisite dressers, and their costumes will be marvels of curiosity. Unlike most ladies, they know exactly what is suited to them. Some time ago they sent for the chief designer of the Paris House of The New York and Paris Young Ladies Fashion Bazar, and selected forty costumes each, the cost of which will amount to thousands of pounds.

Through the courtesy of these young ladies we have been permitted to copy for The New York and Paris Young Ladies Fashion Bazar two of their most exquisite costumes which appear as figure 3 and 4 on the colored plate of the June number of this magazine, just out, and for which the publisher has issued, in the name of the American ladies, a card of thanks. It is rumored that the prince may follow the young ladies to Newport this summer. *The

—OR—

TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER VI. (Continued.)

"Don't annoy yourself for that, Olive," said he. "Let them wait; and perhaps they are not ringing for you; some other member of the family may be missing."

Olive glanced at him hurriedly.

"Oh, no, she cried—"they are ringing for me, only me, I am certain. Let us make haste."

"Take my arm, Olive," said Vigo.

She took it, but only for a moment, for her hand dropped suddenly by her side, and she stood still.

"Hark! Do you hear anything?" she asked.

"No, I hear nothing," he replied.

"I hear it," she said—"a voice calling me, 'Olive—Olive!' I have heard it all these hours."

"My dear Olive you are ill—you are excited," said young Vigo. "There is not a sound in the wood. Even the bell has stopped now."

"Has it stopped?" she asked. "Why has it stopped? Good heavens! why has the bell stopped?"

"My poor Olive," said Charles; how nervous you are! I dare say Sir Hilton or his brother, for whom they were ringing, has come in, and I suppose—"

He hesitated, and then went on with a tinge of bitterness in his tone.

"I will say it out, Olive—I suppose you too insignificant a person in the household to ring for. Do you know, Olive, that for your sake I often hate them?"

Do not hate the only friends I have—the only people who love me," she said. "I am a wild, wicked, ungrateful girl! Oh, how I have repaid them! I have always been the cause of hatred, bitterness, and sin! And now I am going away. I shall never see dear Trewavas again!"

"Is it for this you gave way to such keen distress, Olive?" said he. "Do you indeed love Trewavas so deeply?"

"It is my home, my only home," she replied; "and I am driven out of it, Mr. Vigo—driven out like Cain, to wander miserably on the earth!"

"No, Olive, never!" he returned. "My house awaits you; my house shall be yours. I love you better than my life! Give me your hand. Tell me that I may hope—"

Olive gazed at him with sad eyes. The fevered excitement of her manner seemed suddenly chastened into calmness.

"You know not what you do," she said in a sweet, low voice.

"I know right well, Olive," he replied; "I am asking you to be my wife."

"With all my faults and sins black on me, as they are this day?" she said, in a tone of constrained quiet.

"Yes," said he; "for I am not ignorant, Olive, that you have faults, but they arise from your position. You have been galled, and, like a proud steed, you have winced, and shown temper. In another position you will be another woman. Honored, respected, beloved, my life on it, Olive, you will show yourself outwardly as noble as I know you to be inwardly at heart."

Olive fixed her gaze on his face, till her eyes filled with tears.

"I shall never forget those words as long as I live," she said. "A moment ago, Mr. Vigo, and I was hesitating whether I would snatch at hope, safety, and honor, in your home, and give you in return my cold hand and my forced gratitude. No, I will never do you that great, that lasting wrong. I will never be to you that barest of the world's deceits, an unloving wife. But, Mr. Vigo, you shall be my friend; and may Heaven keep you from dishonor and disgrace in the name!"

Her mournful eyes, fixed on his, chilled Charles Vigo's heart with a strange misery; they spoke of a deep grief, a pale, cold, pure shadow based, by the contrast, on that young mother heart, by the memory of a lost love.

"The depth of my love by the depth of your sorrow?

Ah, yes! there are depths which you never have sounded,
Far down in my heart like the pearls of the sea;
And the strength of my feelings can never be bounded
By time, or by change, or by absence from thee.
Did you think that the bonds of affection were cooled
As pillow and frail as the curl of your hair,
To snap like a thread when the brief dream was ended,
And leave as as free as the fetterless air?
Did you think that I held you as lightly, my treasure,
That to lose you would cost me no share of pain,
Or call from your heart, 'mid fashion and pleasure,
One sigh of regret for the old days again?
Down deep in my heart I have hidden my sorrow,
Paling to your vows and false to your trust,
Oh, from the waters of Lethe to borrow
One draught for the hopes that have sunk in the dust.
Ah! you were true ere distrust came between us,
And oh, I have trusted the heart which you gave;
Go call up your pride, it is needed to screen us,
For love and its hopes are now deep in the grave.
Ah! be it well that I still must remember
The things it were wiser by far to forget;
The roses of May, 'mid the snows of December,
The hopes that have passed into deathless regret?

"I believe you, Charles Vigo," she said; "and I will trust you."

"Trust me, altogether, Olive," said he; "trust me with your life's happiness, and you shall never repent it."

Olive shook her head sadly.

"Why do you refuse?" pleaded her lover. "If Sir Hilton were not engaged to Miss Marstowe if he were not on the eve of marriage, I would never ask you. I should think an attachment between you inevitable, and I would stand aside and see him win you, without a murmur. But now when he not only chooses another lady, but to please her, refuses you any longer a home beneath his roof, how can I bear to suspect that, for love of him, you reject me?"

Olive was deadly pale and leant against a tree for support.

"Do not speak to me of Hilton," she said, faintly, with white lips. "He can never be anything to me more than he is. What do I say—more? No; he will be far less. In a little while I shall be an outcast and a stranger, and the very name of Trewavas will be a curse in my ears."

"Oh, Olive, you will not steal away from Trewavas, and not let me be your friend?" said Charles Vigo. "You will come to me for help, for counsel? Remember you have me a Knight defender of the Friendless. Here is my order. I am going to have it framed in gold."

He drew from his pocket the tiny end of crimson cord which Olive had given him in the billiard room; and as it flashed before her eyes a ghastly change came over her face, her knees shook, and her hands involuntary clutched his arm for support.

"I feel ill—I am faint," she said.

As young Vigo put his arm around her to support her, he saw that the cord, which she had worn as a girdle, was no longer round her waist. It was not a time to make a remark on so trivial a circumstance, so he held his peace.

"Will you rest here on the grass," he said, "and let me run to Trewavas for a carriage?"

"No, I will trouble no one at Trewavas," she replied. "I am better. I can walk now. Do leave me, Mr. Vigo. We are close to the house, and I would rather go in alone. Promise me that you will tell no one that we have met."

Thinking their meeting an affair that concerned only themselves, Charles Vigo readily gave this promise, wondering not a little at the fear she showed lest he should break his word.

"Thanks!" said Olive. "Good-bye, Mr. Vigo."

She held out her hand, and again her earnest look, her pale lips, her strange manner, affected the young man singularly. His fingers clasped hers, and as they stood there with joined hands, the echo of furious galloping reached their ears.

"That's a horse from Trewavas?" exclaimed young Vigo. "Whoever rides him is going at a tremendous pace. I trust there is no one ill."

He long remembered the look of Olive's face, and the clasp of her small fingers burning his hand

"You forget we are on Echo Hill," she said, with a sickly smile. "A canter echoed here sounds like the gallop of Death on the pale horse. Do not be alarmed; no ill will touch Trewavas."

"Nevertheless, I have a presentiment that something is wrong," said Charles Vigo. "Let me go with you."

"No, no; you will see that I am a witch," said Olive, making a ghastly effort to be playful. "No sorrow, no sickness, no shame, can come nigh Trewavas. Farewell! Adieu, good Bolster! Take care of your kind master."

She ran down the slope of the hill towards Trewavas, and as she went, the the great bell suddenly clanged out again, sending the boom of its heavy tongue far over the wood. The curious echo on this spot repeated the sounds and scattered them flying—flying down the leafy hill after Olive's swift steps, like messengers of doom.

There was a chill foreboding lying heavy at the heart of the lover, who watched her, which like a sympathetic chord vibrated to the note of the bell; and as the gloomy echoes floated out, dying—dying over Olive's head, he shuddered, and strained his eye longing to see her face again. He had his wish. At the park gates she turned, and as the last ray of sunset shone redly on her brow, and streaked her ebon hair with fire, she smiled, waved her hand to him, and vanished.

In the fervor of his love he thanked her silently for that kindly smile, and with a great load lifted off his heart, he went home through the dew. And yet ere another sun had set he cried bitterly to himself, "Oh, to think that she could smile."

CHAPTER VII.

The Lovers' Seat stood on the cliff, over-looking a tiny sheltered cove in the bay, on the silvery, glistening sands of which the waves broke ever gently. The cliffs here were a mass of foliage. Arbutus, almond, laurel, rhododendron, hawthorn, clung to the rocks, and flung their flowers in luxurious profusion, even to the water's edge.

Availing herself of the natural beauty of the place, Lady Trewavas had turned the face of the cliff into a garden. Winding walks climbed from the beach to the park above; and midway up, overhanging the sea, was the ledge of rock which tradition called the Lovers' Seat. An arbor had been formed here, and trailing plants hung all around it, while the platform on which it stood was, by gardening skill, covered with a mass of flowers.

From this point overlooking one of the loveliest views in the West. Spread out below was the silver sheet of sands, the rocky cliffs, the twinkling of the tiny waves below. Life with the young harvest was calm and fair and smooth as the sea on which he sailed; and the current of coming sorrow, like the buetings of the surf on the shore, only reached him at intervals, faintly. Then dimly did he feel the danger of the circumstances he had created. On the whole he was tranquil and self-satisfied. He had resisted the temptation to commit a gigantic folly—the folly of an imprudent marriage; Eleanor had saved him from this; and if he was safe, the whole house of Trewavas was safe, and the entire family owed him gratitude.

And on in smooth sailing the prettily painted boat glided on, and the soft wind whistled and sung in the sails, and the waves kissed the keel in musical murmurings, whispering of cool depths, and sweet delights in the summer sea.

Nearer and yet nearer the shore drew towards them. Then, while the rays fell hot upon him, Sir Hilton shaded his eyes with his hand and looked upward over the steep green slope of that garden cliff, overhanging the sea.

"Eleanor is certainly waiting for me," he said.

As the thought spoke within him, he saw her. She sat on the rocky seat among the boughs and fresh green leaves with her face turned seawards. She was pale, and her hair hung loose upon her shoulders in a fashion he had never seen her wear it. The folds of her lilac dress gleamed in dainty contrast against the shaded varied tints of green, her small hands crossed meekly on her bosom.

Sir Hilton waved his hand to her; smiled; but, as the boat shot swiftly to shore, and the sun's rays that had shone hotly on him glanced past him to the east, the vision vanished.

"She is hiding behind the trees," he said to himself, softly. But his heart beat faster, and there was a vague fear upon him, which made the summer breeze feel chill.

The keel of the boat grated on the sands, and the old boatman sprang ashore, and held it while Sir Hilton with a shiver on him, stepped upon the land.

"Do not wait for me, Tregellas," said he; "I shall walk home through the park. Go back to the boat-house quietly, you are tired."

"It's so uncommon hot, your honor," said the old man.

"Is it?" said Sir Hilton; and, as he spoke, a cold shadow crept over him, and the vague fear that had touched him on the sea grew to a deadly horror that seemed to clutch his very heart. Battling with it, he went up the sands, his figure appearing and disappearing behind green trees and jutting rocks, as he climbed the winding paths upward to the Lovers' Seat. When he reached it, the place was bare and empty.

He waited, he lingered, he watched, he walked to and fro, dull fear hanging heavy on him; but Eleanor never came. And all the time he lingered, awaiting her step, he fought against an instinct that told him she would never come; he fought against a hot longing at his heart to rush away, and seek her in some wild, doomed place. And at last, as the old church, ivy-covered and embowered in trees, within the park, rang out from its grey steeple seven strokes, Sir Hilton turned away and strode homewards.

As he quitted the sound of the sea, and came upon the tall shadows lying silent round about the mansion, the sharp ring of a bell met him. With it came cheerful thoughts of daily life, with all its round of cares and comforts; all the smiling stream of home love and happiness, set in luxury and ease of riches, tempered by order and kindly rule; all the bright play, the music, and the dance of his youth, crowned with wealth and honor; all this passed before him, and made him glad.

"They wait dinner for me," he said, and his step grew quick and light. "That was a strange illusion the sun's rays made on the cliff. I will tell Eleanor I have seen her ghost."

In the hall Lady Trewavas met him.

"How late you are, Hilton!" said she. "And where is Eleanor? Is she gone up to dress? Her mother has been anxious; do not keep her out so late again, Hilton."

"I have not seen Eleanor," he replied.

"Not seen her?" said Lady Trewavas. "She left the house hours ago to walk to the Lovers' Seat to meet you."

"I was there a little after five, and waited until seven, and saw nothing of her," replied Sir Hilton.

Lady Trewavas and her grandson looked in each other's face. Both were pale; both felt in their hearts the shadow of that fear that had tortured Sir Hilton on the sea.

"Have you enquired of the servants?" he asked; "or has John seen her?"

"John has been in nearly all the afternoon," she replied. "He has not seen her since she quitted the house."

"Good Heavens! she has lost herself in the wood, or a viper has stung her!" he exclaimed; "or can she have approached too near the cliff, and fallen over!"

"Do not frighten yourself so easily," said Lady Trewavas, with assumed calmness. "She took a book with her, and doubtless she became absorbed in reading, and has forgotten the time. She will be here soon. I will have the great bell rung; she will hear that, even if she has strolled a great way from the house."

SHELBURNE.

(Free Press and Economist.)

Mr. John Fisher, mayor, and Ald. Thos. Moore, of North Toronto, were in town last week inspecting our waterworks system.

Mrs. Constable, wife of Mr. James Constable, formerly of Shelburne, died at the Home for Incurables in Toronto on Friday last. The deceased was a daughter of Mr. James King, formerly of Amaranth.

Dr. Blair left Shelburne Monday morning for Montreal, from which place he sailed yesterday in the Allan line steamer Parisian for Liverpool. He will spend several months attending the great hospitals in London and Dublin.

On Tuesday last James House, of Horning's Mills, appeared before Magistrate Dunbar, here, on the charge of committing injury to property by fishing in the waters of Horning's Mills lake on May 1st, the said lake having passed into the hands of a company. W. L. Walsh appeared for plaintiff; A. A. Hughson, of the same place, for the defendant. A number of witnesses were heard. At the request of counsel the magistrate reserved his decision until the 29th inst. There appears to be a good deal of ill-feeling in regard to the control of this lake having been obtained by so many "outsiders," as some of the gentlemen who belong to the company are styled. Monday night the company's boat house and all its contents were burned. The respectable portion of the community, however, feel that this last act of the company's opponents is an outrage that cannot be countenanced, and they hope that, for the sake of the good name the place has hitherto enjoyed, the guilty parties will be brought to justice.

TWO BEAUTIFUL YOUNG GIRLS.

Who will Create a Furore in Newport this Summer.

Newport is to have a sensation this summer. It is authentically stated that the beautiful and celebrated daughters of Lord Dufferin, Beatrice and Adelaide, are to grace this famous resort with their presence this coming season.

It will be remembered that Beatrice's beautiful dark eyes have played havoc lately with the heart of Albert, the eldest son of the Prince of Wales. What it will amount to is as yet a matter of conjecture in England. The young ladies are acknowledged to be the most beautiful in all Europe, and there will be not a little excitement in the hearts of our American belles over there coming. They are exquisite dressers, and their costumes will be marvels of curiosity. Unlike most ladies, they know exactly what is suited to them. Some time ago they sent for the chief designer of the Paris house of The New York and Paris Young Ladies Fashion Bazar, and selected forty costumes each, the cost of which will amount to thousands of pounds.

Through the courtesy of these young ladies we have been permitted to copy for The New York and Paris Young Ladies Fashion Bazar two of their most exquisite costumes which appear as figures 3 and 4 on the colored plates of the June number of this magazine, just out, and for which the publisher has issued, in the name of the American ladies, a card of thanks. It is rumored that the prince may follow the young ladies to Newport this summer. The New York and Paris Young Ladies' Fashion Bazar has the exclusive right to publish each month at least one or more of the costumes in which the ladies Beatrice and Adelaide will appear.

The Key Stone.

REGULAR action of the bowels is the keystone of health. The use of B.B.B. insures it and cures constipation, dyspepsia, etc.

Miss F. Williams, 445 Bloor Street, Toronto, writes: "Have used your Burdock Blood Bitters for constipation and pain in the head with great success. I improved from the second dose."

The Patrons of Industry seem to be growing rapidly in strength. Twenty-eight associations have been organized in the northern townships of Huron, which average about 50 members each, making a total of about 1,400 Patrons, including many of the leading men of the sections. The township of Howick heads the list with eighty lively associations and expects to have one in every section soon. From many other parts of Ontario come reports of the formation of associations or of increase in membership.

One sigh of regret for the old days again?
Down deep in my heart I have hidden my secret,
Pulse to your voice and false to your trust;
Oh, from the waters of Lethe to borrow
One draught for the hopes that have sunk in the dust.

Ah! you were true as the flowers to me,
And oh, I have treasured the heart which you gave;
Go call up your pride, it is needed to screen you,
For love and its hopes are now deep in the grave.

Ah! is it well that I still must remember
The things it were wise by far to forget;
The roses of May, laid the snows of December,
The hopes that have passed into deathless regret?

OLIVE VARCOE

—OR—

TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER VI. (Continued.)

"Don't annoy yourself for that, Olive," said he. "Let them wait; and perhaps they are not ringing for you; some other member of the family may be missing."

Olive glanced at him hurriedly.

"Oh, no, she cried—"they are ringing for me, only me, I am certain. Let us make haste."

"Take my arm, Olive," said Vigo.

She took it, but only for a moment, for her hand dropped suddenly by her side, and she stood still.

"Hark! Do you hear anything?" she asked.

"No, I hear nothing," he replied.

"I hear it," she said—"a voice calling me. 'Olive—Olive!' I have heard it all these hours."

"My dear Olive you are ill—you are excited," said young Vigo. "There is not a sound in the wood. Even the bell has stopped now."

"Has it stopped?" she asked. "Why has it stopped? Good heavens! why has the bell stopped?"

"My poor Olive," said Charles; how nervous you are! I dare say Sir Hilton or his brother, for whom they were ringing, has come in, and I suppose—"

He hesitated, and then went on with a tinge of bitterness in his tone.

"I will say it out, Olive—I suppose you too insignificant a person in the household to ring for; Do you know, Olive, that for your sake I often hate them?"

"Do not hate the only friends I have—the only people who love me," she said. "I am a wild, wicked, ungrateful girl! Oh, how I have repaid them! I have always been the cause of hatred, bitterness, and sin! And now I am going away. I shall never see dear Trewavas again!"

"Is it for this you gave way to such keen distress, Olive?" said he. "Do you indeed love Trewavas so deeply?"

"It is my home, my only home," she replied; "and I am driven out of it, Mr. Vigo—driven out like Cain, to wander miserably on the earth!"

"No, Olive, never!" he exclaimed. "My house awaits you; my house shall be yours. I love you better than my life! Give me your hand. Tell me that I may hope—"

Olive gazed at him with sad eyes. The fevered excitement of her manner seemed suddenly chastened into calmness.

"You know not what you do," she said in a sweet, low voice.

"I know right well, Olive," he replied; "I am asking you to be my wife."

"With all my faults and sins black on me, as they are this day?" she said, in a tone of constrained quiet.

"Yes," said he; "for I am not ignorant, Olive, that you have faults, but they arise from your position. You have been galled, and, like a proud steed, you have winced, and shown temper. In another position you will be another woman. Honored, respected, beloved, my life on it, Olive, you will show yourself outwardly as noble as I know you to be inwardly at heart."

Olive fixed her gaze on his face, till her eyes filled with tears.

"I shall never forget those words as long as I live," she said. "A moment ago, Mr. Vigo, and I was hesitating whether I would snatch at hope, safety, and honor, in your home, and give you in return my cold hand and my forced gratitude. No, I will never do you that great, that lasting wrong. I will never be to you that basest of the world's deceits, an unloving wife. But, Mr. Vigo, you shall be my friend; and may Heaven keep you from dishonor and disgrace in the name!"

Her mournful eyes, fixed on his, thrilled Charles Vigo's heart with a strange agony; they spoke of a deep grief, a guilt, against a foe for support.

"Do not speak to me of Hilton," she said, faintly, with white lips. "He can never be anything to me more than he is. What do I say—more? No; he will be far less. In a little while I shall be an outcast and a stranger, and the very name of Trewavas will be a curse in my ears."

"Oh, Olive, you will not steal away from Trewavas, and not let me be your friend?" said Charles Vigo. "You will come to me for help, for counsel? Remember you have me a Knight defender of the Friendless. Here is my order. I am going to have it framed in gold."

He drew from his pocket the tiny end of crimson cord which Olive had given him in the billiard room; and as it flashed before her eyes a ghastly change came over her face, her knees shook, and her hands involuntary clutched his arm for support.

"I feel ill—I am faint," she said.

As young Vigo put his arm around her to support her, he saw that the cord, which she had worn as a girdle, was no longer round her waist. It was not a time to make a remark on so trivial a circumstance, so he held his peace.

"Will you rest here on the grass," he said, "and let me run to Trewavas for a carriage?"

"No, I will trouble no one at Trewavas," she replied. "I am better. I can walk now. Do leave me, Mr. Vigo. We are close to the house, and I would rather go in alone. Promise me that you will tell no one that we have met."

Thinking their meeting an affair that concerned only themselves, Charles Vigo readily gave this promise, wondering not a little at the fear she showed lest he should break his word.

"Thanks!" said Olive. "Good-bye, Mr. Vigo."

She held out her hand, and again her earnest look, her pale lips, her strange manner, affected the young man singularly. His fingers clasped hers, and as they stood there with joined hands, the echo of furious galloping reached their ears.

"That's a horse from Trewavas?" exclaimed young Vigo. "Whoever rides him is going at a tremendous pace. I trust there is no one ill."

He long remembered the look of Olive's face, and the clasp of her small fingers burning his hand

"You forget we are on Echo Hill," she said, with a sickly smile. "A canter echoed here sounds like the gallop of Death on the pale horse. Do not be alarmed; no ill will touch Trewavas."

"Nevertheless, I have a presentiment that something is wrong," said Charles Vigo. "Let me go with you."

"No, no; you will see that I am a witch," said Olive, making a ghastly effort to be playful. "No sorrow, no sickness, no shame, can come nigh Trewavas. Farewell! Adieu, good Bolster! Take care of your kind master."

She ran down the slope of the hill towards Trewavas, and as she went, the the great bell suddenly clanged out again, sending the boom of its heavy tongue far over the wood. The curious echo on this spot repeated the sounds and scattered them flying—flying down the leafy hill after Olive's swift steps, like messengers of doom.

There was a chill, foreboding lying heavy at the heart of the lover, who watched her, which like a sympathetic chord vibrated to the note of the bell; and as the gloomy echoes floated out, dying—dying over Olive's head, he shuddered, and strained his eye longing to see her face again. He had his wish. At the park gates she turned, and as the last ray of sunset shone redly on her brow, and streaked her ebon hair with fire, she smiled, waved her hand to him, and vanished.

In the terror of his love he thanked her silently for that kindly smile, and with a great load lifted off his heart, he went home through the dew. And yet ere another sun had set he cried bitterly to himself, "Oh, to think that she could smile."

CHAPTER VII.

The Lovers' Seat stood on the cliff, overlooking a tiny sheltered cove in the bay, on the silvery, glistening sands of which the waves broke ever gently. The cliffs here were a mass of foliage. Arbutus, almond, laurel, rhododendron, hawthorn, clung to the rocks, and flung their flowers in luxurious profusion, even to the water's edge.

Availing herself of the natural beauty of the place, Lady Trewavas had turned the face of the cliff into a garden. Winding walks climbed from the beach to the park above; and midway up, overhanging the sea, was the ledge of rock which tradition called the Lovers' Seat. An arbor had been formed here, and trailing plants hung all around it, while the platform on which it stood was, by gardening skill, covered with a mass of flowers.

From this point mentioned one of the loveliest views in the West. Spread out below was the silver sheet of sands, and great rocky promontories. Mr. G. McBride was the framer and everything went together nicely. The raising was well represented by the ladies of this place and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Rodwell.

SHELBURNE.

(From Press and Economist.)

Mr. John Fisher, mayor, and Ald. Thos. Moore, of North Toronto, were in town last week inspecting our waterworks system.

Mrs. Constable, wife of Mr. James Constable, formerly of Shelburne, died at the Home for Incurables in Toronto on Friday last. The deceased was a daughter of Mr James King, formerly of Amaranth.

Dr. Blair left Shelburne Monday morning for Montreal, from which place he sailed yesterday in the Allan line steamer Parisian for Liverpool. He will spend several months attending the great hospitals in London and Dublin.

On Tuesday last James House, of Horning's Mills, appeared before Magistrate Dunbar, here, on the charge of committing injury to property by fishing in the waters of Horning's Mills lake on May 1st, the said lake having passed into the hands of a company. W. L. Walsh appeared for plaintiff; A. A. Hughson, of the same place, for the defendant. A number of witnesses were heard. At the request of counsel the magistrate reserved his decision until the 29th inst. There appears to be a good deal of illfeeling in regard to the control of this lake having been obtained by so many "outsiders," as some of the gentlemen who belong to the company are styled. Monday night the company's boat house and all its contents were burned. The respectable portion of the community, however, feel that this last act of the company's opponents is an outrage that cannot be countenanced, and they hope that, for the sake of the good name the place has hitherto enjoyed, the guilty parties will be brought to justice.

TWO BEAUTIFUL YOUNG GIRLS.

Who will Create a Furore in Newport this Summer.

Newport is to have a sensation this summer. It is authentically stated that the beautiful and celebrated daughters of Lord Dufferin, Beatrice and Adelaide, are to grace this famous resort with their presence this coming season.

It will be remembered that Beatrice's beautiful dark eyes have played havoc lately with the heart of Albert, the eldest son of the Prince of Wales. What it will amount to is as yet a matter of conjecture in England. The young ladies are acknowledged to be the most beautiful in all Europe, and there will be not a little excitement in the hearts of our American belles over there coming. They are exquisite dressers, and their costumes will be marvels of curiosity. Unlike most ladies, they know exactly what is suited to them. Some time ago they sent for the chief designer of the Paris house of The New York and Paris Young Ladies' Fashion Bazar, and selected forty costumes each, the cost of which will amount to thousands of pounds.

Through the courtesy of these young ladies we have been permitted to copy for The New York and Paris Young Ladies Fashion Bazar two of their most exquisite costumes which appear as figures 3 and 4 on the colored plates of the June number of this magazine, just out, and for which the publisher has issued, in the name of the American ladies, a card of thanks. It is rumored that the prince may follow the young ladies to Newport this summer. The New York and Paris Young Ladies' Fashion Bazar has the exclusive right to publish each month at least one or more of the costumes in which the ladies Beatrice and Adelaide will appear.

The Key Stone.

REGULAR action of the bowels is the keystone of health. The use of B.B.B. insures it and cures constipation, dyspepsia, etc.

Miss F. Williams, 445 Bloor-Street, Toronto, writes: "Have used your Burdock Blood Bitters for constipation and pain in the head with great success. I improved from the second dose."

The Patrons of Industry seem to be growing rapidly in strength. Twenty-eight associations have been organized in the northern townships of Huron, which average about 50 members each, making a total of about 1,400 Patrons, including many of the leading men of the sections. The township of Howick heads the list with eighty lively associations and expects to have one in every section soon. From many other parts of Ontario come reports of the formation of associations or of increase in membership.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH RE-OPENING.

Interesting Services on Sunday Last —Description of the Interior Improvements.

St. Andrew's church was reopened last Sunday. Three congregations gathered during the day. The morning and afternoon services were not so largely attended as the evening, the handsome edifice being then crowded, quite a number turning away unable to find seats. The morning service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. D. C. Hossack, M.A., L.L.D. His subject was "The Life of Jacob"—Gen. 32:28, from which he drew some very practical lessons, both from the mistakes and right-doing of that strange character. The rev. gentleman is nothing if not practical. Rev. J. L. Gilmour conducted the afternoon service. His text was in II Cor. 5:14. It is quite evident from the able sermon Mr. Gilmour delivered that he has faith in the Gospel he preaches to heal all the ills and wrongs of humanity. The love of Christ should constrain us to be up and doing to send the Gospel to the millions without it. To lift up the fallen at home, to overlook theological differences between men if they are constrained by the love of Christ; to seek to bring the Church to the level of the workingmen, that instead of hating the Church, as many of them do, they will come in with us. His words will have their effect. In the evening the Methodist church was closed, consequently many of that persuasion joined with their Presbyterian friends. Rev. M. L. Pearson discoursed ably on "Heaven, the Home of the Redeemed," from II Cor. 12:3 4. Next Sunday the re opening services will be continued, Rev. Dr. McRobbie, of Shelburne, late of Ridgetown, will occupy the pulpit.

The interior of the building is quite transformed by the alterations. The church looks comfortable and rich, but not in the least extravagant. The painting has been well done. The shades blend artistically, the side walls being a bright terra cotta, the ceiling a pale blue, the beams oak and all set off with a tasty stencil border. An arch has been opened behind the pulpit, with a recess for the choir (which, by the way, is an excellent one). The platform has been raised, the aisles and platform carpeted with a soft wool carpet, the stairs and vestibule floor covered with cocoa matting, the seats stained mahogany, and the entire building lighted by electricity. It seems to be the general opinion that the echo which once disturbed both hearers and speaker has been—some say entirely, others nearly done away with. This itself is worth all the expense laid out on the church. The total cost of the improvements will be about $900. About $450 has been received in subscriptions and last Sunday's collections.

WASTED MONEY.

(Owen Sound Advertiser.)

The Aborigines Protective Society's report read at a meeting on Wednesday alleges Mr. Stanley for cruelty to the African natives with whom he came in contact on his late expedition, and also protests against attempts at the premature civilization of Africa, as likely to lead to persecution of the natives. It seems to many thoughtful people that a tremendous amount of wealth, effort and human life is being thrown away on African expeditions. The sum spent by England on the Emin Relief expedition would have gone far to solve the fearful problem of London's degraded poor. If the English, however, would select the decentest spot in their African possessions and colonize it with the young home grown heathen whom philanthropists are daily unloading on Canadian shores she would be doing something reasonable.

UNDER the Dakota statutes a man who robs a stage can be sent to prison for life. If he attacks but fails to get any plunder, he can be sentenced for half a lifetime. In a case where a judge figured that fifteen years was half a life, the Supreme Court has upset the sentence, figuring that nineteen years, seven months and four days is the correct figure.

BUT THE END IS NEAR.

Painlessly and Peacefully Passing Away.

EXPRESSIONS OF SYMPATHY FROM ALL QUARTERS.

During the past week the life of Canada's most loved and honored citizen has been trembling in the balance. Like a pall has been the suspense which has weighed upon the hearts of the people of this Dominion since Friday of last week, at which time it first became known that Sir John's illness had reached a critical point and that his recovery was almost beyond hope. From day to day, from hour to hour, citizens of high and low degree, irrespective of creed or politics, have anxiously awaited every word bearing upon the condition of Canada's Premier. From every quarter of the British Empire, from royalty itself, from the neighboring Republic, messages of inquiry and sympathy are being constantly received at the capital.

It was between 4 and 5 o'clock on Friday afternoon that paralysis attacked the Premier, and shortly afterward the awful stroke was succeeded by hemorrhage of the brain and it was felt that the case was hopeless. But, contrary to all expectations, the Grand Old Man still lives. His splendid constitution enables him to make a noble fight against the grim monster, and the battle continues.

At the present writing we can but add the latest bulletin from the sick chamber:

THE LATEST.

EARNSCLIFFE, OTTAWA.

12 o'clock. To-day.

Sir John passed a fairly comfortable night and partook of nourishment at intervals; his cerebral symptoms are slightly improved at the time of our consultation, owing doubtless to the fact that having live six days since his seizure partial absorption has had time to take place. His heart's action, however, is extremely feeble and very irregular, and its failure at present is the chief danger.

LAUREL.

The court of revision met here on Saturday last.

Reeve Wansbrough and Deputy-reeve Johnston, have been attending the county council meeting at Orangeville this week

FINE BARN.—Mr. John Wallace is making extensive improvements on his farm. He is now having a stone foundation built under his barn. Success, John.

RECOVERING.—Mr. James Johnston, who had the cap of his knee knocked off about three months ago, is recovering. We hope soon to see him regain his old-time vigor.

REVIVAL SERVICE.—Rev. Mr Bell, pastor of the Presbyterian church, is holding revival services here for the past three weeks. The services will conclude on Saturday.

Mr J. W. Gordon has removed his barn back and raised it several feet, converting it into a bank barn. Messrs. Wm. Davey of Orangeville did the moving and Henry Holmes has the job of building the foundation.

PICNIC.—On Saturday last about twenty young gentlemen accompanied by their ladies drove to the "Rocks" at Mono Centre and spent the day in exploring the many caves. All returned home in the evening well pleased and wishing for a return of the event.

LEAVING.—The Methodist church here will shortly lose its popular pastor, Rev. Mr. Dean, who will leave Laurel in three or four weeks. He will preach his farewell sermon in the church here two weeks from Sunday, at 6.30 in the evening. All regret the rev. gentleman's departure.

WHAT THE PLOUGH TURNS UP.—Rev. M. S. Gray has purchased the 50 acre farm from his old friend and partner, Constable Alfred Finbow. The new purchaser had a ploughing bee on Tuesday, when, it is said, a number of Finbow's buried beer barrels and whiskey jugs were turned up. What next?

WAS GLAD TO HEAR IT.—Some of the Grits around here heard the report that Sir John was dead and they lost no time in circulating it, all the while laughing in glee. How a man can teach brotherly love on Sundays and then make fun of a dying statesman is more than we can see. With this gentleman Britism has first place with Christianity a poor second.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THEM?—Several months ago one of our residents swore out a warrant for the arrest of a fellow official, charging him with retaining Scott Act fines which belonged to the county. We believe the delinquent officer agreed to pay up, but since that date we have not heard any more about the matter and wonderfully ask: "What's become of them?" If the matter is fully explained, as it should be, many ratepayers will be satisfied.

Mrs Wm. Brawley, living near Becton met with a peculiar accident last week. While feeding a flock of geese, a young gander which heretofore been peaceably disposed, flew at her and caught her by the upper lip, badly cutting her lip and breaking out a front tooth.—Beeton World.

The pen is mightier than the sword, and the dollar is mightier than the pen, consequently the dollar has the call. If some of our delinquent subscribers would hand in their dollars we would be mighty thankful.

Mr. T. L. Cranston of Dundas, formerly teller at the Bank of Commerce here, held a winning ticket in the Carlake sweepstakes and thus raked in $1,800. Tom's Orangeville friends will be glad to hear of his luck.

The glorious, pious, immortal and ever lasting memory of King William the Third will be celebrated in Brampton this year with usual pomp. According to law, no bar room is allowed open on the 12th.—Brampton Banner. The 12th falls on Sunday this year, Bro. Dick, and the hotels are supposed to remain closed on Sundays.

POST OFFICES.—The following new post offices were opened in Ontario on May 1:—Barwick, Algoma; Tempo, Middlesex, S. R. The offices at Hammond, Perth county; Scone, North Bruce, and Weldon, Kent county, were closed at the beginning of the month.

PRAYERS FOR THE PREMIER.—In all the Orangeville churches last Sunday prayers were offered for Sir John A. Macdonald and family. The pastors of the different churches made many kind remarks regarding the great statesman Creed and politics are forgotten and universal regret prevails.

Y. P. A. SOCIAL.—St. Andrew's Y.P.A. will hold a social in the basement of the church next Tuesday evening, 9th inst. The Sunflower Chorus will be rendered and refreshments will be served during the evening. A silver collection will be taken at the door. All are welcome.

WELCOME RAIN.—This season has been noted for its extreme dry weather which seriously damaged the hay as well as other crops. But the spell is broken at last, for on Tuesday morning early a copious shower fell and there have been periodical showers since. No wonder the farmers wear a smile.

UNION PICNIC.—The R. C. congregations of Orangeville, Brampton and Cataract have decided to hold a grand union picnic at the Forks of Credit on Tuesday, June 23. Those who have charge of the affair are working hard and this picnic promises to be far ahead of the previous ones. Further particulars next week.

GONE TO KINGSTON.—Last evening Sheriff and Turnkey Bowles left for Kingston penitentiary with John Kirkland, the aged incendiary who was recently sentenced to three years' imprisonment in that great institution. Kirkland thought he would be pardoned, but such was not the case. He will be 75 years old when he comes out.

DOMINION DAY AT MT FOREST.—Mount Forest will have a grand gala day on July 1st and 2nd, embracing Band Tournament, Horse Races, Acrobat Feats, Athletic Games, Scottish Bagpipe Competition, Scotch and Irish Dancing, Lacrosse and Football Matches, and other Sports. On the evening of the first day there will be a grand Promenade Concert and a fine display of Fire Works. The prizes amount to $1 800. Reduced rates will be given on the railways.

A POPULAR COMMISSIONER.—The Arthur Enterprise pays the following compliment to our old friend, Mr W. B. Jelly: Mr. Census Commissioner Jelly, of Bowling Green, Amaranth, wound up his duties on Saturday, and sent in his returns to Ottawa. We only voice the sentiments of all his subordinates, when we say that a more courteous, painstaking and obliging official of the Dominion Government never visited Arthur. Mr. Jelly has had the work promptly and properly done.

CONFIRMATION SERVICES.—Bishop Hamilton, of the Niagara diocese, confirmed thirty-six candidates in St. Mark's church on Monday evening. Unusual interest was manifested in the services, the church being filled to the full extent of its seating capacity. Rev. A. C. Watt, pastor of St. John's church, Mono Mills, assisted at the services. Under the ministrations of Rev. A. Henderson St. Mark's is making very encouraging progress and is rapidly gaining in numbers and influence.

OUT! A TOUR—The dog tyler is meeting with the same remarkable success as last. In 1889 $182 60 was realized by taxing the curs of this county, but so far this year only $64 have been paid to the open treasury of this county. The chief of police has instructed constables to force the provisions of the tyler and owners of dogs who do not buy a tag before the 15th of this month will be rounded before Cecil Patterson. Dog owners remembered that every dog must wear a tag.

THEY SELDOM DO.—Newspaper advertising agencies are not in the habit of giving away much, but the Wilson Advertising Agency is sending out a very pretty newspaper rule, a most useful article to publisher and advertiser. This agency has only been in existence a few years and has already worked up a good connection in controlling advertising for some of the largest houses in the United States and Canada. Intending advertisers who are not decided regarding the placing of their announcements, can be saved both time and money by placing their business in their hands.

THE DUFFERINS HONOR.—The first championship lacrosse match in the northwestern district this season was played at Forgie on Tuesday, between the Dufferins of this town and the Thistles of that place. Our boys have always been defeated at Forgie and the result of this match was a defeat. The Forgies lads took the first, third and fourth games in 11, 7 and 46 minutes respectively, while the Dufferins captured the second game in 25 seconds. The best of good feeling prevailed and very little rough play was indulged in by either side. Canada's national game has about gone up spout so far as this district is concerned.

A MONO PIONEER GONE.—Mr. James Wilson, aged of the pioneers of Mono township, died at the residence of his son, Charles Wilson, on Thursday last. The deceased was born in the county of Cavan, Ireland, and has been a resident of Mono for over 40 years. The deceased leaves a family of four sons, Edward, John, Charles and Henry Wilson, all well to do farmers, and two daughters, Mrs. Geo. Adair, of Melita, Mich., and Miss Wilson, who resides with her brother Edward. The deceased was 85 years of age. The funeral was held on Friday last, the interment taking place at Whitfield Cemetery.—Shelburne Free Press.

KEEP COWS OFF THE TRACK.—The C.P.R. trains of the Credit Valley division have got a mania lately for running into cows or else the cows have got a mania for going on the C.P.R. On Sunday when the wrecking train was running up to Brampton from Churchville they badly damaged a cow on the 1st line crossing, so much so that the remains have not been collected together at the present writing. Again on Monday night the express from Orangeville made mince meat of another one between Campbell's Cross and Edmonton, damaging the engine a little as well as delaying the train 30 minutes. It would be as well for the municipalities to give a little heed to the by law regarding cattle running at large or it may be a little costive to them yet.—Brampton Times.

THE LAKE CO. LEFT.—The Hornings Mills Fishing Company (limited) have been having some trouble over their power to hold property in front of the Hornings Mills lake from all for their own use. In former years when any person wanted to fish he hired a boat and had that privilege, but since the above company was incorporated this privilege was done away with and only the members of the company were allowed to fish. On the 1st day of May two young men of the vicinity determined to make a test case of it and so waded the creek, the only visible outlet, and lifted some 40 or 50 pounds of trout. One of the men, House by name, was arrested and tried for the offence last week. On the morning the trial took place the boathouse and boats belonging to the company were completely destroyed by fire. The decision was reserved and only given on Saturday against the company. This is a very serious thing to them as they have since the 1st of May put several thousand fry in the lake.

"LAILA."—The presentation of this charming operetta in the town hall on Thursday evening met with the success which its construction and execution richly merited. The piece ran with a smoothness that was pleasing, and every detail was worked out with a care seldom seen in amateur entertainments. The applause which "Laila" elicited from the audience was flattering to its author, and the financial result must be gratifying to its promoters. The amount realized, after allowing for expenses, was between $45 and $50, which sum will be placed to the credit of the spire fund of the church. Forty performers took part in the operetta, and when so many young people, arrayed in the brilliant colors of a tropical region, with youthful voices tuned to the harmonies of a chorus of nightingales, assemble indeed must be the heart that would not be soothed thereby. Such entertainments are always elevating, and it is to be hoped "Laila" will be followed by many more in the not distant future.—COM.

TOGGED THEMSELVES OUT.—Sometime last Thursday night three knights of the jimmy paid a business visit to Reeve Lindsay's dry goods and grocery store on West Broadway, and took several articles as memorials of their call. Previous to their visit, however, the trio broke into James Foulds' carpenter shop and took a brace and bit, chisels, screwdrivers and a jimmy, which materially assisted them when they called on the reeve. The burglars gained an entrance to the store by breaking a pane of glass in the rear cellar door and pulling back the bolt. Holes were bored in the door connecting the store and cellar, and the thieves had not much trouble getting in. They carried several suits of clothes to the cellar and exchanged them for their own filthy and tattered garments. The burglars must have had an invitation to some ball for they togged themselves out completely, even to collars. The robbery was not discovered until Friday morning, when the police were notified. Telegrams were sent to neighboring towns, but with no result. Mr. Lindsay's loss will amount to about $50. Suspicious characters were hanging around town previous to the robbery, but they have disappeared. Nightwatchman Parkin, who passes the store several times every night, says he did not notice anything wrong on the night in question.

50,000 dozen eggs wanted at Endacott Bros., for which they will pay the highest price in cash or exchange.

IT WILL BE BUILT!

A New Fire Hall to be Erected.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS FOR THE QUARRY SPUR-LINE.

Ald. Adamson Resigns—A Fling at the Waterworks—To R. & B. Chairman.

The regular semi monthly meeting of the council took place in the council chamber on Monday evening and was characterized by the passage of several important measures. During the dog days the aldermanic sensitive will not convene until 8 o'clock, half an hour later than formerly. A large audience was present, many expecting that something would be done about the little unpleasantness in the fire brigade, but they were disappointed, however, as nothing was said about the matter. All the members were present excepting Mr. Adamson of the East ward, who has resigned his seat.

ACCOUNTS

from the Gutta Percha Rubber Co., $325; Jos. Armstrong, $2; G.P.R., $2; G.N.W. Telegraph, $1.72; Dog Tag Co., $10; J. S. Leighton, $5.40; T. Hall, $1.55; A. Thompson, $3; ordered to be paid. Accounts from THE SUN, $3; Advertiser, $3; Post, $4.50; referred to the Printing committee. There was quite a dispute caused by an account of the G.N.W.T. Co., amounting to $9 54. Some time ago telegrams were sent to the police of other towns to apprehend the burglars who robbed Reeve Lindsay's store. A number of aldermen thought the county should pay the bill, but as the mayor ordered such steps to be taken the council were responsible and the account was allowed to pass.

ALD. ADAMSON QUITS.

Mayor Walsh read a communication from Ald. R. M. Adamson, one of the councillors of the East ward, resigning his position at the council board. Mr. Adamson is employed on the C.P.R. and has been ordered to Parkdale. Deputy reeve Endacott moved that the resignation be accepted, paid Mr. A. a compliment and said he was very sorry that one of the East ward's representatives had to leave town.

Mrs. Emily Beatty wrote that she has been a resident of this town for the past six years and during that period has been able to earn a living and send her two young daughters to school, but now sickness exists in the household and her working hours are occupied by waiting on the sick. She asked the council's aid, and the Charity committee will attend to it.

A REPLY WANTED.

The Orangeville Electric Light and Power Co. wanted to know if the council had done anything about renewing the street-lighting contract, as they wanted a reply as soon as possible. Ald. Fiddis, chairman of the S.L., said he had no report ready, for he had just received information from other towns regarding street lighting.

G. A. Campbell requested 25 feet of ground on the north side of Broadway on which to erect a building. His request was granted under the provisions of a bylaw governing such matters.

DIDN'T PAY FOR THE LOT.

Cemetery Caretaker Fromlin informed the council that years ago a man purchased a lot in the cemetery and one interement was made, but the fellow never paid for the lot or for digging the grave. Now he had on hand a cash purchaser for the plot who would pay all expenses connected with the removal of the body to the potterfield. The Cemetery committee will give it their serious consideration.

A FLING AT OUR FIRE SYSTEM.

The secretary of the Underwriters' Association wrote a letter to the mayor about the recent waterworks fire. The underwriters seem to have a very poor opinion of our system. His worship replied to the epistle, pointing out that new appliances had been purchased and a new fire hall would shortly be built.

REPORTS.

The reeve read the treasurer's report for May.

Ald Gillespie reported that the new fire brigade utensils had been received and they were satisfactory. Adopted.

Owing to the retirement of Mr. Adamson, Mayor Walsh read the R. & B. committee's report. Since the last report was submitted $81.42½ had been expended on the streets. Two accounts were attached to the report, which was adopted.

THE QUARRY SPUR LINE;

The mayor gave a verbal report of the deputation that interviewed C.P.R. Superintendent Tait regarding the building of a spur line to the Mono quarries. The C.P.R. were anxious that the line should be built, and would provide the rails and give the right-of-way over the old C.V.R. road. The railway company would do all the ballasting to the foot of Broadway and would charge them only 6 per cent. on the cost of the rails. The quarry company was well satisfied, and it is likely work will be commenced at once.

OUR PROPOSED FIRE HALL.

Deputy-reeve Endacott, chairman of the T.P. committee, read the report from that committee and moved that the council go into committee of the whole. The report recommended that the plans of the new fire hall chosen by the committee be adopted, and tenders for its erection be asked for. The building will be a neat two story structure, having a frontage on Broadway of 22 feet and on John street 76 feet. The tower, which is to be 62 feet, will be on the front of the building. The hose reels will be in the front of the building, the engines in the centre and the hook and ladder truck in the rear. The whole of the second floor will be occupied by the engineer as a residence. The committee rose and the report passed.

WOULDN'T TAKE THE JOB.

Reeve Lindsay thought a R. & B. chairman should be appointed at once, and he proposed Ald. Ketchum. Mr. K. declined to take the position, stating that his reason for refusing was that he was out of town too often to attend to it. The reeve then moved that Ald Green be appointed, but the latter declined, and moved in amendment that the reeve be the R. & B.'s chairman. Mr. Lindsay said he had too much business to attend to and could not possibly fill the office. Finally Mr. Green withdrew his motion and the matter was left in the hands of the R. & B. committee.

POINTERS.

The deputy-reeve inquired if anything more had been heard of the woolen mill. The mayor said he wrote to the man, but had not received a reply.

The T.P. committee will advertise for tenders for the weigh scales.

Ald. Ketchum moved that the constable be instructed to prosecute dog owners who do not purchase tags previous to the 15th day of this month.

The clerk was instructed to ask the county council to guarantee payment of town debentures to be issued to Hepburn bros.

Mr. Isaac Murphy, a Mono farmer, addressed the council regarding the unsafe condition in which a portion of the old Centre road is in. Two Mono council will grant $35 if Orangeville gives a similar amount. It was referred to the R. & B. committee.

WHITTINGTON.

DEAD.—A very sad event took place at the residence of Mr. Atkinson White, lot 21, con. 2, Amaranth, on Friday last, when that esteemed gentleman breathed his last. A short time ago Mr. White was seized in grippe and after a brief illness died. The deceased gentleman, who was — years of age, leaves a wife and 5 grown-up children, 2 daughters and three sons. The funeral took place to the Orangeville cemetery on Sunday and was very largely attended. The funeral sermon was preached in the Methodist church here on Sunday by Rev. Mr. Leonard. The bereaved family have the heart felt sympathy of the community.

BLACK'S CORNERS.

A BIG BARN.—A couple of weeks ago a magnificent barn was raised at Mr. Robert Reaburn's, lot 19, con. 5. The captains chosen were Messrs. Chas. Banks and Wm. Ewings, and each had thirty men. The immense building is 44 x 60, and was raised in 4 hours' hard work. Mr. Banks' side won and had considerable time to spare. Mr. Johnston, deputy-reeve, the well-known framer, has charge of that part of the work, and when the building is completed it will be second to none in the township. The only mishap that occured during the afternoon was when the work was about done. Mr Richard Grey, who lives near Laurel, fell from the top girt, a distance of about 16 feet. Fortunately he was not injured to any great extent, having only to lay off work a couple of days.

MARSVILLE.

The Marsville football team easily defeated the Waldemar boys. Good!

The council met here on Saturday as a court of revision, a few appeals were dealt with.

Reeve Hamilton and Deputy-reeve Simpson are attending the county council at Orangeville this week.

DEATH OF MRS. GAMBLE.—Mrs. John Gamble, an old as highly respected resident of East Garafraxa township, died at her residence, 12th con., on Thursday last at the advanced age of 82 years. Mrs. Gamble had been for many years subject to asthma, and this, with the complications arising from la grippe, caused her death. She was laid at rest in Price's Corners cemetery on Saturday, a large number of sorrowing friends being present to pay a last token of respect and esteem. Her aged partner has the sympathy of all in his bereavement.

TARBERT.

BASEBALL, EH?—Now, boys, work is pretty well over and you should get a little hustle on and reorganize our club. Let ungo to Orangeville on Dominion day and bring home a silver cup.

BOUNCE THEM.—A great many school-peddlers are selling their goods around here and we believe they have no peddlers' license. If a person does not buy their thrash they get mad and give plenty lip. A constable should come along and jug half a-dozen of those impudent gentry.

BRIEFS.—Mr. Editor, as you have not heard from us for some time you will think we are either dead or sleeping. We were too busy to communicate... Everything is quiet around here now... Mr. Albert Riley lost a colt last week. Bad luck, Al... Many rumors of weddings are heard, but no marriages have taken place lately.

VANATTER.

BARN RAISING.—A wild and dramatic scene was witnessed on the farm of Mr. David Bland (of turkey fame) on Monday last when the timbers of his new barn were raised. Shortly after 12 o'clock about 60 men laid themselves out to do a great afternoon's work, and they were successful in every sense of the word. It is a structure 40 feet wide by 50 long, and is twenty feet high. The building is set on cedar posts, and it is intended to put a stone foundation, in later on. The opposing captains Messrs. Robert John Little and John Cornelius, called up sides, and when 8 o'clock arrived the latter general's army was declared the victors. During the erection the wildest times were seen, and every timber in the building was safely put together. Deputy reeve Johnston has the contract of the frame work and when he gets through it will be a slick 'un. In the evening the boys and girls got dancing and kept the amusement up until late next morning. When the barn is completed with lock and steeple Davy can sleep with ease, as no turkey thieves will be able to enter.

GRAND VALLEY.

(From the Star.)

Mr. Richard Stookey left here on Thursday last to seek his fortune in British Columbia.

Mr. Harry Kribbs returned to this village from British Columbia on Friday last. Harry looks as if the Pacific coast life had agreed with him.

On Thursday last the case of Clark v. Bird was heard before Wm. Osbourne and M. S. Gray, J. P's. The defendant, Bird, was accused of taking household effects claimed to have been purchased from him by the plaintiff. Bird was acquitted.

The 24th day of May being set apart by the Grand Master Workmen of Canada for the members of that society to attend divine worship in a body, to give thanks to God for the innumerable blessings bestowed on the order. Acting under the above instructions about 30 of the members of Grand Valley Lodge, No. 240, met in their lodge-room and from there marched to the Presbyterian church where they listened to a very able and impressive sermon by the Rev. H. Crozier, on the duties society owed to God and their fellow man. After the service the members marched in same order back to their lodge room. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Rev. Mr. Crozier.

A Whitby man was recently given a revolver to fix and afterwards got drunk. He met a friend and thought to have some fun and had it by making the friend kneel down and pray at the point of the revolver and go through some devotional exercises. When the friend got far enough away to make sure he was safe he laid a complaint, with the result that the aggressor was mulcted $20 and costs in the current rhino of the realm.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH RE-OPENING.

Interesting Services on Sunday Last —Description of the Interior Improvements.

St. Andrew's church was reopened last Sunday. Three congregations gathered during the day. The morning and afternoon services were not so largely attended as the evening, the handsome edifice being then crowded, quite a number turning away unable to find seats. The morning service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. D. C. Hossack, M.A., L.L.D. His subject was "The Life of Jacob"—Gen. 32:28, from which he drew some very practical lessons, both from the mistakes and right-doing of that strange character. The rev. gentleman is nothing if not practical. Rev. J. L. Gilmour conducted the afternoon service. His text was in II Cor. 5:14. It is quite evident from the able sermon Mr. Gilmour delivered that he has faith in the Gospel he preaches to heal all the ills and wrongs of humanity. The love of Christ should constrain us to be up and doing to send the Gospel to the millions without it. To lift up the fallen at home, to overlook theological differences between men if they are constrained by the love of Christ; to seek to bring the Church to the level of the workingmen, that instead of hating the Church, as many of them do, they will come in with us. His words will have their effect. In the evening the Methodist church was closed, consequently many of that persuasion joined with their Presbyterian friends. Rev. M. L. Pearson discoursed ably on "Heaven, the Home of the Redeemed," from II Cor., 12:3-4. Next Sunday the re-opening services will be continued, Rev. Dr. McRobbie, of Shelburne, late of Ridgetown, will occupy the pulpit.

The interior of the building is quite transformed by the alterations. The church looks comfortable and rich, but not in the least extravagant. The painting has been well done. The shades blend artistically, the side walls being a bright terra cotta, the ceiling a pale blue, the beams oak and all set off with a tasty stencil border. An arch has been opened behind the pulpit, with a recess for the choir (which, by the way, is an excellent one). The platform has been raised, the aisles and platform carpeted with a soft wool carpet, the stairs and vestibule floor covered with cocoa matting, the seats stained mahogany, and the entire building lighted by electricity. It seems to be the general opinion that the echo which once disturbed both hearers and speaker has been—some say entirely, others nearly done away with. This itself is worth all the expense laid out on the church. The total cost of the improvements will be about $900. About $450 has been received in subscriptions and last Sunday's collections.

WASTED MONEY.

(Owen Sound Advertiser.)

The Aborigines Protective Society's report read at a meeting on Wednesday reflects Mr. Stanley for cruelty to the African natives with whom he came in contact on his late expedition, and also protests against attempts at the premature civilization of Africa, as likely to lead to persecution of the natives. It seems to many thoughtful people that a tremendous amount of wealth, effort and human life is being thrown away on African expeditions. The sum spent by England on the Emin Relief expedition would have gone far to solve the fearful problem of London's degraded poor. If the English, however, would select the decentest spot in their African possessions and colonize it with the young home grown heathen whom philanthropists are daily unloading on Canadian shores she would be doing something reasonable.

UNDER the Dakota statutes a man who robs a stage can be sent to prison for life. If he attacks but fails to get any plunder, he can be sentenced for half a lifetime. In a case where a judge figured that fifteen years was half a life, the Supreme Court has upset the sentence, figuring that nineteen years, seven months and four days is the correct figure.

Haggart Bros. foundry at Brampton is running again. At present 15 hands are employed, but the number will soon be increased to 35.

EXPRESSIONS OF SYMPATHY FROM ALL QUARTERS.

During the past week the life of Canada's most loved and honored citizen has been trembling in the balance. Like a pall has been the suspense which has weighed upon the hearts of the people of this Dominion since Friday of last week, at which time it first became known that Sir John's illness had reached a critical point and that his recovery was almost beyond hope. From day to day, from hour to hour, citizens of high and low degree, irrespective of creed or politics, have anxiously awaited every word bearing upon the condition of Canada's Premier. From every quarter of the British Empire, from royalty itself, from the neighboring Republic, messages of inquiry and sympathy are being constantly received at the capital.

It was between 4 and 5 o'clock on Friday afternoon that paralysis attacked the Premier, and shortly afterward the awful stroke was succeeded by hemorrhage of the brain and it was felt that the case was hopeless. But, contrary to all expectations, the Grand Old Man still lives. His splendid constitution enables him to make a noble fight against the grim monster, and the battle continues.

At the present writing we can but add the latest bulletin from the sick chamber:

THE LATEST.

EARNSCLIFFE, OTTAWA.

12 o'clock. To-day.

Sir John passed a fairly comfortable night and partook of nourishment at intervals; his cerebral symptoms are slightly improved at the time of our consultation, owing doubtless to the fact that having live six days since his seizure partial absorption has had time to take place. His heart's action, however, is extremely feeble and very irregular, and its failure at present is the chief danger.

LAUREL.

The court of revision met here on Saturday last.

Reeve Wansbrough and Deputy-reeve Johnston, have been attending the county council meeting at Orangeville this week.

FINE BARN.—Mr. John Wallace is making extensive improvements on his farm. He is now having a stone foundation built under his barn. Success, John.

RECOVERING.—Mr. James Johnston, who had the cap of his knee knocked off about three months ago, is recovering. We hope soon to see him regain his old-time vigor.

REVIVAL SERVICE.—Rev. Mr. Bell, pastor of the Presbyterian church, is holding revival services here for the past three weeks. The services will conclude on Saturday.

Mr. J. W. Gordon has removed his barn back and raised it several feet, converting it into a bank barn. Messrs. Wm. Davey of Orangeville did the moving and Henry Holmes has the job of building the foundation.

PICNIC.—On Saturday last about twenty young gentlemen accompanied by their ladies drove to the "Hooks" at Mono Centre and spent the day in exploring the many caves. All returned home in the evening well pleased and wishing for a return of the event.

LEAVING.—The Methodist church here will shortly lose its popular pastor, Rev. Mr. Dean, who will leave Laurel in three or four weeks. He will preach his farewell sermon in the church here two weeks from Sunday, at 6.30 in the evening. All regret the rev. gentleman's departure.

WHAT THE PLOUGH TURNS UP.—Rev. M. S. Gray has purchased the 50 acre farm from his old friend and partner, Constable Alfred Finbow. The new purchaser had a ploughing bee on Tuesday, when, it is said, a number of Finbow's buried beer barrels and whiskey jugs were turned up. What next?

WAS GLAD TO HEAR IT.—Some of the Grits around here heard the report that Sir John was dead and they lost no time in circulating it, all the while laughing in glee. How a man can teach brotherly love on Sundays and then make fun of a dying statesman is more than we can see. With this gentleman Gritism has first place with Christianity a poor second.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THEM?—Several months ago one of our residents swore out a warrant for the arrest of a fellow official, charging him with retaining Scott Act fines which belonged to the county. We believe the delinquent officer agreed to pay up, but since that date we have not heard any more about the matter, and we naturally ask: "What's become of them?" If the matter is fully explained, as it should be, many ratepayers will be satisfied.

Mrs Wm. Brawley, living near Beeton met with a peculiar accident last week. While feeding a flock of geese, a young gander which heretofore been peaceably disposed, flew at her and caught her by the upper lip, badly cutting her lip and breaking out a front tooth.—Beeton Herald.

Dalhousie returns would confer a favor by sending in the amount of their indebtedness.

The Dufferin Teachers' convention will be held in the high school next Thursday and Friday.

About fifty young people of this town picnicked at the Moon rocks, near Mono Centre, on Saturday.

Several cases of cruelty to animals were reported last week. A humane society is badly needed here.

The court of revision for the town of Orangeville will meet in the council chamber at 8 o'clock this evening.

The Shelburne lacrosse club has dropped out of the northwestern district. It is altogether likely more will follow.

All arrangements have been completed for the Sons of Ireland excursion to Orangeville on the 13th. A big day is promised.

The Citizens band has been reorganized with Ald. Jesse Ketchum as band master. The salary has been increased to $100.

Jack Graham, better known as the green grocer, has the largest stock of plants in town to select from. Call around and see them.

Ald. Robert M. Adamson, one of the East ward councillors, has resigned. His resignation was accepted by the council on Monday night.

The charge of assault preferred by Nightwatchman Parkin against James Kelly came up at yesterday's police court, but was once more adjourned.

The pen is mightier than the sword, and the dollar is mightier than the pen, consequently the dollar has the call. If some of our delinquent subscribers would hand in their dollars we would be mighty thankful.

Mr. T. L. Cranston of Dundas, formerly teller at the Bank of Commerce here, held a winning ticket in the Carlake sweepstakes and thus raked in $1,800. Tom's Orangeville friends will be glad to hear of his luck.

The glorious, pious, immortal and ever lasting memory of King William the Third will be celebrated in Brampton this year with usual pomp. According to law, no bar room is allowed open on the 12th.—Brampton Banner. The 12th falls on Sunday this year, Bro. Dick, and the hotels are supposed to remain closed on Sundays.

POST OFFICES.—The following new post offices were opened in Ontario on May 1:—Barwick, Algoma; Tempo, Middlesex, S. R. The offices at Hammond, Perth county; Scone, North Bruce, and Weldon, Kent county, were closed at the beginning of the month.

PRAYERS FOR THE PREMIER.—In all the Orangeville churches last Sunday prayers were offered for Sir John A. Macdonald and family. The pastors of the different churches made many kind remarks regarding the great statesman. Creed and politics are forgotten and universal regret prevails.

Y. P. A. SOCIAL.—St. Andrew's Y.P.A. will hold a social in the basement of the church next Tuesday evening, 9th inst. The Sunflower Chorus will be rendered and refreshments will be served during the evening. A silver collection will be taken at the door. All are welcome.

WELCOME RAIN.—This season has been noted for its extreme dry weather which seriously damaged the hay as well as other crops. But the spell is broken at last, for on Tuesday morning early a copious shower fell and there have been periodical showers since. No wonder the farmers wear a smile.

UNION PICNIC.—The R. C. congregations of Orangeville, Brampton and Cataract have decided to hold a grand union picnic at the Forks on Tuesday, June 23. Those who have charge of the affair are working hard and this picnic promises to be far ahead of the previous ones. Further particulars next week.

GONE TO KINGSTON.—Last evening Sheriff and Turnkey Bowles left for Kingston penitentiary with John Kirkland, the aged incendiary who was recently sentenced to three years' imprisonment in that great institution. Kirkland thought he would be pardoned, but such was not the case. He will be 75 years old when he comes out.

DOMINION DAY AT MT FOREST.—Mount Forest will have a grand gala day on July 1st and 2nd, embracing Band Tournament, Horse Races, Acrobat Feats, Athletic Games, Scottish Bagpipe Competition, Scotch and Irish Dancing, Lacrosse and Football Matches, and other Sports. On the evening of the first day there will be a grand Promenade Concert and a fine display of Fire Works. The prizes amount to $1 800. Reduced rates will be given on the railways.

A POPULAR COMMISSIONER.—The Arthur Enterprise pays the following compliment to our old friend, Mr W. B. Jelly: Mr. Census Commissioner Jelly of Bowling Green, Amaranth, wound up his duties on Saturday, and sent in his returns to Ottawa. We only voice the sentiments of all his subordinates, when we say that a more courteous, painstaking and obliging official of the Dominion Government never visited Arthur. Mr. Jelly has had the work promptly and properly done.

CONFIRMATION SERVICES.—Bishop Hamilton, of the Niagara diocese, confirmed thirty-six candidates in St. Mark's church on Monday evening. Unusual interest was manifested in the services, the church being filled to the full extent of its seating capacity. Rev. A. C. Watt, pastor of St. John's church, Mono Mills, assisted at the services. Under the ministrations of Rev. A. Henderson St. Mark's is making very encouraging progress and is rapidly gaining in numbers and influence.

[illegible] Agency is making and a very pretty newspaper rule, a most useful article to publisher and advertiser. This agency has only been in existence a few years and has already worked up a good connection in controlling advertising for some of the largest houses in the United States and Canada. Intending advertisers who are not decided regarding the placing of their announcements, can be saved both time and money by placing their business in their hands.

THE DUFFERINS DEFEAT.—The first championship lacrosse match in the northwestern district this season was played at Fergus on Tuesday between the Dufferins of this town and the Tobies of that place. Our boys have always been defeated at Fergus and the result of this match was a defeat. The Fergus lads took the first, third and fourth games by 11, 7 and 46 shots respectively, while the Dufferins captured the second game in 25 seconds. The best of good feeling prevailed and very little rough play was indulged in by either side. Outside's national game has about gone up stream so far as this district is concerned.

A MONO PIONEER GONE.—Mr. James Wilson, one of the pioneers of Mono township, died at the residence of his son, Charles Wilson, on Thursday last. The deceased was born in the county of Cavan, Ireland, and has been a resident of Mono for over 60 years. The deceased leaves a family of four sons, Edward, John, George and Henry Wilson, all well-to-do farmers, and two daughters, Mrs. Geo. Affleck of Melita, Mich., and Miss Wilson, who resides with her brother Edward. The deceased was 85 years of age. The funeral was held on Friday last, the interment taking place at Whitfield cemetery.—Shelburne Free Press.

KEEP COWS OFF THE TRACK.—The C.P.R. trains of the Credit Valley division have got a mania lately for running into cows or else the cows have got a mania for going on the C.P.R. On Sunday when the wrecking train was running up to Brampton from Churchville they badly damaged a cow on the 1st line crossing, so much so that the remains have not been collected together at the present writing. Again on Monday night the express from Orangeville made mince meat of another one between Campbell's Cross and Edmonton, damaging the engine a little as well as delaying the train 30 minutes. It would be as well for the municipalities to give a little heed to the by-law regarding settle running at large or it may be a little costive to them yet.—Brampton Times.

THE LAKE CO. LEPT.—The Hornings Mills Fishing Company (limited) have been having some trouble over their power to hold exclusively the waters at the Hornings Mills lake from all for their own use. In former years when any person wanted to fish he hired a boat and had that privilege, but since the above company was incorporated this privilege was done away with and only the members of the company were allowed to fish. On the 1st day of May two young men of the vicinity determined to make a test case of it and so waded the creek, the only visible outlet, and lifted some 40 or 50 pounds of trout. One of the men, House by name, was arrested and tried for the offence last week. On the morning the trial took place the boathouse and boats belonging to the company were completely destroyed by fire. The decision was reserved and only given on Saturday against the company. This is a very serious thing to them as they have since the 1st of May put several thousand fry in the lake.

"LAILA."—The presentation of this charming operetta in the town hall on Thursday evening met with the success which its construction and execution richly merited. The piece ran with a smoothness that was pleasing, and every detail was worked out with a care seldom seen in amateur entertainments. The applause which "Laila" elicited from the audience was flattering to its author, and the financial result must be gratifying to its promoters. The amount realized, after allowing for expenses, was between $45 and $50, which sum will be placed to the credit of the spire fund of the church. Forty performers took part in the operetta, and when so many young people, wrapped in the brilliant colors of a tropical garden, with youthful voices tuned to the harmonies of a chorus of nightingales, assemble, indeed must be the heart that would not be soothed thereby. Such entertainments are always elevating, and it is to be hoped "Laila" will be followed by many more in the not distant future.—COM.

TOOGED THEMSELVES OUT.—Sometime last Thursday night three knights of the jimmy paid a business visit to Reeve Lindsay's dry goods and grocery store on west Broadway, and took several articles as memorials of their call. Previous to their visit, however, the trio broke into James Foulds' carpenter shop and took a brace and bit, chisels, screwdrivers and a jimmy, which materially assisted them when they called on the reeve. The burglars gained an entrance to the store by breaking a pane of glass in the rear cellar door and pulling back the bolt. Holes were bored in the door connecting the store and cellar, and the thieves had not much trouble getting in. They carried several suits of clothes to the cellar and exchanged them for their own filthy and tattered garments. The burglars must have had an invitation to some ball for they togged themselves out completely, even to collars. The robbery was not discovered until Friday morning, when the police were notified. Telegrams were sent to neighboring towns, but with no result. Mr. Lindsay's loss will amount to about $50. Three suspicious characters were hanging around town previous to the robbery, but they have disappeared. Nightwatchman Parkin, who passes the store several times every night, says he did not notice anything wrong on the night in question.

50,000 dozen eggs wanted at Endacott Bros., for which they will pay the highest price in cash or exchange.

[illegible] Monday evening and was discussed by the passing of several important measures. During the dog days the aldermanic sessions will not commence until 8 o'clock, half an hour later than formerly. A large audience was present, many expecting that something would be done about the little implementation in the fire brigade, but they were disappointed, however, as nothing was said about the matter. All the members were present excepting Mr. Adamson of the East ward, who has resigned his seat.

ACCOUNTS

from the Gutta Percha Rubber Co., $325; Jas. Armstrong, $2; C.P.R., $3; G.N.W. Telegraph, $1.72; Dog Tax Co., $10; J. S. Leighton, $5.40; T. Bath, $1.55; A. Thompson, $3; ordered to be paid. Accounts from THE SUN, $3; Advertiser, $3; Post, $4.50; referred to the Printing committee. There was quite a debate caused by an account of the G.N.W.T. Co., amounting to $9 54. Some time ago telegrams were sent to the police of other towns to apprehend the burglars who robbed Reeve Lindsay's store. A number of aldermen thought the county should pay the bill, but as the mayor ordered such steps to be taken the council were responsible and the account was allowed to pass.

ALD. ADAMSON QUITS.

Mayor Walsh read a communication from Ald. R. M. Adamson, one of the councillors of the East ward, resigning his position at the council board. Mr. Adamson is employed on the C.P.R. and has been ordered to Parkdale. Deputy reeve Endacott moved that the resignation be accepted, paid Mr. A. a compliment and said he was very sorry that one of the East ward's representatives had to leave town.

Mrs. Emily Beatty wrote that she has been a resident of this town for the past six years and during that period has been able to earn a living and send her two young daughters to school, but now sickness exists in the household and her working hours are occupied by waiting on the sick. She asked the council's aid, and the Charity committee will attend to it.

A REPLY WANTED.

The Orangeville Electric Light and Power Co. wanted to know if the council had done anything about renewing the street-lighting contract, as they wanted a reply as soon as possible. Ald. Fiddis, chairman of the S.L., said he had no report ready, for he had just received information from other towns regarding street lighting.

G. A. Campbell requested 25 feet of ground on the north side of Broadway on which to erect a building. His request was granted under the provisions of a by-law governing such matters.

DIDN'T PAY FOR THE LOT.

Cemetery Caretaker Fromlin informed the council that years ago a man purchased a lot in the cemetery and our interment was made, but the fellow never paid for the lot or for digging the grave. Now he had on hand a cash purchaser for the plot who would pay all expenses connected with the removal of the body to the potterfield. The Cemetery committee will give it their serious consideration.

A FLING AT OUR FIRE SYSTEM.

The secretary of the Underwriters' Association wrote a letter to the mayor about the recent waterworks fire. The underwriters seem to have a very poor opinion of our system. His worship replied to the epistle, pointing out that new appliances had been purchased and a new fire hall would shortly be built.

REPORTS.

The reeve read the treasurer's report for May.

Ald Gillespie reported that the new fire brigade utensils had been received and they were satisfactory. Adopted.

Owing to the retirement of Mr. Adamson, Mayor Walsh read the R. & B. committee's report. Since the last report was submitted $81.42½ had been expended on the streets. Two accounts were attached to the report, which was adopted.

THE QUARRY SPUR LINE.

The mayor gave a verbal report of the deputation that interviewed C.P.R. Superintendent Tait regarding the building of a spur line to the Mono quarries. The C.P.R. were anxious that the line should be built, and would provide the rails and give the right-of-way over the old C.V.R. road. The railway company would do all the shunting to the foot of Broadway and would charge them only 6 per cent. on the cost of the rails. The quarry company was well satisfied, and it is likely work will be commenced at once.

OUR PROPOSED FIRE HALL.

Deputy-reeve Endacott, chairman of the T.P. committee, read the report from that committee and moved that the council go into committee of the whole. The report recommended that the plans of the new fire hall chosen by the committee be adopted, and tenders for its erection be asked for. The building will be a neat two story structure, having a frontage on Broadway of 22 feet and on John street 76 feet. The tower, which is to be 62 feet, will be on the front of the building. The hose reels will be in the front of the building, the engines in the centre and the hook and ladder truck in the rear. The whole of the second floor will be occupied by the engineer as a residence. The committee rose and the report passed.

WOULDN'T TAKE THE JOB.

Reeve Lindsay thought a R. & B. chairman should be appointed at once, and he proposed Ald. Ketchum. Mr. K. declined to take the position, stating that his reason for refusing was that he was out of town too often to attend to it. The reeve then moved that Ald Grey be appointed, but the latter declined, and moved in amendment that the reeve be the R. & B.'s chairman. Mr. Lindsay said he had too much business to attend to and could not possibly fill the office. Finally Mr. Green withdrew his motion and the matter was left in the hands of the R. & B. committee.

POINTERS.

The deputy-reeve inquired if anything more had been heard of the western mill. The mayor said he wrote to the man, society owed to God and their fellow man. After the service the members marched in same order back to their lodge room. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Rev. Mr. Crozier.

MIRACLE OF MODERN DAYS.

Hamilton Produces One of the Most Remarkable Cures on Record.

"VOCALIT DEARLER," NOT DUMB.

Hamilton Times, May 27th, 1891.

One of the most remarkable cures in the history of medicine has just been effected in this city and the fame of it is fast spreading throughout the land. Over four years ago Mr. John Marshall, then employed as manager of Mr. J. G. Williams' coal oil refinery works here, sustained a fall, which at the time was not thought to be serious. He doctored but his trouble grew worse, and contracting cold after cold on his other trouble he was compelled to give up his work entirely. His troubles developed into ataxy, a nervous disorder, held by medical authorities to be incurable. For four years Mr. Marshall has been an intense sufferer. He lost the use of his legs entirely and could not raise himself from his chair except by the use of a crutch and a stick. Though there was power in his legs there was no feeling. They were like dead weights, cold as ice and not susceptible to feeling. He could take his heavy stick and hammer the flesh until the sound or blows filled the house. During the course of these years no less than fourteen leading physicians of this city treated him. Sometimes two or three of them were in attendance at once. All agreed that his disease was incurable. Mr. Marshall went to Toronto for electrical treatment, at a heavy expense, but received not the slightest benefit. He tried every patent medicine that was recommended to him, yet without getting any aid. The "suspension" treatment was resorted to, and he was suspended by means of appliances around his neck and under his arms from the ceiling of the barn, but got no relief. Electric belts and appliances of an endless variety were tried, and thoroughly tried, too, but all resulted the same way—they left Mr. Marshall just as they had found him. At one time twenty pins were run into the flesh of his leg. He barely felt two of them; the others he did not feel at all. His flesh was cut into with a knife and he felt not the slightest pain; and so he went on until the 13th day of April last, every remedy suggested by any one being tried, and hundreds of dollars spent upon patent medicines, to say nothing of doctors' bills.

Mr. Marshall was a member of the Royal Templars of Temperance. He was passed by the physicians of the order as totally disabled for life. The chief medical examiner passed him, and he was paid the $1,000 paid by the order in cases of total disability.

A day or two ago a Times representative called upon Mr. Marshall at his residence, No 25 Little William street. The door was open, and upon knocking a strong steady step was heard. Mr Marshall opened the door and received the reporter cordially. He walked without either crutch or stick and looked the picture of a sturdy, fine man. He conversed freely of his case, as did Mrs. Marshall, who came in later. "Five weeks ago," he said, "I could not raise my foot or bend my leg. As for walking without a stick or crutch it was impossible. I had seen an advertisement of Dr. William's Pink Pills, and as they were especially recommended for nervous disorders, I resolved to try them. I had what the doctors called Locomotor Ataxy. I had not walked for almost four years. My wife said, 'Oh, what's the use of trying another patent medicine?' but I tried the Pink Pills. I had not used one box before I began to feel the effects. The feeling came back to my right leg first. After using them two weeks I was able to walk up to Mr. C. J. Williams' place on McNab street, over a mile and a half from here, and back. I had got nearly home when my left leg gave out, and I nearly went down. I had to stand and rub the leg for several minutes. Then it felt as if a thousand pins were running in it. That was the blood beginning to circulate in the leg that had been dead almost four years. From that time it has steadily improved. Now you see how I am. (Here Mr Marshall arose and walked around the room without artificial assistance.) I have used absolutely nothing but the Pink Pills and taken cold baths as directed on the boxes. To day I walked to the market and back—a three-mile walk. I have lived in Hamilton for 30 years and am well known. Hundreds of people stopped me on the street. Some of them stopped me to see if it was really John Marshall. Hundreds of people have been here to see me. Among them came several physicians who attended me. One of them, and the one who did the most for me, said, 'Well, you are the first cure in 10,000 cases.' I can tell you of a bank messenger in this city who has not walked as straight in 25 years as he has this last week. He took Pink Pills on my recommendation. Scores more in this city are trying them and quite a number in this vicinity have been benefited."

Mr. Marshall is gaining strength rapidly and expects to be back to his work before long. He grows more enthusiastic in talking of Pink Pills and he has good reason to, for his is a remarkable salvation. Since beginning to use the remedy he has regained lost flesh and now weighs more than he has for nine years. He has not an ache or pain, but is conscious of a delicious feeling of healthy life in his legs.

The remarkable case noted in the above article from the Hamilton Times, conclusively proves that the proprietors of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have in no way overstated the merits of their remedy. Pink Pills are a never failing blood builder and nerve tonic, and are equally valuable for men or women, young or old. They cure all forms of debility, female weaknesses, suppressions, chronic constipation, headache, St. Vitus dance, loss of memory, premature decay, etc., and by their marvelous action on the blood, build up the system anew and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow complexions. These pills are sold by all dealers or will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 cents a box) by addressing the Dr Williams's Medical Co., Brockville, Ont.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

The new Presbyterian church at Beeton was opened on Sunday of last week.

Our Tottenham exchange says the people of that village are only semi-civilized.

Harry Newstaff, a Hamilton drummer, was arrested at Toronto the other day for embezzling $100.

It is reported that Senator Allan, ex Speaker of the Senate, will be the next Lieutenant Governor of Ontario.

Rev. Mr. McKay of Georgia, U. S. has accepted a call to the Baptist church in Brampton.

Mr. Chas Armstrong, of Armstrong's mills, Guelph, is throwing out the patent rollers from the mills, and replacing them with the old stone grinders, as the farmers would rather have their own grist ground.

Two Years Ago.

Two years ago I was troubled with an ulcer on my ankle, having used B. B. B. for bad blood I procured a bottle and a box of Burdock Healing Ointment. After using 3 bottles and 3 boxes I was completely cured. Mrs. Wm. V Boyd, Brantford, Ont.

A written advertisement announces that "a large white sow with two black spots" will be sold at the village pound, on Friday 5th June at 10 o'clock p. m. We can't bid on that pig, as we always go to bed at 9.—Arthur Enterprise.

Mrs. Thomson, mother of Mr. J. B. Hunter, West Oxford, between Ingersoll and Beachville, was born Aug. 27th, 1787, in London, Eng., and will consequently be 104 years old in August next. She is in possession of all her faculties and quite active for one of her age.

The dynamite used to open up the waterworks trenches of Galt, is pretty powerful stuff. The protector used to keep stones from flying is built of heavy oak timber, faced with boiler plate, and is said to weigh quite a five tons. Yet two protection was blown clear over on this occasions on Saturday, besides all the rock to a depth of six feet being reduced to fragments.

FOUND DEAD IN HIS BARN.

Tragic End of one of the Best Known Men in Toronto Township.

COOKSVILLE, Ont. May 23.—Alexander H. Griffith, one of the most highly respected citizens of this community, has been very despondent of late on account of very poor health and other troubles. He left the house this morning about 7 o'clock, presumably to go to work, and nothing was seen of him until about 2 o'clock this afternoon, when his body was found in the driving shed. A shot gun was lying beside him, which he had evidently used with fatal effect. Mr. Griffith was prominently connected with St. John's church, Dixie, having been superintendent of the Sunday school for several years past. He was secretary of Cooksville public school. He was also connected with the Orange order. He leaves a wife and five children.

About six weeks ago Rev. T. Geoghegan of Hamilton took a man out to Waterdown and left him at the residence of a resident of that village. A few days ago he contracted pleuro pneumonia and died last Friday without giving his name. He claimed to have charge of a coffee plantation in Natal and was expecting to receive some letters, on receipt of which he would leave the village. The letters arrived an hour after his death. They are addressed to D. R. Hutchkin. His relatives are well off and live in Stamford, England.

Winter Sports.

The gay winter season exposes many to attacks of colds, coughs, hoarseness, tightness of the chest, asthma, bronchitis, etc., which requires a reliable remedy like Hargyard's Pectoral Balsam for their relief and cure. Known as reliable for over thirty years. The best cough cure.

Mr. Geo. Atkinson, of Marden, brought a number of cattle to Guelph on Thursday. While proceeding down Wyndham street a bull turned into the Great North Western Telegraph office. One of the message boys on seeing the approach of the animal jumped over the counter in less time than it takes to tell the story. The visitor surveyed the premises and quietly walked out again.

Orangeville, May 6th.

Some leather's mean. Some workmen are mean. Some shoe sellers are mean. That's how mean shoes get made and sold.

Six out of every ten pairs of shoes are shams—pasted stock, "pancakes." Bits of useless leather are pressed and made into insoles, just as bits of useless wool are carded with long cotton and made into shoddy.

Never was a time when shoes looked so well and were so badly, until the shoeing of a whole family has come to be a serious task. There's no reason for mean shoes. Some shopkeepers see a reason for them in their cheapness, but if that's so, the meaner they're made, the better. (The wearer wouldn't tolerate that reason for a moment). The only room for them is the room they usurp, and the saving is a saving at the spigot to waste at the bung.

And the remedy?

There's a store where you can't buy shoddy shoes, because they don't sell them; where they have neither two prices nor two names for the same thing; where American kid doesn't pass for French, and machine sewed doesn't masquerade as hand-sewed.

It's here. None but the best at the lowest prices, though best only means with what restrictions of price that're necessary.

For the men there's a good seamless Bal. for $1.75, and a better at $2.50, good enough to get married in. For the ladies here's some nice Dongola Shoes, Bals. and Button'd, at $2.75, the J. D. K. make (none better), as well as Toe Slippers at 85c., and Dong. Oxfords at $1.25, with childrens' shoes galore. There's no better for the money anywhere. We don't know how to sell "poor" shoes. More than that, we don't want to know.

You can get a Lady's fine Button Boot of us at 90c. a pair.

NIGHT IN THE COUNTRY.

Oh, bird that lingers in the bush
Of twilight as it falleth,
Return to new note your song;
Let how your sweet note calleth!
Oh, loving ones, hasten to your fold,
Or you will be benighted—
Ere now the milkmaid lonely sits,
Too late for you she's waited!

From yonder church the chiming bells
Ring for the Angelus sweet,
And piano tones, with hooded hands,
The evening prayer repeat.
The lambs with discordant notes
A merry concert bleat,
As though the coming on of night
Made their small hearts more bold.

The jasmine vine that shades the porch
Breaks out in sweetest song,
And wafting from the lily bed
Are with the others blent;
The lock of kine and notes of birds
Grew fainter and more faint,
Even the broken hayfields
Have hushed their loud complaint.

The glimmering lights begin to shine
From many a windowpane,
And mothers rock their babies and sing
A sweet goodnight refrain.
To all there comes a country peace,
The quiet of a night
That is removed from out the world,
Far from the city's blight!

GOVERNMENT BY THE GALLOWS.

Kane Hanged at Belleville for the Murder of His wife—Cool to the Last.

Last Thursday James Kane was hanged at Belleville for the murder of his wife, which took place in that city on March 23 last. There was a large number of people present. The prisoner had kept up a cheerful mood ever since his incarceration and sentence, and was only too anxious for the hour of execution to arrive. Wednesday he spent in meditation and prayer, his spiritual advisers, Monsignor Farrelly and O'Brien, being with him a good part of the day. In the evening an altar was erected in his cell, and about 7.30 the clergyman arrived, when the prisoner partook of communion and joined heartily in the prayers that were said. His daughter was present at this service.

At 12 o'clock the condemned man went to bed and slept soundly until 4 Thursday morning, at which hour his daughter arrived and stayed with him until 5.15. His spiritual advisers arrived about 5 o'clock, and remained until after 7, after which the doomed man's breakfast was brought in. It consisted of ham and eggs, of which he ate heartily, washing it down with a cup of coffee.

At about 8.15 those who were to witness the execution were admitted to the jail yard and took ground opposite the gallows, which was erected in a small enclosure on the women's side of the jail at the west end. The same frame was used as that in the hanging of Davis nearly a year ago. The procession to the gallows commenced at 8.10. It was headed by Sheriff Hope and his deputy, then came Dr. Chamberlain, Inspector of Prisons, Toronto, Sailes Appleton and two jail prisoners, with a leather girdle around his arms. Of all present he was perhaps coolest, walking between Fathers Brennan and Connolly with a firm step, and after them the prayers and stand under the gallows, which he eyed critically. He shook hands with the clergy and the jail officials.

In a somewhat tremulous voice he said: "I wish to thank the officials of the jail, and particularly Mr. Appleby, the father, for his kindness to me."

Then the black cap was drawn over his head, and the last words uttered by him were, "May God have mercy on my soul." At the words of the Lord's Prayer, "Deliver us from all evil," the rope was cut, the weight, 360 pounds, dropped. The body was jerked about six feet in the air, almost turning a somersault. The body was not cut down until nearly half an hour afterwards, when it was lowered into a very nice coffin and was buried in the jail yard. When the black cap was removed the unfortunate man man looked quite natural, the face showing not the slightest expression of suffering, although death was caused by strangulation.

Kane's daughter is a pretty girl of winning manner. Her home is in Toronto and she remained with her father until the execution. She has not seen him since she was a little girl. She denies the report that her father was related to Kane who was recently hung in Toronto. Another married daughter in Toronto was not aware that her father was to be executed. George Skinner who is a step son, and has been trying to sell his step father's photographs to the newspapers, made application to the sheriff to witness the execution, but was promptly refused.

Radcliffe says that he hasn't done a tap of work outside his profession since Nov. 23 last when the directors of the Bonnyside Boat Club dispensed with his services as steward. "Pretty hard luck for a man with a wife and three little ones to look after," he continued. "Oh, I'll get a job some of these days. I wonder what the Government is going to do about appointing a P. E. I wish they would do something soon. I guarantee that I will do the work right."

The rope used was the same as that which did service at the Birchall, Blanchard and Lamontagne executions, and it will also be brought into requisition on June 4 to hang Larocque at L'Original, Radcliffe having been engaged for this execution also.

Fred Cutten, who works for Mr. John Murnahan, 4th line, had a wonderful chase after a fox the other day. The young man was working in the field when he saw a fox come out of its hole. He immediately gave chase, and after a hard run succeeded in catching it by the tail and killing it. Though foxes are noted for their cunning, yet Cutten was a good deal sharper than this one. Hillsburg Banner.

The Ready-made Clothing is now taking the lead at Leighton's Cash Grocery, Boot & Shoe Store, Orangeville.

It is going the rounds of the press that a doctor, who had worked hundreds of cures with his liver medicine, owned up the other day when dying that his "remedy" was of no earthly good in a real case, but that he simply worked on the imagination. He says that a man who won't believe in anything will believe that his liver is out of order. One reason is that from childhood we are made to believe that if any one has a physical ailment it can be traced to the liver; and so it can most of the time.

Keep the Works in good order.
NEWMAN, Ont., January 15, 1890.
W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.
DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time piece: dull and delicate are moved its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but week year, as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.
Yours faithfully, H. F. ATWELL.

The pensive vine that shades the porch
Breaks out in greenest green,
And twittings from the tip and [illegible] with the warm heat;
The low of kine and notes of birds
Grow fainter and more faint,
Even the restless Redpolls
Now hushed their hurl complaint.

The glimmering lights begin to shine
From many a window pane,
And mothers rock their babies and sing
A sweet good-night refrain.
To all there comes a country peace,
The quiet of a night
That is unknown from out the world,
Yet from the city's light!

GOVERNMENT BY THE GALLOWS.

Kane Hanged at Belleville for the Murder of his wife—Cool to the Last.

Last Thursday James Kane was hanged at Belleville for the murder of his wife, which took place in that city on March 23 last. There was a large number of people present. The prisoner had kept up a cheerful mood ever since his incarceration and sentence, and was only too anxious for the hour of execution to arrive. Wednesday he spent in meditation and prayer, his spiritual advisers, Monsignors Farrelly and O'Brien, being with him a good part of the day. In the evening an altar was erected in his cell, and about 7.30 the clergymen arrived, when the prisoner partook of communion and joined heartily in the prayers that were said. His daughter was present at this service.

At 12 o'clock the condemned man went to bed and slept soundly until 4 Thursday morning, at which hour his daughter arrived and stayed with him until 7.15. His spiritual advisers arrived about 5 o'clock, and remained until after 7, after which the doomed man's breakfast was brought in. It consisted of ham and eggs, of which he ate heartily, washing it down with a cup of coffee.

At about 8.15 those who were to witness the execution were admitted to the jail yard and took ground opposite the gallows, which was erected in a small enclosure on the women's side of the jail at the west end. The same frame was used as that in the hanging of Davis nearly a year ago. The procession to the gallows commenced at 8.10. It was headed by Sheriff Hope and his deputy, then came Dr. Chamberlain, Inspector of Prisons, Toronto, Keller Appleton and then the prisoner, with a leather girdle around his arms. Of all present he was perhaps coolest, walking between Fathers Dowd and Connelly with a firm step, [illegible] after these the prayers and [illegible] stand under the gallows, which [illegible] horrifically. He shook hands [illegible] clergy and the jail officials.

In a somewhat tremulous voice he said: "I wish to thank the officials of the jail, and particularly Mr. Appleby, the jailer, for his kindness to me."

Then the black cap was drawn over his head, and the last words uttered by him were, "May God have mercy on my soul." At the words of the Lord's Prayer, "Deliver us from all evil," the rope was cut, the weight, 360 pounds, dropped. The body was jerked about six feet in the air, almost turning a somersault. The body was not cut down until nearly half an hour afterwards, when it was lowered into a very nice coffin and was buried in the jail yard. When the black cap was removed the unfortunate man was looked quite natural, the face showing not the slightest expression of suffering, although death was caused by strangulation.

Kane's daughter is a pretty girl of winning manner. Her home is in Toronto and she remained with her father until the execution. She has not seen him since she was a little girl. She denies the report that her father was related to Kane who was recently hung in Toronto. Another married daughter in Toronto was not aware that her father was to be executed. George Skinner who is a step-son, and has been trying to sell his step-father's photographs to the newspapers, made application to the sheriff to witness the execution, but was promptly refused.

Radcliffe says that he hasn't done a tap of work outside his profession since Nov. 23 last when the directors of the Bonnyside Boat Club dispensed with his services as steward. "Pretty hard luck for a man with a wife and three little ones to look after," he continued. "Oh, I'll get a job some of these days. I wonder what the Government is going to do about appointing a 'P. E.' I wish they would do something soon. I guarantee that I will do the work right."

The rope used was the same as that which did service at the Birchall, Blanchard and Lamontagne executions, and it will also be brought into requisition on June 4 to hang Larocque at L'Original, Radcliffe having been engaged for this execution also.

Mr. John Munroe, of Kinsardine, celebrated his 83rd birthday a few days ago. He was born in Sutherlandshire, Scotland, within one mile of the birthplace of the Right Honorable Sir John A. Macdonald, of whom he is a personal friend and admirer. He and Sir John were both initiated into the Renfrew Lodge, A. F. & A. M. Fred Cutten, who works for Mr. John Monnahan, 4th line, had a wonderful chase after a fox the other day. The young man was working in the field when he saw a fox come out of its hole. He immediately gave chase, and after a hard run succeeded in catching it by the tail and killing it. Though foxes are noted for their cunning, yet Cutten was a good deal sharper than this one. It is going the rounds of the press that a doctor, who had worked hundreds of cures with his liver medicine, owned up the other day when dying that his "remedy" was of no earthly good in a real case, but that he simply worked on the imagination. He says that a man who won't believe in anything will believe that his liver is out of order. One reason is that from childhood we are made to believe that if any one has a physical ailment it can be traced to the liver; and so it can most of the time.

Keep the Works in good order.
NEWMARKET, Ont., January 12, 1891.
W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.
DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best medicine for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time piece: full and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but wait you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.
Yours faithfully,
H. F. ATWELL.

Poetry.

THE FISHERMAN'S FEAST.

Of all the gladness gifts of saving
Is there another one surpass
This delicate, voluptuous thing—
This dappled grayling, plump and delicate as Upon a damask napkin laid
What satisfaction superadd
Our gustatory nerves pervade,
Provoking quenchless thirst for wine.

The ancients loved this noble fish,
And coming from the kitchen fire
All piping hot upon a dish,
What captious did honest Izaplen?
"Fish should swim twice," they used to say
Once in their native, rapid brine,
And then again a better way—
You understand—fish on the wine!

A dainty monarch of the flood,
How often have I cast for you—
How often sadly seen you scud
Where weeds and pussy willows grow;
How often have you slicked my bait,
How often snapped my treacherous line—
You have I have you on this plate!
You shall swim twice—and now in wine.

And, lackies, quaffers, let the blood
Of cobwebbed years be spilled for him—
Ay, in a cob Burgundian flood.
This piscatorial pride should swim;
So, were he living, he should say
He gladly died for me and mine,
And, as it were his native spray,
He'd lash the same—what ho! the wine.

I would it were ordained for me
To share your fate, O finny friend!
I surely were not loath to be
Reserved for such a noble end;
For when old Chronos, grant and grim,
At last reels in his ruthless line,
What were my ecstacy to swim
In wine, in wine, in glorious wine!

Well, here's a health to you; sweet spring!
And, prithee, while I attack to earth,
Come hither every year and bring
The boons provocative of mirth;
And should your stock of bass run low,
However much I might repine,
I think I might survive the blow
If piled with wine, and still more wine!

The Story Teller.

OLIVE VARCOE

—OR—

TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER VI. (Continued.)

But the bell sounded out over the green wood in vain; and Mrs. Maristowe, overcome by terror and anxiety, became so alarmingly ill that John flung himself on horseback, and galloped away for a doctor. It was the echo of his furious driving, which reached Olive and young Vigo as they stood together on the hill among the leaves and shadows.

Olive crept towards the house cautiously, by the garden. It was evident she wished to avoid meeting any member of the household. At any slight sound she turned, with a strange dread on her face, and hurried away in another direction

The library window opened on a secluded part of the grounds, and towards this she bent her steps. Choosing the loneliest paths, she succeeded in reaching it without being seen; but even now she stood behind a tall hedge of laurustinus, and scanned the house earnestly before she approached nearer. Just at this part there was but one window, a large bay one, which had been added to the library; no other window looked over this portion of the garden. Olive glanced within the room with eager eyes; it was empty. The window, opening to the ground, swung gently in the evening air, and a branch of trailing passion flower, stirred by the wind, tapped against the glass. Setting this aside with trembling fingers, she entered with a soft, swift step, and gazed round with frightened eyes. All was silence and solitude. Apparently gaining courage by the stillness, she opened the door gently and passed through it

There were cranky corners and strange surprises in the old house of Trewavas, and one of these was a little dark, spiral staircase, just without the library door, which ran up through an ancient tower. The staircase was never used now, and the small arched door at the foot was kept locked. Nevertheless, as the place was curious, it was shown to visitors, and the key was usually to be found in the drawer of the library table. This time, however, it was in Olive's pocket; and withdrawing it, she placed it in the lock softly, and turned it with a strong hand. As the stout, nail studded oak door opened outwards unwillingly she slipped within, and closed it after her. This staircase went up direct to the leads, passing only two rooms on its way. One of these was Olive's bed-chamber, the other, the higher, was John's painting room. Both these apartments were reached by the ordinary staircase, and no one ever went to and fro to them by the one Olive was now using.

She passed her own room without stopping, and went on to the upper one. At the door of this she paused and listened. Not a sound met her ear. Then she tapped gently, and, in a breathless voice, whispered, "John—John!" There was no answer; then, drawing her breath like one in deep fear, she tried the door with a silent, cautious touch, and found it yield readily to her hand. As it opened, she clung to the massive oak for support, saying to herself, in a low voice of anguish, "I thought so! Merciful Heaven! did he see me?"

On the table lay a pair of pistols, some boxing gloves and fishing tackle; on the easel was a painting, still wet, and by it were the palette and brushes, and John's easy chair. Olive gazed curiously at the drawing, as if to note how much work had been done since last she saw it. Then she took up the pistols and gloves, and searched on the table as if looking for something. Papers, letters, brushes, she turned over with a careless hand, apparently without finding the object of her search; and as she replaced article after article on the table, the aspect of her face grew strange, and the color on her cheeks seemed in very fire. When she had examined everything on the table, she stood a moment bewildered, then she turned to the chimney-piece, and bestowed on that the same minute search that she had given to the table.

It was noticeable that in John's room no drawers or cupboards were locked; all wed open to Olive's inspection. The place was so solitary, and so seldom visited by one save herself, that perhaps no more than a glance was necessary to see look and key. Hence Olive was able to glance rapidly at his diary and letters. It was wonderful with what quickness she did this, and with what a smile she saw the whole pages, and of so crushing them in her palm, placed them in her dress, which she held up in her hand.

In ten minutes Olive had examined the whole room, and still her face wore the expectant and painful look which had characterized it on entering; gathering up the crushed leaves of the journal in her dress, she moved about to quit the chamber, when her restless glance fell again on the table. Once more she approached it; and, as the unnatural lustre of her eye grew fixed and feverish, as some dreadful fear within her rankled in her very hair, and shook in every fold of her dress, she seized doubtingly a small packet labelled 'Carmine.' With hurrying fingers she tore off the outer covering, disclosing a little parcel wrapped in white paper. She did not undo this. She had found the object of her search, and holding it tightly clenched in her left hand, she drew a long breath of relief. There was no need for her to open this little package, for on the white paper in large letters was written a word which told her what it was. On the inside of the wrapper labelled "Carmine" she wrote her name—"Olive;" then she placed it on a conspicuous part of the table, and slowly moved away. Slowly, too, her eyes travelled around the room as though bidding it farewell; and her glance falling on a picture oahang and standing against the wall, she went toward it, and turned it. It was the face of Eleanor Maristowe.

Uttering a low shriek, she covered her eyes with her hand, and put the portrait back without glancing at it again; but the color had fled from her cheeks, and even her lips were white, as, sustaining her trembling limbs by leaning against the wall for support, she ejaculated in a low tone, "Great Heavens, she haunts me! There are too many of these portraits here," she added suddenly.

Swift as thought, she seized from his portfolio many of John's sketches, and crushing them with the other papers gathered in her dress, she quitted the room with a faltering step, closing the door softly behind her.

Olive's room in the tower of Trewavas had two windows. Both were Gothic, both opened with a casement; but the one looking west on the sea was so covered with trailing plants and flowers, that even when set wide open, it admitted only a pleasant trelis-work of leaves, intermingled with blossoms of magnolia, myrtle and fuchsia. The room also had two doors, one opening on a corridor communicating with the rest of the house; the other opened on the old spiral stone stairs. But this door, apparently never used, was masked within the room by a closet. Thus, when you entered by the spiral stairs, you came at first into the closet, and from that you entered the room. The former was hung with shelves and pegs for dresses; and as the chamber was sparingly furnished, Olive had placed here not only her wardrobe but her store of books.

The place was very dark; yet Olive, on entering, carefully abstained from opening the door leading to her room which would have admitted light. On the contrary, she tried this door, to ascertain if it was still bolted, as she had in fact left it in the morning. Finding it firmly fastened, she placed slightly ajar the old Gothic door on the stairs and this brought her a dim light from the narrow loop-hold cut in the ancient wall of the tower. By this thin ray of fading twilight she tied the papers she had taken from John's room in a handkerchief, and hung it on one of the pegs behind two or three old dresses.

"The more careless the place," she said to herself, "the less likely is any one to find them, supposing they are looked for before—"

She paused and faltered, seeming afraid to pursue her own thoughts Then she shut the door on the stairs, inclosing herself in blank darkness, and it was not until she had waited many moments listening in intense silence, that she drew back the bolts on the other door and emerged into her room.

The western window was open; and through the shining magnolia leaves, through the starry myrtle and jasmine blossoms, through the pendant fuchsias, came a glimpse of the sea. At the first glance it seemed streaked with blood, for the first hues of sunset shone on it, intermingled with dark lines of heavy clouds, blackening the waves while near inshore the water gleamed silvery, trembling beneath the faint ray of the summer moon. There was a wonderful look on Olive's face as she gazed on it; a look deepening in grief as she slowly turned her eyes round the pleasant chamber on all the old familiar things. It would seem as if before she had only seen them with an outward vision, and now was looking on them with the awakened eyes of the soul.

"Heaven forgive me!" she murmured, falling on her forehead, with both hands pressing against her forehead. "And this morning I deemed myself unhappy What am I now?"

Approaching footsteps made her start to her feet, and she stood up trembling. "What am I to do?" she said. "Now I must try to be my old self. But my old self is gone—gone for ever! And how shall I bring it back? How act so as to deceive—?"

There was a knock at the door, and a voice cried, "Miss Olive! Miss Olive! are you never going to answer?"

"What do you want?" said Olive, in a sharp voice.

"Let me in, please, Miss, and I'll tell you," said the maid.

"How can I let you in when I've been locked up here since lunch time?" asked Olive, in her most pardonate voice, shaking the door as she spoke.

"Good gracious, Miss, who locked you in?" said the maid.

"How can I tell?" said Olive. "But I am not a child to be treated in this manner; and if this was done by Lady Trewavas, I shall let her know that, if I bore ill usage as a child, I am not going to be insulted as a woman. If I am to be made a prisoner at Trewavas, I will quit this house at once."

"Oh, don't be in a passion, Miss Olive. I'll go to my lady for the key."

As the servant went, Olive pressed her hands on her forehead again, and looked upwards wildly. Then as the door closed behind the retreating footsteps, she hastily dressed herself in her black dress, which she threw into the closet, and arranged herself in a long trailing dress of heavy silk. "But had time to do this, and even to arrange her hair, and change her wet boots for cotton slippers, before the servant again approached the door. Then she had turned in the lock, and a tear-looking girl with grey eyes entered. "My lady is very sorry, Miss Olive," she said; "but in the commotion here you was quite forgotten."

"What commotion?" said Olive, turning sharply on the girl. "How dared they lock me in my room? Who did it?"

"Really, Miss Olive," said the girl, "if you give way to such passions, you can't wonder if people look you in for safety's sake."

"Did Lady Trewavas send you here to insult me?" asked Olive, as her eyes flashed. "Who made me a prisoner here?"

"Well, Miss, if you must know," said the girl, drawing back, "it was Mr. John."

"John!" said Olive; and the blood forsook her face with such swiftness that there seemed to be a sudden white shadow fallen over it.

Lady Trewavas' maid shrugged her shoulders impertinently.

"You and Mr. John, Miss, are such very good friends, Miss," said she, "that I dare say you are surprised; but I'm not telling you an untruth. He brought the key to my lady and I heard him say just now he had locked your door, because you were in that towering passion this morning that he was afraid to let you come near Miss Maristowe again."

Olive essayed to speak, but her lips shook so fast that no sound issued from them.

"There you are again, Miss Olive," said the girl. "I wouldn't give way so if I was you, Miss. My lady says she is very sorry she forgot you, only her mind has been that anxious about Miss Maristowe, she couldn't think of nothing else. Dinner is over, and they are all at desert. Will you have a bit of something in the breakfast parlor, Miss?"

"No, I'll have nothing!" said Olive, fiercely; but, as she spoke, a sudden sickness seized her, and she fell forward almost fainting.

"You are wisht as moonlight," said the girl, catching her in her arms, "and as white as a ghost. That's with going without victuals for so long. I shall bring you a bit of dinner up here, Miss."

Olive seemed to hesitate a moment, and then she said "yes," faintly.

When the woman was gone she rallied all her strength, and recalled her shrinking courage.

"I must eat and drink," she said to herself. "I have much to do; and I have not been curious enough. I must ask questions. And yet how can I—how dare I?"

"Here's a bit of chicken for you and a glass of wine," said the servant, returning with a tray. "Why didn't you ring your bell, Miss Olive, at dinner time? Some one would have come to you then."

"I was too angry," replied Olive. "I would have stayed here forever first And why did they keep ringing that great bell to-day till I was tired of hearing it?"

"We rung for Sir Hilton and Miss Maristowe, Miss Olive," said the girl; "and that's what we are in such a way about, for Sir Hilton did not come in till long past seven, and dinner was put off again and again."

"Well, they are come in now, I presume," said Olive, carelessly. "You said they were all at dessert."

"Only my lady and old Mr. Vigo and Dr. Burton, Miss," replied the girl. "Miss Maristowe isn't found yet, and her ma is dreadful alarmed. She've had fit after fit, and Mr John tore away on horseback after Dr. Burton."

"That's strange," said Olive. "Where can Eleanor be? Has she lost herself? Did she go out alone?"

"She went out alone about 3 o'clock, Miss," was the reply, "but it seems she promised to meet Sir Hilton at 5, at the Lovers' Seat on the cliff. And he got there first, and waited for her till he heard the bell going; then he came home, expecting to find her here. And when he heard she wasn't come in, he was in a fine way He would have gone out again directly, only my lady made him take a bit of dinner first. Now he and Mr. John are gone out together, with the gamekeeper and two more."

"What a fuss!" said Olive, laying down the knife and fork. "I wonder poor Mrs. Maristowe frightens herself so much."

"Well, I don't know," said the girl; "my lady is rather frightened too. Miss Eleanor is usually such a timid young lady. She isn't one to stop out late like this by herself. I'm afraid she's took ill somewhere, and I shall feel awful upset until she comes in. That's how we all come to forget you, Miss Olive, being in such a flurry. It was Mr. John who thought of you at last. 'Where's Miss Varcoe?' he says to the butler, when they were all eating a hurried dinner. 'Is she out too?' Then Mr. Craye comes out of the dining-room and tells me to call you down; and I came to your door, Miss Olive, twice before you answered me."

"I did not hear you the first time," said Olive—"I suppose I fell asleep over my book; and the next time I was too angry to answer. How do I look? Can I go down in the drawing room?"

"You are looking beautiful, Miss," replied the girl. "Your color has come back now you've had a bit of dinner."

Olive went to the glass, and certainly she saw something more than the servant's gaze could discern, for her color fade gradually faded as she regarded herself, and the pupils of her eyes dilated.

"I am looking horrible," she said; "I don't know what is the matter with me to-day. Who is in the drawing-room, Tamson?"

"Only my lady and old Mr. Vigo, and the Doctor, Miss," replied Tamson.

"There I'll go down," said Olive, drawing a long breath. "But I don't feel fit to see anyone. When I fall into a passion I am always ill the whole day afterwards. I dare say I shall say some wild, mad things."

Tamson seemed perfectly well acquainted with Olive's fitful humor. She said her eye a moment by the door.

"If you please, Miss," she pleaded, "don't make no bother to night; don't go off into one of them outlandish fits of yours—last night, not till Miss Gwynne's come to. I know it's rare trying to be locked up a whole afternoon, but you see, Mr. John didn't mean that—"

"Well, well, don't let him come near me, that's all," interrupted Olive. "If he does I shall go mad."

The strange gleam in Olive's eyes, and the light clenching of her small hands, continued Tamson she was in earnest.

"I'll keep him out of your way, Miss," she said, eagerly; "I will indeed."

"Mind, that's a promise, Tamson," said Olive; in a clear, rapid whisper.

As Olive's small form passed down the corridor, with the glimmer of the pale moon gleaming on the yellow satin of her dress, and shining with faint flickerings on the thick coils of her black hair, Tamson watched her with a shudder.

"She makes my blood run cold this evening somehow," said the girl; "she's so little and so unearthly, and there's something in her ways that gives me the horrors."

The New Air Ship.

The new air ship travels 200 miles an hour, good time, but some too quick if one wanted Hagyard's Yellow Oil. This peerless pain-soothing remedy is a prompt and pleasant cure for sore throat, croup, colds, rheumatism, pains in the chest, and back neuralgia. For external and colonial use. Price 25c.

HOW TO READ THE TONGUE.

The perfectly healthy tongue is clean, moist, lies loosely in the mouth, is round at the edge and has no prominent papillæ The tongue may be furred from local causes, or from sympathy with the stomach, intestines or liver. The dry tongue occurs most frequently in fever, and indicates a nervous prostration or depression. A white tongue is diagnostic simply of the feverish condition with perhaps a sour stomach. When it is moist and yellowish brown it shows disordered digestion. Dry and brown indicate a low state of the system, possibly typhoid. When the tongue is dry and red and smooth, look out for inflammation, gastric or intestinal. When the papillæ on the end of the tongue are raised and very red we call it a strawberry tongue, and that means scarlet fever. Sharp, pointed red tongue will hint of brain irritation or inflammation, and a yellow coating indicates liver derangement. When so much can be gained from an examination of the tongue, how important it is that the youngest child should be taught to put it out so that it can be visible to the uttermost point in the throat.

If a woman doesn't walk well let her take a southern prescription for a bad walk. For about fifteen minutes in the morning and the evening let her put her hands behind her clasping them, and lay a light, flat book on her head and then promenade her room with a determination not to drop that book; after a week a paper basin with a little water in it can take the place of the book, and, as the head holds its place better, the step is less jerky and the body doesn't wiggle; the basin can be filled until the student is able to walk with it and not spill a drop.

Winter Sports.

The gay winter season expose many to attacks of colds, coughs, hoarseness, tightness of the chest, asthma, bronchitis, etc., which requires a reliable remedy like Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam for their relief and cure. Known as reliable for over thirty years. The best cough cure.

TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER VI. (Continued.)

But the bell sounded out over the green wood in vain; and Mrs. Maristowes, overcome by terror and anxiety, became so alarmingly ill that John flung himself on horseback, and galloped away for a doctor. It was the echo of his furious driving, which reached Olive and young Vigo as they stood together on the hill among the leaves and shadows.

Olive crept towards the house cautiously, by the garden. It was evident she wished to avoid meeting any member of the household. At any slight sound she turned, with a strange dread in her face, and hurried away in another direction.

The library window opened on a secluded part of the grounds, and towards this she bent her steps. Choosing the loneliest paths, she succeeded in reaching it without being seen: but even now she stood behind a tall hedge of laurustinus, and examined the house earnestly before she approached nearer. Just at this part there was but one window, a large bay one, which had been added to the library; no other window looked over this portion of the garden. Olive glanced within the room with eager eyes; it was empty. The window, opening to the ground, swung gently in the evening air, and a branch of trailing passion flower, stirred by the wind, tapped against the glass. Setting this aside with trembling fingers, she entered with a soft, swift step, and gazed round with frightened eyes. All was silence and solitude. Apparently gaining courage by the stillness, she opened the door gently and passed through it.

There were cranky corners and strange surprises in the old house of Trewavas, and one of these was a little dark, spiral staircase, just without the library door, which ran up through an ancient tower. The staircase was never used now, and the small arched door at the foot was kept locked. Nevertheless, as the place was curious, it was shown to visitors, and the key was usually to be found in the drawer of the library table. This time, however, it was in Olive's pocket; and withdrawing it, she placed it in the lock softly, and turned it with a strong hand. As the stout, nail studded oak door opened outwards unwillingly she slipped within, and closed it after her. This staircase went up direct to the leads, passing only two rooms on its way. One of these was Olive's bed-chamber; the other, the higher, was John's painting room. Both these apartments were reached by the ordinary staircase, and no one ever went to and fro to them by the one Olive was now using.

She passed her own room without stopping, and went on to the upper one. At the door of this she paused and listened. Not a sound met her ear. Then as a tapped gently, and, in a breathless voice, whispered, "John—John!" There was no answer; then, drawing her breath like one in deep fear, she tried the door with a silent, cautious touch, and found it yield readily to her hand. As it opened, she clung to the massive oak for support, saying to herself, in a low voice of anguish, "I thought so! Merciful Heaven! did he see me?"

On the table lay a pair of pistols, some boxing gloves and tobing tackle; on the easel was a painting, still wet, and by it were the palette and brushes, and John's easy chair. Olive gazed curiously at the drawing, as if to note how much work had been done since last she saw it. Then she took up the pistols and gloves, and scrutinized on the table as if looking for something. Papers, letters, brushes, she turned over with a careful hand, apparently without finding the object of her search; and as she replaced article after article on the table, the aspect of her face grew strange or, and the color on her cheeks seemed in very fire. When she had examined everything on the table, she stood a moment bewildered, then she turned to the chimney-piece, and bestowed on that the same minute search that she had given to the table.

It was noticeable that in John's room no drawers or cupboard's were locked; all was open to Olive's inspection. The place was so military, and so seldom drew a long breath of repose. Whatever was so good for her to open this little package. Set on the white paper in large letters was written a word which told her what it was. On the inside of the wrapper labelled "Carmine" she wrote her name—"Olive;" then she placed it on a conspicuous part of the table, and slowly moved away. Slowly, too, her eyes travelled around the room as though bidding it farewell; and her glance falling on a picture hanging and standing against the wall, she went toward it, and turned it. It was the face of Eleanor Maristowes.

Uttering a low shriek, she covered her eyes with her hand, and put the portrait back without glancing at it again; but the color had fled from her cheeks, and even her lips where white, as, sustaining her trembling limbs by leaning against the wall for support, she ejaculated in a low tone, "Great Heaven, she haunts me! There are too many of these portraits here," she added sadly.

Swift as thought, she seized from his portfolio many of John's sketches, and crushing them with the other papers gathered in her arms, she quitted the room with a faltering step, closing the door softly behind her.

Olive's room in the tower of Trewavas had two windows. Both were Gothic, both opened with a casement; but the one looking west on the sea was so covered with trailing plants and flowers, that even when not wide open, it admitted only a pleasant trelis-work of leaves, intermingled with blossoms of magnolia, myrtle and fushsia. The room also had two doors, one opening on a corridor communicating with the rest of the house; the other opened on the old spiral stone stairs. But this door, apparently never used, was masked within the room by a closet. Thus, when you entered by the spiral stairs, you came at first into the closet, and from that you entered the room. The former was hung with shelves and pegs for dresses; and as the chamber was sparingly furnished, Olive had placed here not only her wardrobe but her store of books.

The place was very dark; yet Olive, on entering, carefully abstained from opening the door leading to her room which would have admitted light. On the contrary, she tried this door, as the sentinel, the door of the closet

A NATIONAL MEMORIAL.

(Toronto.)

While the name of Canada remains upon the map of the world and the history of this country is read by generations to come, there need be no fear that the name and work of Sir John Macdonald will ever pass into oblivion. But at this solemn hour, while the thoughts of the nation are with him who has been so recently taken from us, there is a universal feeling that some national memorial should attest in a tangible form to future generations the life and work of him whom we mourn. Parliament will doubtless, as on a former occasion, make some appropriation to that end, but it is felt that in this instance no mere parliamentary tribute will suffice. The exact form which such a memorial should take may be decided by and by, but it ought to be one raised by the free will offerings of this Dominion, which from the Atlantic to the Pacific, as it stands to-day, is a monument to his master hand. In order that it may be a truly national movement—that rich and poor, old and young, male and female, who wish to honor the memory of the departed Chieftain may feel that they can do so, and that at the same time they may be no ostentatious, giving to advertise the donors—we suggest that subscriptions as low as 25c. should be taken and that the limit from any person should be $10. Many a poor man, and many a boy and girl throughout this wide Dominion, will feel it an honor to have a hand in erecting a memorial to Canada's greatest son; while our rich men, who would willingly give liberally to such an object, should stand side by side with their brethren, feeling that in honoring him who gave his life work to the whole people of this Dominion all class distinctions should be sunk.

Until a treasurer of the fund is appointed from amongst the subscribers the Empire will receive and acknowledge subscriptions in these columns, and suggests that other journals throughout the Dominion might do likewise, thus affording facilities for all to contribute.

Acting on the above subscriptions will be received at this office and acknowledged through the columns of THE SUN.

THE SITUATION AT OTTAWA.

(London Free Press.)

Dr. Bourinot, who is recognized as good authority upon constitutional questions, does not look for any necessary disturbance in the course of the present Government by the death of the Premier. As respects the position and duties of Parliament under existing circumstances, he says, they are easily deducted from past experience and analogous cases. This is not likely to be a case when all the Ministers will require to go to their constituencies for re election. It is practically a reconstruction or continuance of the former Ministry, and little or no delay need occur in the transaction of public affairs except that which is absolutely essential for the efficient organization of a Government, even in the formation of an entirely new Ministry. The English House of Commons has become very restless when tedious and prolonged adjournments have been pressed, and have at last felt it necessary to address the Crown and ask for an end of such an injurious and inconvenient delay. The House may, if it thinks expedient, only consent to adjourn from day to day until arrangements for a new Government are completed, but at the times of meeting no question of public policy should be taken up, and the business should be confined to those matters which are absolutely essential and are beyond dispute. At the present juncture, when no progress has been made with private legislation or business of imperative importance, as the end of the financial year is so close at hand, a long adjournment would be impossible. Some allusion has been of late in the press and parliamentary circles to the probability that "a vote of credit," or one on account might be necessary if Parliament should continue to sit beyond June. A vote of credit should not be constitutionally passed under the circumstances, as it is a proceeding only justified in a national emergency when a large public expenditure is necessary, the details for the exact amount of which cannot be stated. Such a vote of credit was given in 1885 to meet the expenses likely to be incurred in putting down the North-west insurrection. A vote on account is a different matter. And might be advantageously used in this country when the circumstances are such as to justify it. In England such votes are quite common, by reason of the financial refunding on the 31st of March, and advances lasping at that date. It is usual then to vote a sum "on account of " certain services detailed in the resolution. One or two months' discussion is generally reserved for the consideration of the balance of the estimates for those particular services, when they are voted at the latter period of the session. In case also of an immediate dissolution both parties may agree to such a vote on account, and no more, as will meet the adequate exigencies of the public service until Parliament reassembles. In Canada balances can be carried over until October by order in council, and the difficulty that would occur in England without a vote on account at times is not so likely to occur. At present we are in no worse position than we were in 1885, when the Appropriation Bill was not assented to until the 20th of July. Of course if the same Bill this year is not likely to become law until a later date, it will be necessary for the Finance Minister to consider the situation seriously, and ask the assistance of the Opposition, following English precedent, to pass such votes in full or "on account" as are absolutely necessary to meet the pressing and important requirements of the public service.

20 Miles to Procure Medicine.

Winfield, Ont,

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville.

DEAR SIR:—Am selling your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" in this locality. I have customers who come 20 miles for the sake of getting Morse's Pills. This speaks for itself as to their value. I use them in our family with "the most satisfactory results." My wife has been cured of sick-headache by their use. We could not do without them.

PASSED AWAY!

SIR JOHN'S GREAT STRUGGLE ENDED.

The Premier Slept Quietly Away.

CANADA IN MOURNING

Expressions of Sympathy From all Parts of the World.

THE FUNERAL AT KINGSTON TO-DAY.

"Be my epitaph writ on my country's mind,
"He served his country and he loved it kind."

It was a scene to be remembered. Although that awful week of agony had prepared the way for the inevitable it was not until the blow had fallen that the people begin to estimate the magnitude of their loss.

Canada without a Premier!

Certainly never in the history of the Dominion had such a dread calamity happened before.

Saturday night was one of those eventful epochs that will live in the annals of history. Sir John Macdonald's death created a profound feeling of genuine sorrow which every loyal Canadian regarded as a personal loss.

The news was first made known to Toronto by Evening Telegram, which was in direct telegraphic communication with the stricken household at Earnscliffe. The hopeless nature of the bulletins issued during the day left no doubt that the end was near, and then when the doctors refused to satisfy the public with any further intelligence of the dying Premier's condition, there was nothing to do but to sit down and silently wait until all was over.

HIS COUNTRY MOURNS HIM.

Death was in the air; and it was with feelings of restless anxiety that the crowds made the hushed inquiry "Any news of Sir John?" Silently the hours drew their dreary length along and still the flame had not flickered. For hours nothing could be obtained from Ottawa beyond the fact that life was slowly ebbing and Sir John might be expected to pass away at any moment. The tension of those agonizing moments was terrible; and now that they are nothing but a memory it is a sad satisfaction to know how well the people esteemed him.

THE END HAD COME.

Suddenly a nervous click of the telegraph gave the alarm, and every nerve was strained to catch the news.

"The end has come. Sir John has passed away. The announcement was made from Earnscliffe at 10.15 o'clock."

Instantly the city was ablaze with excitement as soon as the announcement was made public. It was not until half past ten that the physicians, having satisfied themselves that life was indeed extinct, made the announcement, and a few minutes later the news had been flashed throughout the Dominion.

At that supreme moment excitement reigned supreme. In the darkness of the night flags were run up to half mast, all the church and fire bells tolled their funeral knell, a city mourned and a nation wept.

Eagerly did the public look for news from the capital, and notwithstanding the panic which at once fell upon the telegraphic service a special despatch was with difficulty got through, and before midnight the public were able to learn some particulars of the final death struggle.

"LE ROI EST MORT."

"Gentlemen, Sir John Macdonald is dead. He died at a quarter past ten. He passed away peacefully and quietly!" With a sob in his voice and a lump in his throat this was the announcement which Joseph Pope made to the eager crowd in waiting outside the gates of Earnscliffe. Poor Joseph Pope was choked with emotion. He had been the "old man's" private secretary for seven years, and had learned to love him with the affection of a son. He was powerless to say any more and was led back to the house. A few minutes later this bulletin, the last that would ever be issued, was fastened to the gate:—

Earnscliffe, 10.20 p. m.—Sir John Macdonald died at 10.15 this evening.

(Signed) R. W. Powell, M. D.

After remaining at the abode of death for half an hour, Dr. Powell left for his own residence for the first time since he was summoned to the Premier's bedside on the previous Friday week. The physical strain had been tremendous, but the doctor bore it well. After all was over Dr. Powell said Sir John's death was the most quiet and peaceful he had ever witnessed. Respiration was 36 that afternoon. Death he added, was a certainty from the first, as no human skill could successfully battle with deadly paralysis.

AT THE BEDSIDE.

The scene at the Earnscliffe bedside was one full of pathetic if not historic interest. There was no need to fight the inevitable now. The silent death watch was at an end, and all the loving family was gathered together to await the end. Just after 3 o'clock Dr. Powell noticed that the change had set in which he knew would immediately precede death. The patient's breathing became regular, but the respirations were at longer intervals, the pulsations were feebler, and it was evident that the heart which had fought the approach of death with such superhuman strength would soon cease to throb for ever. The physician stepped over to Lady Macdonald who was silently weeping, holding Sir John's right hand in her own, and informed her that the end was near. This was the summons so long in coming which had come at last.

TO SEE HIM DIE.

The news instantly spread through the house, and all within those walls were summoned to see the Chieftain die. It was a terrible moment. Grouped around the bed-side were the loving wife—soon to be a widow—the Premier's son and Mrs. Hugh Macdonald, Master Jack Macdonald, a grandson, Miss Mary Macdonald, the invalid daughter; Mrs. Macdonald, Mrs. Fitzgibbon, niece of Lady Macdonald, Miss Marjorie Stewart, Hon. E. Dewdney and Mrs. Dewdney, Mr Joseph Pope, the Prime Minister's secretary; Mr. Fred White, ex-private secretary to Sir John and now comptroller of the mounted police; Mr. John Sparks, a relation of Sir John; Dr. Powell, the faithful physician, and Ben Chilton, the Premier's trusted messenger and personal attendant for many years. Lady Macdonald bore up bravely, as indeed did all in the room. Every eye was focused on the dying Premier's face in the unspoken hope that consciousness would flicker but for moment. But it came not. He was unconscious to the last. Swiftly death's messenger bore the dread summons into the room, and Sir John obeyed the call. His soul was ushered into eternity. There was nothing to denote the passage of the fleeting spirit. It was not until they had been informed by Dr. Powell they knew that all was over. Not a flutter or a struggle was there as the old man laid down his life.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S REGRETS.

Under the ocean the news was quickly conveyed to England, and the announcement of Sir John's death was received with universal regret in London and throughout the provinces. Lord Stanley cabled a special message to the Queen at her Highland castle, and her Majesty, in words of womanly and queenly sympathy which she knows so well how to express, sent to Lady Macdonald from Balmoral her deep concern at Sir John's death which she regarded as a great loss to Canada and to the sovereign. Hundreds of messages of sympathy continued to pour in upon Lady Macdonald. The Marquis of Salisbury sent a message of sympathy. Sir Charles Tupper cabled his condolence from the Austrian capital. All the Lieutenant Governors of the Dominion sent messages of sympathy. Lieut. Governor Angers of Quebec and Lieut. Governor Sir Alex. Campbell of Ontario added that they would attend the funeral. Hon. Oliver Mowat wired his sorrow at the death of an old personal friend and promised to attend the funeral.

IN THE REED CHAMBER.

The Dead Premier Lying in State—The Remains Viewed by Thousands.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 9.—Sir John now lies in state in the Senate Chamber. Since 10 o'clock this morning a perfect jam has been about the main entrance. At 5 a. m. a private funeral service was conducted at Earnscliffe, Rev. J. J. Bogart officiating. An hour later the remains were borne to the Senate by six members of the Dominion police. Six carriages, in which were seated relations and warm personal friends, followed. At 10 o'clock the Senate doors were thrown open. Lord Stanely, accompanied by his staff, was the first to enter. As he passed at the catafalque to take a farewell look at the old Chieftain he deposited a beautiful wreath on the casket. Next came the members of the Institute, masters and members of judgment. The scene was an impressive one. Thousands of ladies paid their last tribute to the late Premier. He looks natural in death, and relays of members of parliament are on duty at the bier. The Senate Chamber is artistically draped for the occasion.

The news was received in Orangeville shortly after the sad event occurred, and early Sunday morning flags were floating at half-mast from every flag-staff in town.

The postoffice is draped in mourning, as is also the C. P. R. station and the engines.

In several store windows on Broadway pictures of the deceased Premier are heavily draped with crape.

MR. ABBOTT WILL SEE THE OAKS.

There is no lack of men in the Conservative ranks capable of forming a strong and acceptable Government on the lines of administration pursued by Sir John, any one of whom would receive the cordial and united support of the party in Parliament, and the public may rest assured that whatever selection for the leadership is made the policy of the past will be adhered to. No apprehension need be feared that a crisis in public affairs will occur, or that the continuance of the Conservative party in office will be jeopardized.

It is generally believed that Senator Abbott will be called upon immediately after Sir John's funeral to form a Government.

AN AMERICAN TRIBUTE.

Sir John Macdonald was a statesman of broad intelligence and far sight. It was he, more than any other man, who gave to Canada provincial federation, built the Canadian Pacific Railway, secularized the clergy reserves, remodelled the criminal laws, developed the public school system, reorganized the militia, organized a civil service system, enlarged the canals, enacted a stringent election law and built the Intercolonial Railway. He established direct mail communication by steam with Europe, and last, but not least, he taught Canada the principles of protection in 1878, carried an election on that issue, redeemed his country from poverty to prosperity, and gave it the present protective system of duties, the workings of which have kept his party in power ever since.—New York Press.

VANATTER.

WEDDING.—A very pleasing event occurred on Tuesday, June 2nd, at the residence of Mrs. Morrow, con. 14, the occasion being the marriage of his daughter, Miss Annie, to Mr. John Canawin, of Caledon. The Rev. J. J. Elliott, B. A., of Hillsburg tied the silken knot in the presence of the invited guests. The bride who was tastefully attired looked charming, and was assisted by Miss Canawin, sister of the groom, while Mr. Morrow, brother of the bride, acted as groomsman. The presents were numerous and costly and testified to the popularity of the bride, and those who have had the pleasure of knowing Miss Morrow here sincerely regret that she is to become a Caledonite. Mr. and Mrs. Canawin carry with them the best wishes of all for their future happiness.

WEDDING BELLS.—On Wednesday evening last week the residence of John Walker, Esq., was the scene of a very happy event, being the marriage of his daughter, Miss Jessie, to Mr. Walton H. King, of Amaranth. Rev. Mr. Leonard performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate relatives and a few invited friends of the bride and bridegroom. The bride was handsomely attired in a gown of fawn colored cashmere, and was attended by Miss Maggie Hoar, while the groom was supported by Mr. Geo. Walker, brother of the bride. After a sumptuous wedding dinner had been served in good style, the happy couple took their departure for their home in Amaranth. The wedding was a pleasant one, and the bride received a beautiful lot of presents, and hearty good wishes and congratulations were tendered to both Mr. and Mrs. King on their union.

BOWLING GREEN.

WARM RAIN.—The recent rains did a great deal of good, but the crops are suffering for want of more rain.

BARN RAISINGS.—Barn raisings and and logging bees will soon be the order of the day. Bagsfull of fun soon.

GOING TO TOWN.—A large number of our residents intend taking in the Sons of Ireland demonstration at Orangeville on Saturday.

RUNAWAY.—Mr. Hugh Fennel's spirited and fiery team took a dash around the block the other day, but, fortunately, little damage was done. Two many oats, Hugh.

BASEBALL.—All the work is over now, but the boys seem to be too lazy to organize a baseball or football club. Baseball should have the call, and our boys are hustlers if they only think so. Get up and let us paralyze the community!

BICYCLE CLUB.—The latest organization in Bowling Green is a bicycle club. At present, however, there is only one member, Jimmy L—, a pedagogue from Salem. Jimmy needs to be careful and should not fool with the infernal machine, as it is very dangerous sometimes.

HAPPY EVENT.—A very pleasant event was consummated at the residence of Mrs. Connor on Tuesday morning last when her youngest daughter, Miss Martha, was married to Mr. Arthur Rounding. Rev. Mr. Meek performed the ceremony in the presence of a few friends. The happy couple drove to Orangeville, followed by the best wishes of everybody. The newly wedded couple will reside at Bowling Green.

TARBERT.

BREVITIES.—News is pretty scarce around here just now.....The late rains have benefitted the crops wonderfully... Who's the correspondent?

CAN'T AFFORD IT.—Those Bowling Green juveniles are still alive although they cannot all afford to sport covered buggies every Sunday night. It is not very pleasant to walk from church when somebody else rides, is it George?

DIDN'T BITE.—Not very many of Tarbertites went to the "monster" celebration at Orangeville on the 25th, but our pedagogue was among the number who bit and he had such a good time that he left the greater part of an X. in the county town.

SHOOTING RABBITS.—By chance it has come to our ears that some of the Tarbert youths are in the habit of shooting any rabbits they come across while gunning. This is unlawful and no true sport would do such a thing. We would not like to see the boys exposed or punished, but we would like to see the bunnies protected outside the lawful season. Law abiding citizens hope to see the practice stopped right away for they want a chance when the season comes around again.

The council then adjourned to meet on the last Friday in July, at the hour of 10 o'clock a.m.

ANDREW HENRY, Clerk.

SHELBURNE.

(Free Press and Economist.)

Mrs. James Hudd, of Horsings Mill, died suddenly on Wednesday morning. We have not heard the particulars.

Mr. Henry Duckworth, of East Luther, near Keldon, was engaged logging on Tuesday when a log fell on him and broke both bones of his left leg. He was attended by Dr. Norton, of Shelburne.

It is expected that the Bell Telephone Co. will commence operations next week putting up the new line from Orangeville to Wiarton. There will be a branch line from Flesherton Station to Durham and Holstein.

Last Saturday John Anderson, aged about 20, son of Mr Chas. Anderson, Lot 18 Con. 1, Amaranth, was driving a team of horses attached to a waggon upon which were a number of boards, when the horses took fright and ran away. The young man was badly injured, sustaining bruises about the head and chest and having one knee joint laid bare. Dr. Rolstin, who attended him, says he will recover, but that the injured knee may become permanently stiff.

Last Thursday as Mr. Wm. Collins, painter, of Shelburne, was working in the Presbyterian Church, Horsings Mills, papering the ceiling, &c., he met with a painful accident, by which both bones of his left arm were broken just above the wrist, and his left eye severely bruised. He does not know how it happened, but supposes that while with a strip of pasted paper, he was ascending a step ladder to a temporary scaffold his weight caused it to slip. A piece of scantling struck him on the side of the head, knocking him down and rendering him insensible, and the whole thing falling on him with above results, besides bruising his leg considerable. Dr. Reid set the broken arm and dressed the other injuries.

CANADA IN MOURNING

Expressions of Sympathy From all Parts of the World.

THE FUNERAL AT KINGSTON TO-DAY.

"He my epitaph writ on my country's mind,
"He served his country and he loved mankind."

It was a scene to be remembered. Although that awful week of agony had prepared the way for the inevitable it was not until the blow had fallen that the people begin to estimate the magnitude of their loss.

Canada without a Premier!

Certainly never in the history of the Dominion had such a dread calamity happened before.

Saturday night was one of those eventful epochs that will live in the annals of history. Sir John Macdonald's death created a profound feeling of genuine sorrow which every loyal Canadian regarded as a personal loss.

The news was first made known to Toronto by Evening Telegram, which was in direct telegraphic communication with the stricken household at Earnscliffe. The hopeless nature of the bulletins issued during the day left no doubt that the end was near, and then when the doctors refused to satisfy the public with any further intelligence of the dying Premier's condition, there was nothing to do but to sit down and silently wait until all was over.

HIS COUNTRY MOURNS HIM.

Death was in the air; and it was with feelings of restless anxiety that the crowds made the hushed inquiry "Any news of Sir John?" Silently the hours drew their dreary length along and still the flame had not flickered. For hours nothing could be obtained from Ottawa beyond the fact that life was slowly ebbing and Sir John might be expected to pass away at any moment. The tension of those agonizing moments was terrible; and now that they are nothing but a memory it is a sad satisfaction to know how well the people esteemed him.

THE END HAD COME.

Suddenly a nervous click of the telegraph gave the alarm, and every nerve was strained to catch the news.

"The end has come. Sir John has passed away. The announcement was made from Earnscliffe at 10.15 o'clock."

Instantly the city was ablaze with excitement as soon as the announcement was made public. It was not until half past ten that the physicians, having satisfied themselves that life was indeed extinct, made the announcement, and a few minutes later the news had been flashed throughout the Dominion.

At that supreme moment excitement reigned supreme. In the darkness of the night flags were run up to half mast, all the church and fire bells tolled their funeral knell, a city mourned and a nation wept.

Eagerly did the public look for news from the capital, and notwithstanding the panic which at once fell upon the telegraphic service a special despatch was with difficulty got through, and before midnight the public were able to learn some particulars of the final death struggle.

"LE ROI EST MORT."

"Gentlemen, Sir John Macdonald is dead. He died at a quarter past ten. He passed away peacefully and quietly!" With a sob in his voice and a lump in his throat this was the announcement which Joseph Pope made to the eager crowd in waiting outside the gates of Earnscliffe. Poor Joseph Pope was choked with emotion. He had been the "old man's" private secretary for seven years, and had learned to love him with the affection of a son. He was powerless to say any more and was led back to the house. A few minutes later this sad news was on each and all the loving family was gathered together in death the end. Just after 8 o'clock Dr. Par all noticed that the strange lead not in which he knew would immediately precede death. The patient's breathing became regular, but the respirations were at longer intervals, the pulsations were feebler, and it was evident that the heart which had fought the approaches of death with such superhuman strength would soon cease to think for ever. The physician stepped over to Lady Macdonald who was silently weeping, holding Sir John's right hand in her own, and informed her that the end was near. This was the summons so long in coming which had come at last.

TO SEE HIM DIE.

The news instantly spread through the home, and all within those walls were summoned to see the Chieftain die. It was a terrible moment. Grouped around the bed-side were the loving wife—soon to be a widow—the Premier's son and Mrs. Hugh Macdonald, Master Jack Macdonald, a grandson, Miss Mary Macdonald, the invalid daughter; Mrs. Macdonald, Mrs. Fitzgibbon, nieces of Lady Macdonald, Miss Marjorie Stewart, Hon. E. Dewdney and Mrs. Dewdney, Mr Joseph Pope, the Prime Minister's secretary; Mr. Fred White, ex-private secretary to Sir John and now comptroller of the mounted police; Mr. John Sparks, a relation of Sir John; Dr. Powell, the faithful physician, and Ben Chilton, the Premier's trusted messenger and personal attendant for many years. Lady Macdonald bore up bravely, as indeed did all in the room. Every eye was focused on the dying Premier's face in the unspoken hope that consciousness would flicker but for moment. But it came not. He was unconscious to the last. Swiftly death's messenger bore the dread summons into the room, and Sir John obeyed the call. His soul was ushered into eternity. There was nothing to denote the passage of the fleeting spirit. It was not until they had been informed by Dr. Powell they knew that all was over. Not a flutter or a struggle was there as the old man laid down his life.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S REGRETS.

Under the ocean the news was quickly conveyed to England, and the announcement of Sir John's death was received with universal regret in London and throughout the provinces. Lord Stanley cabled a special message to the Queen at her Highland castle, and her Majesty, in words of womanly and queenly sympathy which she knows so well how to express, sent to Lady Macdonald from Balmoral her deep concern at Sir John's death which she regarded as a great loss to Canada and to the sovereign. Hundreds of messages of sympathy continued to pour in upon Lady Macdonald. The Marquis of Salisbury sent a message of sympathy. Sir Charles Tupper cabled his condolence from the Austrian capital. All the Lieutenant Governors of the Dominion sent messages of sympathy. Lieut. Governor Angers of Quebec and Lieut. Governor Sir Alex. Campbell of Ontario added that they would attend the funeral. Hon. Oliver Mowat wired his sorrow at the death of an old personal friend and promised to attend the funeral.

IN THE RED CHAMBER.

The Dead Premier Lying in State—The Remains Viewed by Thousands.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 9.—Sir John now lies in state in the Senate Chamber. Since 10 o'clock this morning a perfect jam has been about the main entrance. At 5 a. m. a private funeral service was conducted at Earnscliffe, Rev. J. J. Bogart officiating. An hour later the remains were bourne to the Senate by six members of the Dominion police. Six carriages, in which were seated relations and warm personal friends, followed. At 10 o'clock the Senate doors were thrown open. Lord Stanely, accompanied by his staff, was the first to enter. As he passed at the catafalque to take a farewell look at the old Chieftain he deposited a beautiful wreath on the casket. Next came the members of the two Houses of administration formed by Sir John, any one of whom would receive the cordial and united support of the party in Parliament and the public. It is generally believed that whatever select one for the leadership is made the policy of the past will be adhered to. No apprehension need be feared that a crisis in public affairs will occur, so that the continuance of the Conservative party in office will be jeopardised.

It is generally believed that Senator Abbott will be called upon immediately after Sir John's funeral to form a Government.

AN AMERICAN TRIBUTE.

Sir John Macdonald was a statesman of broad intelligence and far sight. It was he, more than any other man, who gave to Canada provincial federation, built the Canadian Pacific Railway, secularized the clergy reserves, remodelled the criminal laws, developed the public school system, reorganized the militia, organized a civil service system, enlarged the canals, enacted a stringent election law and built the Intercolonial Railway. He established direct mail communication by steam with Europe, and last, but not least, he taught Canada the principles of protection in 1878, carried an election on that issue, redeemed his country from poverty to prosperity, and gave to the present protective system of duties the workings of which have kept his party in power ever since.—New York Press.

YANATTER.

WEDDING.—A very pleasing event occurred on Tuesday, June 2nd, at the residence of Mrs. Morrow, con. 14, the occasion being the marriage of his daughter, Miss Annie, to Mr. John Canawin, of Caledon. The Rev. J. J. Elliott, B. A., of Hillsburg tied the silken knot in the presence of the invited guests. The bride who was tastefully attired looked charming, and was assisted by Miss Canawin, sister of the groom, while Mr. Morrow, brother of the bride, acted as groomsman. The presents were numerous and costly and testified to the popularity of the bride, and those who have had the pleasure of knowing Miss Morrow here sincerely regret that she is to become a Caledonite. Mr. and Mrs. Canawin carry with them the best wishes of all for their future happiness.

WEDDING BELLS.—On Wednesday evening last week the residence of John Walker, Esq., was the scene of a very happy event, being the marriage of his daughter, Miss Jessie, to Mr. Walton H. King, of Amaranth. Rev. Mr. Leonard performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate relatives and a few invited friends of the bride and bridegroom. The bride was handsomely attired in a gown of fawn colored cashmere, and was attended by Miss Maggie Hoar, while the groom was supported by Mr. Geo. Walker, brother of the bride. After a sumptuous wedding dinner had been served in good style, the happy couple took their departure for their home in Amaranth. The wedding was a pleasant one, and the bride received a beautiful lot of presents, and hearty good wishes and congratulations were tendered to both Mr. and Mrs. King on their union.

BOWLING GREEN.

WANT RAIN.—The recent rains did a great deal of good, but the crops are suffering for want of more rain.

BARN RAISINGS.—Barn raisings and and logging bees will soon be the order of the day. Bagstuff of fun soon.

GOING TO TOWN.—A large number of our residents intend taking in the Sons of Ireland demonstration at Orangeville on Saturday.

RUNAWAY.—Mr. Hugh Fennel's spirited and fiery team took a dash around the block the other day, but, fortunately, little damage was done. Two many oats, Hugh.

BASEBALL.—All the work is over now, but the boys seem to be too lazy to organize a baseball or football club. Baseball should have the call, and our boys are hustlers if they only think so. Get up and let us paralyze the community!

BICYCLE CLUB.—The latest organization in Bowling Green is a bicycle club. At present, however, there is only one member, Jimmy L—, a pedagogue from Salem. Jimmy needs to be careful and should not fool with the infernal machine, as it is very dangerous sometimes.

HAPPY EVENT.—A very pleasant event was consummated at the residence of Mrs. Connor on Tuesday morning last when her youngest daughter, Miss Martha, was married to Mr. Arthur Rounding. Rev. Mr. Meek performed the ceremony in the presence of a few friends. The happy couple drove to Orangeville, followed by the best wishes of everybody. The newly wedded couple will reside at Bowling Green.

TARBERT.

BREVITIES.—News is pretty scarce around here just now..... The late rains have benefitted the crops wonderfully... Who's the correspondent?

CAN'T AFFORD IT.—Those Bowling Green juveniles are still alive although they cannot all afford to sport covered buggies every Sunday night. It is not very pleasant to walk from church when somebody else rides, is it George?

DIDN'T BITE.—Not very many of Tarbertites went to the "monster" celebration at Orangeville on the 25th, but our pedagogue was among the number who bit and he had such a good time that he left the greater part of an X. in the county town.

SHOOTING RABBITS.—By chance it has come to our ears that some of the Tarbert youths are in the habit of shooting any rabbits they come across while gunning. This is unlawful and no true sport would do such a thing. We would not like to see the boys exposed or punished, but we would like to see the bunnies protected outside the lawful season. Law abiding citizens hope to see the practice stopped right away for they want a chance when the season comes around again.

The Key Stone.

REGULAR action of the bowels is the keystone of health. The use of B.B.B. insures it and cures constipation, dyspepsia, etc.

Miss F. Williams, 445 Bloor Street, Toronto, writes: "Have used your Burdock Blood Bitters for constipation and pain in the head with great success. I improved from the second dose."

Superphosphates Land Fertilizer, highly recommended, and in connection with same a prize of $75.00 will be given for best acre of potatoes. Only a few sacks received.

SHELBURNE.

(Free Press and Economist.)

Mrs. James Hudd, of Hornings Mill, died suddenly on Wednesday morning. We have not heard the particulars.

Mr. Henry Duckworth, of East Luther, near Keldon, was engaged logging on Tuesday when a log fell on him and broke both bones of his left leg. He was attended by Dr. Norton, of Shelburne.

It is expected that the Bell Telephone Co. will commence operations next week putting up the new line from Orangeville to Wiarton. There will be a branch line from Flesherton Station to Durham and Holstein.

Last Saturday John Anderson, aged about 20, son of Mr Chas. Anderson, Lot 18 Con. 1, Amaranth, was driving a team of horses attached to a waggon upon which were a number of boards, when the horses took fright and ran away. The young man was badly injured, sustaining bruises about the head and chest and having one knee joint laid bare. Dr. Rolstin, who attended him, says he will recover, but that the injured knee may become permanently stiff.

Last Thursday at Mr. Wm. Collins, painter, of Shelburne, was working in the Presbyterian Church, Hornings Mills, papering the ceiling, as he met with a painful accident, by which both bones of his left arm were broken just above the wrist, and his left eye severely bruised. He does not know how it happened, but supposes that while with a strip of pasted paper, he was mounting a step ladder to a temporary scaffold his weight caused it to slip. A piece of mantling struck him on the side of the head, knocking him down and rendering him insensible, and the whole thing falling on him with above results, besides bruising his leg considerable. Dr. Reid set the broken arm and dressed the other injuries.

A DULL DAY.—Probably the dullest day at any session of the county court was that of the June session, which was held on Tuesday. The only case on the docket was that of Griffiths & Co. of Toronto against T. S. Emery of this town and it was settled out of court. The jurymen had no work to do but draw their pay.

YOUNG DIAMONDS DEFEATED.—On Saturday last the Young Diamond baseball club, a juvenile organization of this town, went to Erin to play a similar club of that place. The Erinites were declared winners by a score of 15 to 20.

JIMMY FINED.—The much adjourned assault case of Nightwatchman Parkin against James Kelly was finally disposed of at Monday's police court. P. M. Pattullo and Justice of the Peace Max Kinnon were on the bench. THISTLES THUMPED.—The Thistles of Fergus played their first match from home this season at Mt. Forest on Tuesday. At the start the Fergus boys went in with a rush and before the astonished Lornes could take in the situation Fergus had two games to its credit. The Lornes pulled themselves together and captured the next four, thus winning the match by 4 games to 2. Mt. Forest will doubtless capture the pennant again.

A wide circle of friends extend the happy couple sincere congratulations, to which the Sun cordially joins.—O. B. Sun. The fair bride was a former resident of this town, and her many friends here wish her every happiness in her new sphere.

RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.—On Sunday evening last a team of horses attached to one of Liveryman Neil's carriages ran away on Mill street and completely demolished the vehicle. Several ladies had just got out of the carriage a few minutes before the accident took place, and it is fortunate that they did so, for if they had remained in it is more than probable none of them would have been killed. Robert Somerville, the driver, was thrown out and received a severe shaking up, but otherwise escaped unhurt. The rig was so badly broken up that it is not worth repairing, and Mr Neil, if he sustains the loss, will be out about $40. The horses ran about two miles before they were captured.

"RAISED" BILLS.—The tellers at the town banks have detected one or two "raised" bills which were presented at the banks lately. The "raising," which is rather cleverly executed, can easily be detected if a person takes time to look at the bill. The government legal which reads, "The Dominion of Canada will pay to bearer Two Dollars" is altered by means of pen and ink, to read, "The Dominion of Canada will pay to bearer Ten Dollars." There are no bills issued reading, the "Hamilton Bank." All genuine bills read, "The Bank of Hamilton," and all of their $10 bills have the lithographed signature and portrait of the late president, Mr. D. McInnes. The "raised" bills, as in all $2 bills of that issue, have the portrait of Lord and Lady Lansdowne.

HONESTY THE BEST POLICY.—Sheriff Bowles and the assistant gaoler were in town on Wednesday night, having with them an old man named J. Kirkland, aged 73, who was convicted of setting fire to his barn to obtain about $800 insurance at the last Dufferin assizes and sentenced to three years in penitentiary. He was placed in Modeland's castle one night and taken to Kingston next morning by the 8 o'clock train. Greed for money must have led him to commit the crime as the foolish old sinner was not in want, as he is the owner of three hundred acres of land near Orangeville, which will now have to be sold to pay his law expenses, and the $800 back to the insurance company. He was promptly paid the insurance money before suspicion was aroused that he had set it on fire.—Brampton Times.

A DONKEY'S TRICKS.—Mr. G. B. Ryan owns a donkey which is the pet of his little children. On Sunday evening the family went out and neglected to close the back door of the house. The donkey seized upon the opportunity to inspect the interior of the residence. He entered the kitchen and passed from one room to another, knocking over the furniture and causing general havoc. It wound up its tour of inspection by running its head through the parlor window. It then found itself in a trap from which it could not extricate itself and was compelled to stand there. A couple of gentlemen one of whom is a knight of the baton on driving past the house noticed the animal and went in to see what was the matter. They found affairs as related in the foregoing; and took it upon themselves to remove the donkey. They had considerable difficulty in getting the donkey out of the house.—Guelph Herald.

THE 1ST AT GRAND VALLEY.—The 1st of July 1891 will be celebrated at Grand Valley in elegant style. Below is a list of the prizes to be given: Free for all $225 00; Three minute class $100 00; Free for all Run, $80 00; Green Run, $25.00; Green Trot, $25 00; Three year old Trot, $25 00; all harness Races open to trotters and pacers. There will also be a Lacrosse match, Football match, men's one and two hundred yard Race, Boys under 16 years 100 yd Race, Three legged Race, Boat race, putting the shoulder stone and several other attractions. A quadrille band will be in attendance. Grand Valley has always been to the front with a good program for the 1st July and this year is no exception to the rule. The Race track is one of the best in Canada and never was in as good shape as at present, and the handsome purse of $225 offered for the free for all trot and pace will without doubt attract a number of the best horses in the country. Bay Fly will have to go fast to take a place among the good ones that day.

A HEAVY LOSS.—Mr. Jas. Cavanagh clerk of Proton township, has recently lost his 200 acres of land. About three years ago, he consented to endorse a note for 3 months for $400, for an acquaintance. As there were two others on the note, and the maker was supposed to be perfectly safe, there did not appear to be any risk. He afterward made enquiries, and was told the note was paid at maturity. Recently a suit was entered against him for the face of the note and costs, amounting to over $600. A small mortgage lay against the land, and this it seems was purchased by the holder of the note, and last week the land was sold. Mr Cavanagh claims that he could have raised the money if sufficient time had been given him, but as it is, the two farms are his no longer. He will have the deepest sympathy of his neighbors in his loss. Under any circumstances, it is hard for a man to lose all he has and be turned out on a cold, selfish world, but at Mr. Cavanagh's age it is worse, especially as it is the result of an act of kindness performed for another.—Dundalk Herald.

HYMENIAL.—One of the most pleasant events of the season was that of the wedding which took place Wednesday evening, the principal parties being Mr. Albert J. Peppiatt of Toronto Junction and Miss Ella Babe, daughter of ex Alderman Babe, merchant, 1380 Queen street west. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. F. German, M. A. The bridesmaids were Miss Etta Stoddart and Miss Annie Babe, while the groom was supported by Messrs. Geo. Doran and Phillip Peppiatt. The bride was attired in cream cashmere trimmed with brocaded satin and carried in her hand a most beautiful basket of flowers, a present from Master Stanley Peppiatt, a nephew of the groom; while the bridesmaids wore cream cashmere primmed with cream satin and carried large bouquets. After the ceremony was concluded and the many guests had partaken of the good things then provided, a very pleasant time was spent congratulating the young couple, inspecting the beautiful presents and having a general good time until about 1 o'clock, when the groom and his bride, amid a shower of rice and good wishes, left for their home in Toronto Junction.—Toronto Western Leader. The father of the bride, Mr. T. Babe, was for two years a member of the Parkdale council, previous to latter's annexation to the city of Toronto, and for over six years has been carrying on a very successful business in the St Albans ward, Toronto. The majority of the readers of THE SUN will remember when he carried on a general business in the Ketchum block in Orangeville. The happy groom referred to in the above as junior partner of the firm of W. J. & A. J. Peppiatt, real estate agents and contractors of Toronto Junction. Last year he had a very fine and spacious residence put up for himself at Toronto Junction to which the young couple have gone to occupy. THE SUN extends its congratulations.

The funeral took place on Monday afternoon to the Town cemetery, Orangeville, and was largely attended. Rev. A. Henderson, M. A., pastor of St. Mark's church, Orangeville, conducted the religious services.

At a meeting held this week one of the councillmen stated that insinuations were abroad that the fires were started by members of the fire brigade in order that might get extra pay.

The president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Sir George Stevens has been created a Peer by Her Majesty's Government, under the title of Lord Mount Stephen. What Sir George has done for Canada, except to nicely feather his nest at our expense, it is hard to say. If Her Majesty's Imperial Government fancies it is honoring Canada by creating a bran new titled aristocracy for us they are sadly mistaken. We do not want any such snobbery here, and don't care for more for lords and baronets than we do for people who know how to behave themselves decently, generally.—Parry Sound Star. That's logic, gentlemen, we can do without snobbery!
